V.U. STUDENT FLIES HIGH

By CATHY LOMBARDOZI

Villanova's own Becky Dickinson will be representing the Villanova community in the upcoming ACU-I National Woman's Frisbee Championships in mid-April. Becky won that right by finishing first in the Region III ACU-I (Association of College Unions — International) competitions held February 17th in New Jersey and for her efforts gets an all-expense paid trip to compete in the fifteen Region National Finals in Georgia. She was one of three women's frisbee representatives and one of seventeen Villanova experts sent to the Regionals to compete in Backgammon, Men's Billiards, Men's Bowling, and Men's and Women's Frisbee after winning campus tournaments early this semester.

Our other competitors included Michael Lague and Paul Mariani (Backgammon); Tom Barbieri and Cliff Harwick (Billiards); Bob Bonapace, Mike Coveney, Ron Geida (finished 5th overall), Greg Genovese, Charles Piumafreddo, Charles Pomek and Bob Zirpoli (Bowling); Myron Diaz, Ken Silverwood and Ted Danos (finished third, fourth, and fifth respectively in Men's Frisbee); and Kathy Husbands and Carol Inguaggiato (finished second and third in Women's Frisbee).

The ACU-I campus tournaments are sponsored by the Recreation Committee of the Villanova Union under the direction of chairperson Charles Pomek. Look forward to future tournaments, and in the meantime, join us in wishing Becky Dickinson the best of luck.

UNION PLANS AN IRISH GALA

The Clancy Brothers, Pat, Tom, and Bobby have been performing together for many years. During this time, they've made thirty-two record albums and performed extensively throughout the United States, Canada, Australia, and the British Isles. Along with their nephew, Robert O'Connell (who joined them in 1977), they have built up a devoted following wherever they have gone.

On stage, the Clancy Brothers create a musical portrait of the Irish, their troubles, their glories, their triumphs and their follies. However, their music goes beyond that and reaches out to all men, wherever they come from, whoever they may be. As Peter Hamill of "The New York Daily News" says: "The Clancy's, like all good ones, tell us something about ourselves. I suspect this is because they have done their research in the best of all places: the human heart . . . They sing of emotions that move all men."

And now, on Saturday, March 17 (ST. PATRICK'S DAY!) this Irish group will perform in the Field House at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale at CIC and all Ticketron locations. Tickets are reserved and are priced at $7.50 and $6.50. Also appearing will be Cozy Morley, that impish leprechaun of laughter.

O'Dwyer Country Club Closes

By HELEN O'ROURKE
and COLEEN CORCORAN

By now I am sure everyone knows that the little yellow dorm situated strategically between the infirmary and the wombat house is to become a women's dorm beginning next semester. To many (all the girls on campus) this comes as good news, to others (the 60 men that are living there now) this comes as bad news. Be it good or bad, it is still the ending of an era. O'Dwyer Country Club that exclusive male establishment is closing down. But is it? Only time will tell if its reputation for fun and frolic will be upheld.

This change over, although painful to many, was necessary in order to increase the number of women on campus. As the percentage of women that enroll in Villanova increases so must the percentage of women housed on campus.

The question that now arises is what lucky girls will live in O'Dwyer. The men residing in O'Dwyer now are presently holding interviews for perspective occupants of their rooms. The criteria or selection varies from room to room according to the residents. Without mentioning any names certain rooms such as the infamous number two is being particularly selective in choosing its next years occupants due to its fashionable interior.

Although the residents firmly believe this is how the proper selection process should be run the Dean of Women's office holds a different opinion. For while these 60 occupants of O'Dwyer are holding their interviews the Dean's office is running the lottery. So for all you girls who have gone through your first interview SURPRISE, SURPRISE, it is of no avail. For it is that lucky number that you draw in the lottery which will determine your membership in the infamous O'Dwyer Country Club. Good Luck!

For all those who have been keeping their weight down because the walk over to Stanford's Pizza Palace was too much, start loosening your belts. Sullivan's Pizza Palace is now open every night from 7 p.m. - 1 a.m.

The Student Government Association...

Vote On Election Day

To the Students of Villanova:

Once again we are closing in on the mark of Student Elections. It is a frenzied and chaotic time of the year. Student candidates for Senator or President embark on political campaigns that leave little time for anything else. Midnight meetings are held to discuss strategies and plans that will culminate with the results on election day.

Students often assume that election to an office is also an election to power. This is a fallacy if taken in the literal sense. The only power that a senator receives upon election is the opportunity that allows for informal and regular meetings with administrators and faculty members. These confrontations facilitate the discussion of community concerns. Although the opportunity exists to break the barriers of communication, much more is needed than a few individuals voicing their interest.

The real power to change lies in the individual student whether he or she be a senator or not. This power becomes magnified as the students collectively assemble. History has proven this point a number of times. Individuals can only make limited change unless the entire represented sector is behind him or her.

If a Student Representative wants to work effectively, he or she must solidify the support of his or her constituency. This support is generated through election day and the number of voters turned out. The greater the voting turnout, the greater the confidence of the senator. When the students demonstrate the need for representation, as they can on election day, the winner of the election can claim the right of representing a majority of his college.

As you can see it is extremely important that students voice their opinions by voting on election day. Elections will be held for the undergraduate colleges on Thursday, March 22, 1979, from 9:00 to 5:00. I cannot stress the importance of your vote. Please help yourself by helping us.

VOTE ON ELECTION DAY, THURSDAY, MARCH 22, 1979.

SGA Elections

Time For A Constructive Change

Today we present the election supplement to the Villanovan, the annual introduction of candidates for Student Government Association offices. And today, campaigns prepare to blossom into full swing, posters begin to blanket walls, names begin to surface in endless repetition.

We are surprised at the number of candidates seeking election this year. Not that the ballots will be overflowing with names. But in view of the SGA's relative dormancy this year, it seems surprising that these 20 candidates even remembered that student government exists at Villanova.

There are, apparently, two explanations for the turnout — either our hopeful representatives have witnessed the ineffectiveness of this year's SGA and feel it is time for a constructive change, or they have discovered that being a Senator can be a pretty good job (as long as nobody expects a lot from you).

We hope, of course, that their intentions are noble, that these candidates are asking for votes with the belief that, if elected, they can put together an effective organization to voice student views. The voter going to the polls on Thursday should look for candidates not only with knowledge of Villanova and its idiosyncracies, its bureaucracy, but for candidates with desire, the sincere desire to make Villanova's student government work. It is always hard to separate true sincerity from empty campaign promises, but the voter must try.

It is possible, of course, that some of those listed on the ballot have realized that being an elected student government official is not a bad thing to have on your resume when you're looking for entrance to law school or a job. And being a Senator isn't all that bad — after all, you get to dress up for the Senate meetings, get your own mailbox and might (if you're lucky) even have Fr. Driscoll call you by your first name. Hard to pass up. Once you're in office, you can get away without doing all that much — oh, you might have to endure some threats of impeachment, but chances are your term will be up by the time anybody got around to being serious.

Perhaps, then, the ultimate responsibility for the actions of those elected on Thursday lies with the student body. We must demand accountability of our representatives. We must not be content to say that student government cannot work, we must demand that it work. We must insist that those elected live up to their promises and do not settle into a comfortable job.

Select candidates that you believe are sincere in their desire to change Villanova where change is necessary and then watch them, holding them responsible next year. Do not be content with a dormant student government for another year. We cannot afford it.

RA Directors

Dear Editor,

The bewilderment concerning the record setting RA turnover and the proposed budget increase can be helped by bringing some recent history back for public scrutiny. In accompaniment with this information will be observations made during my tenure as an RA in Stanford Hall 420B.

Last year the Resident Staff Director and a Programming Director were added to the Dean of Men's staff. These men were Jeff Quinn and Gene Shaffer respectively. Both these men receive full faculty pay and benefits. There are only sixteen universities in this country that employ people in these capacities. There are job descriptions for these positions but they were not made available to me when I requested them. The apparent purpose of a Resident Staff Director is to free the Dean of Men from his responsibility as the direct overseer of 32 RA's and their four area coordinators. This was done so that the Dean would have more time for other University related activities. The apparent purpose of the Programming Director is to approve resident student sponsored activities, and to re-establish the Free University. While I am sure there are other aspects of University life for which these men are responsible, the above job descriptions depict their essential duties.

It is my estimation that Jeff Quinn does not possess the emotional maturity that is necessary to professionally perform his duties. I do not want to bore you by listing all the examples of his need to pass moral judgements and his repeated, obviously petty, abuse of our institutional process. But I would like to bring to life the fact that he thinks it is necessary to get out there himself and scrape the parking stickers off the cars of RA's that have left the program. When someone like Jeff is in a position to cloud the Dean's decision making process, it is quite easy to see where things would appear to be amiss.

Gene Shaffer is a first rate person but it is in my estimation that his job could be performed equally well by an energetic work student. There were three or four times that I had chance to see Gene about something in his office, and in each instance he was playing his version of tiddlywinks.

Does the Dean of Men really need this help?

Sincerely,
Jerry Ryan

Visitation Policy

Dear Sir:

In September of '79 the Board of Trustees will convene to evaluate the experimental visitation policy. The decision rendered will either favor a visitation policy or terminate it. When considering this question, I ask the Board to deal only in the realm of the proposed enigma and the proportionality of its implications.

The preponderance of the Board's inquiry should be whether it is appropriate for males and females to visit each other in their respective dorms. The crux of the matter at hand does not pertain to whether or not such a policy is a beneficial selling point for Villanova; nor does it relate ot the speculation of motives students might have in embarking on a sojourn to visit their fellow undergrads.

It is realized that the Board is one which is deeply rooted in Christian tradition. Furthermore, while Christianity believes that each individual has the right to self development, they also rely on the credence that man is in need of authoritarian guidance. However, the interpretation of authoritarian guidance to mean Dictorial guidance is a relatively modern phenomena and one which is based erroneously in modern Christian thought. To amend this concept, and thus give an accurate perception of the term authoritarian guidance, entails the depiction of this expression as a discerning guide.

Hopefully, the Board will adhere to my request and stay within the boundaries of the query and their role as discerning guides for our Chirstian morality. Should they do so, their conclusion will envitably merit, the respect of every visitor, and will allow the compliance with moral standards with regard to a visitation policy to rest in the palms of the individual.

Such an action could only benefit Villanovans in their preparation for life and offer them a proper perspective of their responsibilities in this anti-Victorian era in which we live.

Nursing Students

Dear Sir,

I was rather disturbed when I read that Nursing students do not have to study. I sincerely hope that this remark was a misquote. I for one know of eight Junior Nursing students who were given a nursing care written assignment to be handed in on Feb. 22nd at 8 a.m. If this assignment was done correctly and most of them were, they had plenty to keep them busy. If you ask these particular students I think they will verify this. I will be more than happy to supply their names if they will permit me to do so.

Sincerely,
Kay Bolger

What is the N.C.A.A.? Did you know that Villanova won the National Collegiate Championship in track? Do you think the track team has enough recognition? Do you know anyone on the team?

Ed Plumacher — Freshman

"No, I don't know what N.C.A.A. stands for, but I did know Villanova track won the championship. I don't think the track team gets enough money or the support they deserve. Yes, I do know guys on the team but I don't have time to go to the meets because I'm pledging."

Lisa Linsky — Sophomore

"No, I've never heard of it and I didn't know that we won. I definitely think they should have more recognition because we won and I didn't even know about it. I did know someone on the team last year but I don't know if he's still on it."

Becky Horstmann — Senior

"Yes, Villanova track came in first in the N.C.A.A. No way do they get enough recognition! We need a booster club or something because no one hears about the track meets. No I don't know anyone on the team, and I've only been to one meet; I'd go to more but I don't usually know when they are."

David L. Scarpa — Senior

"No, I dont know what it is and I didn't know that they won. I think that the people really interested in track have enough exposure to it; but as far as the rest of the people on campus are concerned, they don't hear as much about it as basketball or football. No, I've never been to a track meet."

Graduation Party Vandalism

To: The Class of 1979

Do you remember the '79 Days Till Graduation Party" held at the Covered Wagon, when the entire Senior Class had the opportunity to go wild?

For all of you who attended, hopefully this night proved to be a very memorable occasion and made you realize how worthwhile these past four years have been. I hope the underclassmen will realize how much satisfaction we gained from this one special night and will initiate a tradition to enable all future Villanova Seniors to experience such an important event.

Although on the surface the outcome of this evening appeared to be an enormous success, I must unfortunately inform the Seniors of one circumstance that occurred which hindered the complete success of this event.

The morning after the party, I received a phone call from the Police Officer in charge of security at the Covered Wagon, and he informed me of certain items that were stolen during the party. These items include: two plants, one of which was in a large, copper pot, an American flag, and four ceramic, antique frogs which were part of the fountain in the front entrance.

These items may appear to be trivial, but their value can not be replaced by money. Mr. Conida, the owner of the Covered Wagon, emphasized the sentimental value of these items and the impossibility of replacing them because they were given to him as gifts. The ceramic frogs, in particular, must be returned in order to operate the fountain.

Throughout this ordeal, Mr. Conida still expressed his deepest respect for Villanova. He commended the Seniors for the warm and friendly atmosphere they created that night. He does not intend to allow what a few did, to destroy his trust in Villanova.

Mr. Conida will not press any charges against anyone, but would appreciate the return of his items. If you have any information regarding these missing items, or know of their whereabouts, please contact me at 446-3919 or Box 2968.

If you prefer, you can drop the articles off at the Student Activities Office, 2nd Floor Dougherty, with no questions asked.

If these items are not returned, it can only hurt the Villanova's reputation and the availability of the underclassman to hold similar events.

Very truly yours,
Marie C. Fichera

Student Life

To: Board of Trustees
Gentlemen;

The time to review student life policies has come upon us. As a former Resident Assistant in Stanford Hall I believe that I can offer you some insight regarding our resident student population.

The regulations imposed on this campus were theoretically proper in a different era of student life. But not today. The majority of our student body is comprised of outstanding, first rate men and women. They would not be here if this were not the case. This type of student body does not need the adult-child supervision that you seem to advocate. They are ready to go beyond this stage of development. Our University needs to recognize this fact through the incorporation of appropriate standards and values into their repertoire.

Villanova seems nonrespondent. We can not provide students with the necessary social skills and knowledge to insure their success and well being in our modern, forever changing society. For values to become internalized, they must be reflected upon. They need to be made the objects of the individual's best efforts in judgement and decision making. They must find their way into the personality structure through the activity of the conscious and developed ego, rather than through automatic conditioning or unconscious mechanism.

When a person has been raised in an authoritarian environment where he is told what is right or wrong and does not even question the two, he will experience anxiety when he moves from his insulated setting into the "real world." The student who has no practice in listening, weighing, and discriminating may become overwhelmed.

When I was relieved of my duties in Stanford Hall, I was told that it was because I ran my area by a different set of rules, that the incidents that led to my demise were only used as the device. What I did was treat the residents in my area as responsible adults. I impressed upon them the importance of discretion and for this I was repeatedly criticized by the rest of the administration.

If what I did was so radically different then I suppose that we could call it a successful experiment in Villanova Student Behavior. Successful, because as a former resident of both Stanford and St. Mary's I have a valid impression of typical student life and what came to be on the fourth floor of Stanford sets a new standard for prudent, congenial student life excellence here at Villanova.

Respectfully,
Jerry Ryan

Villanovan Coverage

Dear Editor,

We were appalled with the coverage of the major event which took place in the Villanova Fieldhouse on February 17, 1979. The article, "Straccia Reaches 1,000 Mark, As Woman Down Ursinus," published in the Villanovan was a feeble attempt to give Kathy Straccia recognition for her attainment of 1,000 points.

Since Kathy Straccia was the first woman in Villanova history to attain this goal, one would expect complete coverage of this spectacular event. We do not consider a headline with a one sentence description of her achievement, supplemented with a photo of a teammate, to be anywhere near full coverage. Fortunately, the Philadelphia Journal covered this major event in an article which described both the individual and her accomplishments, and recognized her importance to the success of the team.

Kathy Straccia had enough determination and talent to attain 1,000 points. She worked diligently over four years to enable women's sports to gain wide recognition and progress rapidly (i.e. scholarships), and it is sad that the Villanova Community was not exposed to the accomplishment of this extraordinary young woman.

We feel that Kathleen Straccia deserves more respect for her fine achievement and an apology from the Villanovan for the incomplete coverage of this event.

Sincerly yours,
Margaret Derrico

his sort of presumption."

Since Armstrong has taught at various schools, some being University of Wales; University of Malta, Cambridge and Dalhousie University in Canada, he has had the opportunity to compare the students from each institution. Do Villanova students have the proper attitude toward the subject of philosophy?

"Ideally, the first and supreme prerequisite for studying anything is that students should be interested in it and, if possible, to enjoy it. I do not believe in students studying subjects they intensely dislike, unless there is absolutely no way out of it. If there is a free choice, they should choose subjects they enjoy and are interested in but also realize that any worthwhile philosophy or anything else is extremely difficult and they should not suppose that they can know everything even in one lifetime.

"I think the proper attitude to any great philosophy is to feel very ignorant of it, even whan you come to the end of a lifetime. I think Issac Newton got it about right when he said, at the end of his lifetime when he was quite old, that he felt like a child picking up shells on the shore of the great sea of knowledge.

About required courses, Prof. Armstrong had this to say, "I am a little uneasy about required courses because I think forcing people into a course will very often make them dislike the subject. Required courses are usually general courses, and you never get far enough to enjoy them. I can see that theoretically, it is desirable to know math, history, ancient and modern languages, but if all the student is going to get is an elementary knowledge and an apparent dislike of the subject, he better not study it.

"Try to think that what you study should be capable of being interesting. You might even, if you got to know it better, enjoy it. Realize that this will not be achieved without a good deal of work at it. You will have to understand to enjoy."

As for the subject of philosophy, Armstrong concludes, "Some people go to philosophy looking for ready made, cut and dried answers to our questions. Some people go because they want to be stimulated to go on and think for themselves. Many people think that philosophy has all the answers, well it hasn't."

The issues the PAF chooses to explore are determinded through a set criteria. If an issue has not been clearly defined in the public consicousness, is critical over a long period to our nation, and if they involve public choice.

In the area of foreign policy, Immerwahr recently finished an article on U.S. policies in South Africa while exploring the public's attitudes on the subject. The article is titled "The Public Views South Africa" and appears in the Jan./Feb. issue of Public Opinion.

Through Immerwahr's work with the PAF, he has discovered some very rewarding things. His training in philosophy has helped him so much in the market research business, he feels it is ideal training for problem solving as well as determining what the problems are. Immerwahr became aware of his true love of teaching and providing his students with a well rounded knowledgeable background not only in philosophy but in other areas as well.

Come To Christy's Cabaret

By PATI NASELLA

Life is a Cabaret. How easy it is to think on this line when one only concerns himself with the good times.

Dr. James Christy and Vasey Theatre presented a good time in the musical Cabaret and in doing so tied together all the renovations that this work of art has been thru.

Based on The Berlin Stories by Christopher Isherwood, Cabaret depicts life in pre-war Germany in all its decadence. Violence, hatred and threats hung over Berlin in the 1929-33 period and Isherwood was an innocent bystander who met the people least touched by this malicious smog and then some who were touched. He wrote about all of them and in them we find a bit of ourselves looking for the Cabaret and we find some pathos because they refused to be aware of the social and political calamity around them.

There have been many presentations of Isherwood's stories with the use of film and stage and in each variation different characters have been brought into perspective.

Dr. Christy harmonized the numerous techniques displaying a cornucopia of characters which colored the stage sporadically. We are left to place them in some sort of order ourselves because Isherwood, as well as Christy demonstrated, did not commit himself to categorizing his acquaintances.

Sally Bowles, a spirited, young, aspiring actress, forms the center of this play and the elusively evil Emcee ties together her life and all who meet her. Jo-Anne Martino who portrayed Ms. Bowles was as captivating to the viewer as one can imagine the real Ms. Bowles was to Isherwood.

Need I say how witty and demonic Alvin Clay was as the Emcee. Much energy peaked with these two talents on stage.

Natalia, Eileen Wilkinson, and Fritz, John Palenick, both Jews, were truly sympathetic characters who derived their strength from Sally and Isherwood. They naturally needed more strength than did the two Englishmen because they were deeply affected by the plight of Germany. Sally and Isherwood, aloof and detached from it all, would occasionally remark how they had nothing to do with their German surroundings. The Emcee satirically contrasts the two opposing views by doing skits that depicted the lives of the four characters with the background in the frolicking Kit Kat Club.

The stage design was beautifully coordinated by Deborah Nagle and presented the two story lines on different levels on the stage as they are projected in reality. Like lingering melodic afterthoughts the musical background suitably shaded the scenes in the play. And the costumes, supervised by Janus Stefanowicz and Susan Trimble, added to the mood of decadence by featuring the black lace and garter style of the can-can.

All the pieces fit together well in this reconstruction of the play. All involved made Christy's idea produce a cohesive effect.

The degree to which one would call Isherwood's accounts in Berlin a love story is disputable. I personally feel the climatic ending falls somewhat short of a traditional romantic departure with Sally keeping her chin up and singing "What good is sitting alone in your room, come here the music play." Why not come to Vasey's Cabaret where your table's waiting?

Performances will be from March 14 thru March 18 and March 21 thru March 25 with a curtain call at 8:00 p.m. For reservations call 525-6288.

Cheech y Chong-Dos Amigos a Valley Forge.

You Must Laugh!

By STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

One could have a very difficult time attempting to write an article on a comedy act that forced many members of the audience to walk out because the material was not suitable for human listening. I didn't walk out — I stayed for both encores and I must say Cheech and Chong are a couple of "real wild and crazy guys." Those guys were really funny. They could not really be compared to Steve Martin, or Robert Kline because the material is not anywhere similar. The former two comedians appeal to one's intellect — to say it in simpler terms, they are modern-day satirists. Cheech and Chong appeal to one's funny bone — one must have a good sense of humor and be willing to laugh.

When I found out I was going to see this act I had already heard the albums and you can only listen to them once and you have them memorized. But once they took the stage I knew for some reason that this was not going to be a repeat performance of "Big Bambu" or "The Wedding Album." They have stage presence, they are not just stand up comics like Steve Martin. There is a great deal of theatrics included in the act. They use props, costumes and simulated drugs. Oh yes — I guess if one does not know it from listening to their albums, their act is very drug oriented. They pulled out such items as a 3 foot long joint and a 10 lb. bag of cocaine (simulated of course) but the audience was wild.

The opening of the show brought both Cheech and Chong out on the stage. However, only Tommy Chong stayed; he spoke to the crowd of about 1500. On the far side of the theatre in the front row there was a group of older ladies (God only knows what they were doing there). Tommy Chong kept looking at them and once he walked up to them and said, "You guys are making me nervous." During the show I glanced their way and they seemed to be enjoying the show. They did not walk out. However the couple sitting in front of me said that they could not sit through the show. If you happened to see their new movie "Up In Smoke" you would have appreciated the skit entitled "Low Rider" — that was one of the cleaner acts.

The only familiar act they did was "Ralph and Herbie," the skit about the two dogs that are both dying to meet FeFe. They acted this one out on stage. It was one of those things where you had to be there. It was indeed really funny.

A Singular Sensation

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

In a word, Michael Bennett's "A Chorus Line" is sensational. On the surface, "A Chorus Line" deals with actors and actresses auditioning for a chorus spot in a "big" play. However, it goes much deeper than that. "A Chorus Line" represents a microcosm of society, focusing on the traumas one encounters while going through life.

The most obvious element that encompasses life in general here is that of competition. Each member is vying for the same job. In order to finally get the much desired part, the director, played by Scott Pearson, requires that everyone go through a series of involved dance steps. Following this, there is an elimination, and those that remain are the seventeen essential characters whose protraits are painted for the better part of "A Chorus Line."

The core of the play lies in a set of interviews that all must participate in — each player must give the specific details of his or her background, both acting and personal. For some, this is not so easy. This is demonstrated brilliantly in a scene with an aspiring young actor named Paul, played by Sam Viverito, who must reveal the sordid facts of his past acting experience.

As the play progresses, it becomes clearer to the audience that this audition is actually a collage of humanness — people from all walks of life are brought together, and by the end, after they have demonstrated their talents with heart and soul, they become aware of the fact that they understand each other. People, who were strangers a few hours ago, are now hoping to work together. Despite the fact that each one still wants the part, through interaction and honesty, they learn a great deal about themselves and about the world. At one point towards the end, the question is raised as to what these people would do if they didn't pass the audition. When the company faces the fact that one day the curtain will come down for the last time, there is a momentary disillusionment that is felt by both actors and audience. However, the voice of the director is heard — the time finally arrives for the final cut. Who makes the audition? As the saying goes, only the strong survive.

Niki Harris as "Val."

The dramatic element of "A Chorus Line" is enriched by comic interludes and dynamically choreographed song and dance numbers that are intermingled througout the play, never allowing the production to slip into prolonged seriousness.

Musical routines such as "Dance: Ten; Lookes: Three" performed by Niki Harris, and "Sing!" performed by Shanna Reed and Rick Emery are two of the shows classically humerous and captivating spotlights. Other popular tunes are "What I Did For Love" sung by local girl Denise DiRenzo, and the finale "One: Reprise" which is worth the price of admission alone.

The play, currently at the Forrest Theatre until April 14, is certainly one to cater to a wide variety of theatrical tastes. If you are an avid theatregoer, "A Chorus Line" is a must. If you seldom, if ever, go to the theatre, "A Chorus Line" will ignite a greater interest to go out for a night on the town.

Angel - Fashion or a Sign of the Times?

By THOM STYLES

Rock music has historically resembled the fate of a gold rush mining town. As soon as prospectors like Fats Domino, Jimmy Page, Jimi Hendrix hit on an untapped lode of musical expression, there would appear — seemingly overnight — a spate of imitators, sonic clones, and carpetbaggers, ready to ferret out the smallest nugget of innovation until the vein was exhausted. Occasionally, die-hard rockers would wedge themselves into a groove and overstay their welcome (an example might be Black Sabbath), but more often, the result would be a fruitless, frantic search for another palatable avenue.

At present, the number of dead ends is great and growing greater.

Essentially, there were two discrete bands at the Tower Theatre last weekend. The opening act was a "new" band from Chicago called Trillion, on tour to promote their debut release "Trillion" (Epic JE 35460). They did not appear in Halloween garb; in fact, they weren't dressed as well as Angel's roadies.

The headline act was Angel, a quintet campaigning their latest Casablanca LP, entitled "Sinful". A peculiarity of artists on the Casablanca label is the extensive use of visual and sonic effects to create a theatrical fantasy (Kiss originated the formula, and the funk band Parliament is another Casablanca exponent of the technique), more so than as a musical event. Unfortunately, Angel fell victim to the same law that nailed Kiss, namely, musical ability is inversely sacrificed for the show aspect. Despite their Frederick's of Hollywood white satin attire and perfectly styled manes, the lack of basic musical talent rendered their extensive, sexually suggestive production (I'll go into detail further along) rather weak. Presumably, the band didn't wear satin in the studio, because their

DTD Takes Frat Title

By JERRY VENTRESCA

While many teams in the Intramural Basketball League vie for playoff spots, the fraternity league, praised by league organizer Phil Farrell for its cooperations and rare cancellations, has completed another exciting season with DTD as champs — again!

DTD, led by Coach Ken Palsadino, defeated LXA in their final game to finish the '78-'79 season at 7-0 and claim yet another frat championship to add to their basketball dynasty.

Meanwhile, LKD defeated SPE, 49-46, and therefore finished in second place with a 6-1 record. SPE, whose playoff hopes remain good, ended their season 5-2. To round off the division, LXA finished in fourth at 4-3, ZP (3-4) finished fifth, DPE (2-5) claimed sixth, tied with DKE, and TKE finished in the 8th at 0-7.

In the 3:30 Alumni league, Bomb Squad ran their record to 4-0 thus claiming sole possession of first place over the Cougars (3-0). The 4:30 league is now led by the Sun Kings (4-0) with Bang Gang in second at 3-0 and Assembly trailing them with a 3-1 record. ANS has claimed first place in the 5:30 league with a victory which put them at 4-0. In second place is Express, 3-0. In the powerful 6:30 league, a loss by Simple Dreams, a victory for The Rags, and two wins for the Ice Men placed these three teams in a tie for first place.

"Gimme The Ball" ran its record to 5-0 in the 7:30 league and behind them in second place is SPOA(3-0), and the Fighting Irish in third at 3-1. At St. Mary's

Santana and Their Evil Ways

Carlos Santana Performed March 3.

By STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

While many of you were on a plane to Florida I was enjoying one of the best concerts I have ever had the pleasure to see. The bill at the Spectrum in South Philly was Sad Cafe, Eddie Money and Santana. We'll take a look at Sad Cafe. This band is receiving much air play on progressive radio stations, and they are really good. Sad Cafe hails from Manchester, England. Their style is a pleasant combination of rock and jazz. Sad Cafe has been compared to Hall and Oates, 10cc and even Weather Report but a close listen to Misplaced Ideals, their most recent LP, will show that they have a sound clearly unique to themselves.

To be truthfully honest I never really heard of Sad Cafe until this concert. The reason is because they released one album in America, the remainder of their albums can be purchased on an import label. Sad Cafe emerged from two bands in Manchester, England — Gyro and Mandala and they took their name from the title of Carson McCullus' book, "The Ballad of Sad Cafe."

The lead vocalist, Paul Young has been billed as the next Mick Jagger. He struts and prances the stage similar to Jagger and he is indeed a showman. There really isn't anything sad about Sad Cafe. I am sure that as time progresses we will hear much more from them.

"Steady" Eddie Money was not so steady at the Spectrum. From the many people that I spoke to before the show, the majority of them said they were there to see Eddie Money.

Indeed his music on studio recordings is excellent but Eddie Money in concert leaves much to be desired. He has got a lot to do to perfect his routine on stage. Eddie Money is just a singer, he plays no instrument. From his appearance on stage it seemed as if he looked bored. Time and again he would throw the mike and grab it by the cord, and with luck and a prayer, catch it. He would also gyrate on stage, which becomes rather boring to watch.

All of his songs went over well with the crowd with the exception of two — "Baby Hold On" and "Two Tickets to Paradise." They went over excellent. He did those in the beginning of his 40 minute set and I believe that those are the songs that the crowd really wanted to hear.

Eddie Money was introduced as "The Man of Class" — he did come out wearing a shirt and tie. He is rapidly rising to stardom and I believe within the next few months he will be headlining his own show.

His latest album Life for the Taking is an excellent effort, the sales are going well. All he needs to do is work on his stage presence and he will be sitting on the top. An old Player of Blues said of Money — "This Cat Money — he walks the walk and talks the talk."

The big act of the evening was Santana — as mentioned before the majority of the people spoken to said they wanted to see Eddie Money. However when Santana took the stage there was chaos in the crowds, the matches alone provided ample light for the Spectrum. At this point it was clear that the crowd in all fairness wanted to see Santana.

Carlos Santana is indeed one of the most talented guitarists in modern music. He plays with great ease and a certain amount of charisma.

The majority of the material came from Santa's album Army Secrets with the exception of the old favorites that Santana is famous for like "Dance, Sister, Dance," "Evil Ways," "Black Magic Woman," and "I Ain't Got Nobody that I Can Depend On."

Since Woodstock, Santana has tourned more extensively than any other band. They are also one of the most popular bands in music. This performance was like virtually every other one, a sell out.

Their latest album Army Secrets is now on the market, and it is no secret. This new album is by far the best Carlos and his band ever put together. Listen to it and see if you agree, better yet try to catch Santana in concert, you won't believe your ears.

New In Sound

George Thorogood and the Destroyers

George Thorogood and The Destroyers are a small group in number and you'd expect them to play music with a limited focus. This is not the case. The group is surprisingly versatile. They feel very much at home playing the blues, acoustic and electric, as well as energetic rock 'n' roll, powerhouse slide guitar, country and western and folk.

There are many noteworthy tunes on the album. The title track sets the tempo. Written by Hank Williams, it contains his country and Western flavor combined with the Destroyers' unique brand of rock 'n' roll. The next cut, "Who Do You Love?" is along the same lines. "The Sky is Crying" is a classy blues number. Johnny Cash's "Cocaine Blues" is a tribute to his style of country and western. Side one closes out with "It Wasn't Me," a song originally written for Chuck Berry. It is played and sung with as much intensity as Berry himself would have played it.

In these days of synthesized and computerized music, it's good to hear rock 'n' roll the way it was originally meant to be heard. So if good time boogie is what you're in the mood to hear, this may be the album you've been waiting to hear.

White Hot record was pretty hot. Clothes make the man, I guess.

Since I've made my point on the auditory aspects of Angel, let's return to the more positive area of their act. Whoever designed the set for Angel should get credit for a couple of rather unique visual effects that turned up throughout the show. After about forty-five minutes of fiddling with the wiring of Greg Giuffria's keyboard setup, roadies began stacking what looked like microwave ovens in five clusters of four. After all of the boxes were on stage, an impressive voice gave a little speech about the music of heaven and

By BOB LYNCH

A short time ago, a small unnoticed band came out of the bars of Delaware. Its members included George Thorogood, himself, on guitars and vocals, Jeff Simon on drums, Billy Blough on bass and Uncle "Meat" Pennington on tamborine and maracas. They played the local clubs but slowly they were gaining exposure.

All of a sudden people began to notice them. They found that they were well received in the states that border Delaware. The release of their latest album, Move it on Over has sparked sold-out concert appearances at places such as Alexander's in New Jersey, a showplace for local talent.

National recognition has afforded them after a relatively short time in existence. They still maintain a low profile because that's the way they want it. Playing music gives George Thorogood a great deal of pleasure and those who have been fortunate enough to see the Destroyers in concert know that they give their audience great pleasure.

asked for volunteer angels to introduce the music to earth. Meanwhile, the roadies were stacking the boxes into Portocan formations on stage, lights on the boxes gleamed, and members of Angel were introduced as they appeared in the boxes. Since their 'heavenly' outfits left little to the imagination, and their stage moves even less, it should be noted that Angel was roughly as pious as Caligula. Guitarist Punky Meadows concentrated on lustfully inspired groupies in the front row as the other ninety-nine percent suffered through one dismal lead after another. During the lead bridge in "Don't Take Your Love," a tan backdrop fell behind the drum riser, and the Angel logo arose featuring a talking face, which was interesting. Later, a heavy fog blanketed the first ten rows while Giuffria jumped down onto the stage with a guitorgan for 'Havin' A Bad Time.' There were the usual bombs, flash pots, quartz — iodine lamps, and a return of the talking logo.

Trillion relied more on their musical talents, and suffered through redundant reprises in just about every tune, but the moves of singer Denny Frederiksen and Billy Joel clone Pat Leonard's forceful keyboard work prevented a total washout.

National Championship For Tracksters

Before Anthony Tufariello stepped to the starting line in the first of two heats in the 600, UTEP had extended its margin over Villanova to 39 points.

"Tuf" had not had a great winter, to put it mildly. He stumbled to a third in the IC's, was plagued by up and down performances all season, and had developed a penchant for contracting colds — a malady which now made him feel achy and congested. To add to the pressure, he had — in the back of his mind — the thought of blowing last year's chance at a national title by losing the baton in a mile relay race which Villanova was favored to win.

His legs were loose. He slipstreamed behind Miami of Ohio's Darrell Sargent till the final 160 yards and zoomed past him to an unexpected 1:09.41 which held up for first.

The distance medley quartet of freshman Mike England, juniors Al Graves and Dean Childs and senior John Burns staved off Eastern Michigan for a third in 9:49.1. That race was followed by the 1,000, where Don Paige, who is beginning to look like an Olympic medalist down the road, broke Mark Belger's NCAA record with a 2:07.27 winning effort.

By this time, all calculations pointed to a 1-2 finish in the mile and a victory in the mile relay in order for the Cats to pull it out.

Not necessarily true. Nyambui, speeding to a meet-record 3:57.89 in the mile foiled the strategy of Villanovans Amos Korir and Sydney Maree.

"We planned it," explained Korir. "I was to set a fast pace to make Naymbui run hard."

Unfortunately the plan backfired after a 62-second quarter and 2:02 half which conserved Naymabui's energy and tired Korir. Suddenly, Maree was head-to-head with Nyambui, a 24-year-old freshman from Tanzania, and it was Nyambui, not Maree, who took over in the final laps.

Word reached the track that UTEP was disqualified in the two-mile relay resulting from a shoving and tripping match between Jan Boogman and Notre Dame's Chuck Aragon, which took place prior to the mile run. The protest upheld, Villanova needed 10 points to win the meet, the 10 awarded for first place in the final event, the mile relay.

"It was a nice surprise knowing it was coming down to the mile relay," said Tim Dale, the relay's anchorman.

Racing against the clock in the second to a two-section final, Brown (49.8), Derrek Harbour (49.4), Tufariello (48.0) and Dale (48.2) defeated the Kansas Jayhawks by half a second to close out the stirring rally.

"You hate to win on a disqualification, but we've lost four championships on relays," said a surprised Jumbo, who had cancelled a fast flight at the meet's end because of the unanticipated triumph.

"The big thing?" he repeated the question. "Well, they were all big races, but I lean towards Tufariello. He ran a great, great race in the 600 and came back with a great mile relay leg.

"It's great for us to beat a team like UTEP (they had won four of the last five championships). Honestly, I thought they'd win by 15 or 20 points — conservatively.

"We scored all the points we possibly could have scored (50 out of a potential 58 on the last day)."

One little foul, and Villanova slithered through by a point. How bad was the Notre Dame runner knocked off stride along the steep, banked boards?

"Joe Louis might have come up with a better one," Elliott quipped.

Track Gals Seventh In Nationals

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

The women's track team traveled to the national collegiate championships for the first time in the team's history. The Wildcats made a definite impression on track critics as they finished a strong seventh behind winner Iowa State.

Junior Brigid Leddy led the team with a second place finish in the mile run with a time of 4:54.3. Freshman Doriane Lambelet set a national collegiate record in the 600 yard run in the trials with a time of 1:21.14 only to finish second to Diann Ousley of Arkansas in the finals.

The 880 yard relay team of Jennifer Whitfield, Amelia Cain, Doriane Lambelet and Pat Robinson finished a surprising sixth in the finals with a time of 1:44.26. The mile relay team missed qualifying for the finals by 0.1 seconds although they ran a season best of 3:52.99.

The team scored 19 points to finish seventh behind Iowa State.

The women traveled to Jadwyn Gym at Princeton this weekend for the EAIAW Championships. They finished a disappointing seventh after a misunderstanding caused the disqualification of Leddy from the mile run and the two mile relay.

Lambelet finished second in the half mile to Chris Mullen of Georgetown. Lambelet ran a school record 2:11.86. Jennifer Whitfield finished third in the quarter with a time of 56.33. This is also a school record for the freshman. The two mile relay team of Whitfield, Sue Shea, Carol Gilsinger and Lambelet continued their dominance as they won their event in a meet and fieldhouse record of 9:11.07.

The women open the outdoor season on April 3 with the Big Five Championships at West Chester State College.

Women Conclude With Two Wins

By TONY PANGONAS

The Villanova women's basketball team concluded their most successful season with two big wins against Lafayette 78-62 and Penn 71-54. These two wins makes the Wildcats final season record 17-8.

Using a well balanced scoring attack, which has been characteristic of the Wildcats all year, the Cats were able to dispose of Lafayette 78-62. The Cats were able to build a 38-29 lead at halftime by shooting 51% from the field and using tough defense to hold Lafayette to only 39% from the field. In the second half the Cats continued the good shooting to hold on to the win 78-62.

The Wildcats were led by Mary Beth Gibson, who hit 10 for 18 from the field for 20 points. Also in double figures for the Cats were Karen Hiznay with 16 points, Lisa Ortlip with 14 points and Kathy Straccia with 10 points.

In their finale the Wildcats were able to use a fast break attack to beat Big 5 rival Penn 71-54. With Lisa Ortlip and Kathy Straccia controlling the backboards and Karen Hiznay hitting jump shots at the end of the break, the Cats were able to build a 41-24 halftime lead. The second half was even with the Cats going inside to Ortlip for most of their points to insure their 71-54 win.

High scorers for the Wildcats were Ortlip with 23 points, who shot 11 for 13 from the field, and Hiznay with 19 points. In her final game with the Wildcats, Kathy Straccia had 6 points, 7 assists and a game high 11 rebounds.

With the Wildcats losing only one senior, Straccia, from this years very successful squad, Coach Harry Perretta must be very optimistic about next year.

Swimmers Cap Season

By BRUCE MURRAY

The Villanova Mens' Swimming Team (4-10) ended a disappointing season by losing two of their final three meets. The Watercats easily swam past Rutgers by the score of (60-33), but then lost a close meet to Syracuse (60-53) because of a disqualification in the medley relay. In their season finale the Cats were outmatched against national powerhouse Navy; they lost (65-28). Overall, the season was disappointing; but on the bright side, this year's squad was extremely young, and thus the future for mens' swimming at Villanova is optimistic.

At the Eastern Swimming Championships which were held at Penn State (March 1-3), the Watercats finished 10th in the East. Individually, co-captain Eric Wenger placed 3rd in the 50 freestyle, and in doing so, Eric made the Pennsylvania Inter-Collegiate All-Star team. Freshman Dan Ahern also placed individually as he finished 8th in the 200 backstroke.

Also at the Easterns, Villanova placed three relay teams. The 400 medley relay, anchored by Eric Wenger, placed 11th; the 400 freestyle relay finished 9th; and the 800 freestyle relay finished 8th.

Track Coverage

Due to the time limitations with which this issue had to be prepared and the lack of space, we were unable to thoroughly cover the National Track Championship. We plan to take a close look at the Legacy of Coach Jumbo Elliot, the individual runners and the commitment to track by the Villanova community in upcoming issues of the Villanovan.

the 5:30 league is led by a very strong The Express team with a 6-0 record and Home Grown with a 3-0 second place record. Beasts of Burden, now 4-0, leads the 6:30 league, with Stampede trailing them at 3-0. The 7:30 league is led by undefeated Saco East(3-0) and in second, Newton Squares at 3-1, and in third, On Tap at 4-2.

In the Resident League, an exciting and interesting division to watch is the St. Mary 9:30 league dominated by undefeated Athlete's Foot and once-beaten E-Man, led by hustling Coach John "Zip" Cuipo.

Cats Close Season In EAA Tourney

By JACK STRAUB

The Villanova Wildcats' basketball season came to an abrupt halt March 1 in Pittsburgh in the semi-final round of the Eastern Eight tournament. The Cats fell to Pitt, 77-64, before a partisan crowd of over 15,000 in the Civic Arena. For our team, it was a disappointing finish to a season which showed much promise for the future. Tournament champion Rutgers has since upset Georgetown, and will represent the EAA in the NCAA Eastern Regional semi-finals tonight against St. John's.

For a while during the EAA tournament's opening round game February 27, it looked as though the Wildcats would never make it to Pittsburgh. It took a 78-73 overtime victory over a stubborn University of Massachusetts team to advance to the semifinals. Playing before a sparse Field House crowd of less than 1500, Villanova battled Massachusetts to a 67-all tie at the end of regulation time. The lead changed hands 15 times, and with one minute remaining Massachusetts headed downcourt with the score tied. But with 24 seconds left Minuteman guard Tom Witkos inadvertently stepped out-of-bounds, preventing U. Mass. from getting the last shot and sending the game into overtime. In the extra period, Villanova controlled the tap and scored first; a reverse layup by Tom Sienkiewicz gave the Wildcats a four-point lead and the momentum they needed for the 78-73 victory.

Any hopes generated by the sudden-death home court victory were quickly dampened, however, two days later in Pittsburgh's civic arena. The Wildcats, favored to win the tournament, found themselves facing Pitt in their hometown before 15,208 screaming fans. It was said later that VU's entire fieldhouse could have fit on the floor of the Civic Arena. On that particular Thursday night, though, even that may not have helped.

After swapping two baskets with Villanova, Pittsburgh charged to a 12-4 lead which was never challenged. Try as they did, the Wildcats were never really in the game. As Villanova coach Rollie Massamino stated later, it was a "typical tournament game," "extremely well-played" by Pitt. As in any similar contest between Eastern Eight or Big Five schools and Villanova, anything can, and usually does, happen. The Wildcats only two weeks earlier looked invincible against Penn, defeating the Big Five leader which has since gone on to defeat North Carolina and advance to the NCAA Eastern Regional semi-finals. But on that night in Pittsburgh, the Panthers were the better team. It is only unfortunate for Villanova that the loss meant the end of a long, hard-worked season.

Pitt forward Sammie Ellis led all scorers with 24 points, and was joined in double figures by four other Panther teammates. For the Wildcats, Alex Bradley turned in a 17-point performance and Rory Sparrow contributed 16. Pitt's accuracy from the foul line may have cost Villanova the game; while Pitt scored only one more field goal than Villanova, they converted 25 of 27 free throws.

Pittsburgh's experience, and Villanova's relative lack of it, could have been a deciding factor. The Panthers' team was basically the same as last year's squad. "They remind me of our team," said Coach Massamino, referring to Villanova's experienced squad Rigsby, Robinson, and Keith Herron from last year. The Wildcats this year went through a rebuilding process after losing the three key starters from last year's NCAA Eastern finalist team. Villanova's starting lineup of two juniors, two sophomores, and a freshman can only improve next year. But the rebuilding process and much-needed experience cannot come about without disappointments like the Pitt game.

Thus ends another Villanova Wildcat basketball season. The Wildcats' record of 14 wins, 13 losses is disappointing, but only because of the quality of Villanova's basketball program and the goals and expectations it has. This season was by no means without its great moments: Villanova's trouncing of Rutgers in the Field House; Tom Sienkiewicz' 39-point performance against Penn; last-minute victories against Penn State and Pitt; the "almost" upsets over DePaul and Temple; not to mention the EAA's best-ever conference record of 9 wins, 1 loss in regular season play.

Villanova basketball has survived, and very well at that. The Wildcats have come out of a tough, challenging, rebuilding year with their heads held high. "It's a young club," stated Coach Massamino, "we'll be back." Those words will not soon be forgotten; though the 1979 season is over, the next one has already begun. And with a little luck, 1980 may just well be "The Year of the Cat."

Senate Proposes Connelly Theater

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Four student motions, the installment of a new senator, and the scheduling of an extraordinary meeting of the Senate highlighted the Villanova University Senate meeting held last Friday, March 16.

The Senate will hold an extraordinary meeting on Friday, April 6, at 4 p.m., to consider the report of the Senate budget committee. The committee is expected to report on the progress of the budget for the upcoming year.

Senator Cathy Pelesky presented the first of the four student motions, stating that "it is the opinion of the University Senate that the Board of Trustees is obligated to pursue alternate sources of income which would reduce the percentage of the operating costs of the University presently incurred by the students." The motion was approved by a voice vote.

The second motion, proposed by Senator Joe Cassidy, recommending to Father Driscoll "that the Connelly Center include a professionally equipped theater in its physical structure," resulted in a lengthy debate among the representatives. Proponents of the resolution maintained that a theater would be invaluable as both a teaching tool and cultural influence, while the opposition pointed out the large added expense to the already high cost of the center.

"I feel that a theater would act as a major cultural influence and at the same time would generate revenue for the University," stated Cassidy.

The resolution passed by a vote of 19 for, 3 against and 6 abstaining.

Another motion proposed by Cassidy recommending "that the University be fully supportive of the actions of CATCH-19," was defeated 16 to 4, with seven abstentions. Critics of the resolution cited the ambiguity of the wording and the political stand the motion implied as negative aspects. "I don't like the University taking sides," said Senator George of the history department.

The final student motion, also presented by Cassidy, stated the Senate's opinion that "the University Budget be in compliance with President Carter's voluntary wage and price controls with maximum increases of 7%." The motion was tabled for future clarification and discussion.

The Senate also defeated a motion proposed by Dr. Robert Langran of the Executive Committee that a formal question and answer period be held at each meeting.

A new by-law, Article XVI, was approved, allowing Senators to discharge a resolution from a committee that has failed to take action on it after 90 days.

Against the backdrop of Vasey, workers continue construction of the Connelly Center which will house a new theatre, if Senate plans materialize.

Spring Week Planned

By BILL GUERIN

Concerts, contests, an outdoor liturgy, a parade, and a talent show will highlight Spring Week, scheduled for April 1-7.

"The purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for everyone to get involved in campus activities, to celebrate Spring, and just to have a good time," stated Kevin Smith, co-chairperson of Spring Week.

The steering committees planning this event are composed of members of the major student organizations on campus. The complete schedule of activities for the program is tentative, and will be finalized this week.

Spring Week activities will commence on Sunday afternoon, April 1, with a five mile marathon sponsored by the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company. Following the run, the RSA will sponsor a picnic on Mendel Field. At 5:00 that afternoon, a Mass will be celebrated on Mendel Field. The day's events will be capped off by a Union-sponsored Gong Show, to be held in Kennedy Mall that evening.

On Monday night, a Daniels, Mason, and McGowan concert will be held in the Day Hop cafeteria. Tuesday night will feature a Casino Night planned for Dougherty Hall.

The award-winning film American Graffiti will be shown Wednesday evening in Dougherty Hall. The movie will be followed by a '50's Sock Hop sponsored by WKVU in the Day Hop cafeteria.

Thursday of Spring Week has been labeled "Balloon Day." Beginning at 12:45, a parade will march through campus, followed by music, a carnival, and food-stands managed by the foreign language clubs. All profits from this day's activities will go to benefit world hunger. That evening the Big Event, a campus-wide talent show, will be held at 8:00 in Kennedy Mall.

On Friday afternoon, Union-organized recreational activities will take place in the Quad. Judy Collins will appear in concert that night at 8:00 in the Fieldhouse.

The last day of Spring Week will feature a sky-diving trip in the afternoon and the Villanova Singers' Annual Spring Concert in the evening at St. Mary's auditorium.

Faculty Consider Unionization

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

A proposed 5 per cent salary increase for next year has stirred faculty discontent, and once again, the question of faculty unionization has been raised. At its March 15 meeting, the Villanova chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) hosted Fredrick Hueppe, AAUP president at St. John's University, to discuss collective bargaining.

St. John's University in New York City is "a private church — related institution founded and still to some extent controlled by religious, with a past history of faculty/administration relations similar to Villanova's," said Dr. Theodore J. Kondoleon, AAUP secretary.

St. John's has had collective bargaining for 10 years. According to Dr. Michael Levitan, AAUP president at Villanova, Father John O'Malley, Dean of Arts and Sciences suggested Hueppe to speak at an AAUP meeting.

According to Kondoleon, Hueppe stated the following as advantages of collective bargaining at St. John's:

— "Collective bargaining served to dramatically improve faculty salaries and fringe benefits. Faculty salaries are at or near the top for all ranks on the AAUP scale. Fringe benefits include a 10 per cent-5 per cent employer-employee contribution arrangement to the TIAA. (The Villanova percentage for TIAA contributions is 5 per cent-5 per cent)

— "The faculty role in University government is strengthened by legal support."

— "Grievance procedures have worked out so successfully, that there has been no need for outside arbitration since the inception of collective bargaining."

— "Hueppe said an often repeated objection by the adversaries of collective bargaining is that it would cause divisiveness between colleagues. This has proven false," he said. "collegiality has been strengthened."

On these points, collective bargaining could be regarded as a means to quell faculty discontent at Villanova.

The major complaint of Villanova faculty continues to be "that salary increments per annum have not kept pace with inflation," said Kondoleon. While the Philadelphia cost of living is expected to rise approximately 9 per cent, the latest budget draft reads faculty salary increments at 5 per cent.

Kondoleon said there is also faculty objection to the present University Senate structure. "There should be more faculty say in determining policies affecting the faculty," he said. "This would be accomplished by collective bargaining."

"Another grave concern of the faculty is tenure. That would be ensured under by collective bargaining," said Kondoleon. According to Dr. Bernard Reilly, AAUP member, "tenure is one of the first things negotiated in collective bargaining."

Only mild discontent is expressed at the fact that faculty contracts, due February 1st, according to the faculty handbooks, have still not been issued. "The faculty has been accustomed to expecting late contracts," said Kondoleon. "We are wondering what is taking so long," said Levitan. "Probably the trouble balancing the budget has to do with it. But we would all like the contracts issued," he said.

On November 15 and 16 of 1973, the Villanova faculty voted against collective bargaining. The issue was brought to a vote after Father President Edward McCarthy, sent a 9 page letter to all faculty members at the end of May. Because of a projected "stagnant student population for at least a generation to come," coupled with an anticipated high inflation rate, McCarthy announced a program of altered expenditures for the University. In effect, the letter said "the University would spend less

Nursing Leader Speaks

Dr. Lucie Young Kelly, a political and educational leader of national and international prominence in the nursing field, will be the guest speaker at a special college of nursing convocation at Villanova University today. The program is open to the public and will be held in St. Mary's auditorium on campus at 11 a.m.

Villanova college of nursing has joined with other educators and nursing groups in support of federal legislation which would restore to the national budget funds for nursing education recently cut by President Carter.

Dr. Kelly is a professor of nursing in public health at Columbia University, New York. She is well-known as a spokesperson for the field of nursing on many broad issues and is one of the politically dominant leaders in the profession today.

She will speak to area nurses and other health care practitioners on nursing power, present realities, future imperatives.

The nursing lectureship was established at Villanova last year in honor of the nursing college's 25th anniversary. Since its founding, it has become the largest nursing school granting baccalaureate degrees in Pennsylvania, and now enrolls almost 700 students.

The purpose of the annual program is, says Dr. M. Louise Fitzpatrick, dean of the college of nursing, "to bring insights on issues and contemporary concerns by nursing leaders of national and international reputation to our alumni, students, and colleagues in hospitals and health care agencies."

A comprehensive variety of workshops, seminars, conferences, and short courses for nurses and other health care practitioners, administrators, and teachers will also be offered at Villanova beginning March 26 and continuing through May by the University' college of nursing.

The program is funded by a grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Topics include pharmacology, the newborn at risk, nutrition, death

Isolation of China Detailed

By JOSEPH B. FINIO

Dr. Jonathan Goldstein, Ph.D was guest lecturer last Tuesday for the history department's course: "Cold War and Detente". Dr. Goldstein, whose area of expertise is Chinese history, presented a discussion entitled "Encirclement and Isolation of China, 1949 to Present". Dr. Goldstein, who spent two weeks in the Peoples Republic during the summer of 1978, voiced his views on past situations and current problems.

Chinese reactions to many difficulties are fired by a feeling of isolation, he said. The Peoples Republic sees itself as encircled by a 'noose' of countries, many of whom are antagonistic by nature.

Goldstein identified four major categories of enemies to the Peoples Republic: 1) The anti-communist bloc — S. Korea and Taiwan, 2) The USSR and clients — Mongolia, N. Korea, Laos, Vietnam and Afghanistan, 3) India and protectorates — Sikkim and Bhutan and 4) Cooly neutral — Japan, Hong Kong, Burma, Thailand and Macao.

The longest rivalry which dates back to 1927, is with Taiwan. They split and have "literally been at each other's throats since." Both factions are tightly disciplined and intensely ideological. There has not been any territorial rivalry but a long seated political conflict that spilled over into Korea and later Cambodia, according to Dr. Goldstein.

Two major events increasing tension between the Peoples Republic and the USSR was the lack of notification by the Chinese on commencement of the Korean War and failure of the Russians to give notice on their problems with Stalin in 1956. The Chinese, it seemed, had a type of admiration for the man.

Goldstein said that territorial disputes with countries such as India, Vietnam, and Korea sprang up as the value of the borders became more critically important. In the north, where oil and gold were being found, there were major clashes with the Russians. Today, this has remained an unresolved issue.

The Russians began cultivating friends such as The Mongolian

Center Logo Contest Commences

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Marc Tuchman, director of the Connelly Center, this week announced a contest to select a logo design for the new student center now scheduled to open March 1, 1980.

As a graphic means of identifying the center, the logo may be used on all flyers and center stationery. Also, "it may, in some way become part of the building's design," says Tuchman.

The contest is open to all members of the Villanova community, students, faculty, staff, and alumni, with one design being selected from each category and the winner selected from among the final four. All entries must be submitted in black and white on 4-inch by 4-inch paper along with an entry form by April 18 into the Connelly Center office, Room 208 Dougherty Hall.

The winning graphic design selected by the Connelly Center Interior Design Committee will be announced on April 30, with fifty dollars awarded to each of the four finalists, and an additional fifty dollars going to the winning design.

Tuchman points out that as contest rules stipulate, "we may or may not use the winning design, although it is hoped that the logo will be among those submitted. The logo should represent what the Connelly Center means or will mean to the community."

He also emphasizes that one purpose of the contest is to afford the community a chance to identify with the Center, which up until this contest, has been considered only as a campus obstruction.

Commenting on the design of the Center, Tuchman points out that certainly one of the focal centers will definitely be the Rathskeller which seats 260 people and serves three functions. One is a food service area featuring a delicatessen, a self-service salad bar, pizza and a snack bar. Another is its service as a dining area, with a third feature being a program area. All three activities can take place in the same multi-leveled room at and dying, children's health problems, assertiveness training, nursing management, crisis intervention, and renal dysfunction. Participants will be awarded continuing education credits (CEU's).

Faculty in Villanova's college of nursing as well as other locally and nationally known experts in the field of nursing and health care will teach the courses. Both lecture and practical learning experiences are incorporated into the program, so that students will learn about, as well as master, new skills and procedures.

The courses are part of a new intensive program in continuing education just established by Villanova's college of nursing this semester. Last fall, the college conducted a survey of Delaware Valley graduate nurses, hospitals and other agencies employing health care practitioners and found that there was a clear need for a continuing education program of this scope.

Development of the program is particularly timely because of anticipated legislation which would require nurses to show proof of participation in continuing education courses for license renewal. Should the legislation be passed, the present program will help nurses fulfill this professional obligation.

Dr. Barbara Heller, assistant dean of the college of nursing, is handling the initial coordination of the program under the direction of Dr. M. Louise Fitzpatrick, dean of the college.

"The complexity of knowledge and skill essential to the delivery of quality health care makes it imperative for nurses to continue their education," says Dr. Heller.

money on academics and more on buildings and athletics," said Reilly.

Out of 400 eligible voters, 356 went to the polls. 134 elected the AAUP as bargaining agent, and 23 elected the American Federation of Teachers; 199 voted no agent, against unionization. Collective bargaining was defeated by 40 votes.

Whether there is feeling on campus today for faculty unionization remains a question.

According to Kondoleon, "if collective bargaining were brought to a vote today, chances would be good. The problem was and continues to be opposition in the Commerce and Finance and Engineering schools. Many of these faculty draw income from outside sources in addition to teaching salaries an thus find it advantageous to continue the present arrangement. I would hope that a greater concern for faculty rights and less individualism would lead these faculty to reconsider."

Levitan said he is "not really sure" if there is sentiment for collective bargaining, but that the AAUP board intends to meet in the next few weeks to discuss polling the faculty. Last year, Levitan ran a poll on collective bargaining but only received a 44 per cent respondent rate. The result of those who responded was 60-40 in favor, he said.

"I get feedback from faculty members," said Levitan, "and surprisingly I get positive feedback from people formerly opposed to collective bargaining. This leads me to think there is some feeling for unionization on campus."

Senate

John McKenna, a former Arts Senator who resigned last month after graduating, has rejoined the Senate as the University College Senator, filling a seat recently vacated by Pat Wilson. McKenna is taking graduate courses at Villanova, making him eligible for the University College seat.

Also on the agenda was a report from the faculty affairs committee. Based on a survey of all the faculty, the report made several recommendations concerning the rank and tenure policy at Villanova. The survey, which had a return rate of 49.3%, showed satisfaction with the current tenure policy, although the majority of respondents also felt that some clarifications were necessary. The report also recommended that "a grievance procedure for faculty be developed to insure faculty rights and guarantee due process.

As of now, the Rathskeller will be open approximately 109 hours a week, from 7:30 a.m. until midnight with extended hours on the weekend. "To provide as much service to the campus as possible is our goal," comments Tuchman.

The Rathskeller, which will be a very warm and comfortable place, includes a fireplace with one section of the room looking north towards Vasey Hall and another south into the atrium.

"I encourage people to enter the contest; it's not necessary to be an artist," says Tuchman.

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

The fourth category of enemies: Cooly neutral are those which have diplomatic and trade channels open with the Chinese but the Peoples Republic although not considering them friends, consideres them enemies believing they would not be allies if push came to shove. Dr. Goldstein identified the Peoples Republic as Zenophobic: being afraid of foreigners for only withing the last eight or nine years have there been attempts to break out of isolation.

Since subsequent nuclear weapons tests and admission to the security council of the United Nations, the Peoples Republic is now recognized by many or most nations of the world. According to Dr. Goldstein, the Peoples Republic wants to gain acceptance in the family of nations and is trying to break out of their encirclement to get it.

Villanova Prepares For Spring Week

Pray It Doesn't Rain

We are writing this editorial on a magnificent spring day, replete with sunshine, cool breezes and the renewal of that ageless Villanova tradition, chain-hanging. It is encouraging, incidentally, to see that the Villanova student perseveres in the face of adversity and the destruction of his precious chains, hanging in a somewhat congested but nonetheless utilitarian area.

But enough of these wanderings. One week from today, The Villanovan will carry the program for Spring Week, and plan to kick off the first week of April with concerts, contests, parties and programs. Notre Dame has its An Tostal, Penn has its Spring Week, the University of Virginia has its Easters — all rituals of spring full of madness and merriment. And now Villanova will try to thaw the still bodies of winter.

The key to the success of Spring Week, which is being organized by a Steering Committee out of the Office of Student Activities, will depend on two things — student response and the weather. We can't do much about rain or cold, but it seems that Spring Week offers students the chance to gel as a community, to regain that certain sense of the University as m than a classroom, as a total living experience.

We constantly hear complaints about this school, about its social vironment, about its atmosphere on campus since that infamous ni when the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board showed up and made presence known. The activities to be offered during Spring Week may all appeal to the individual student, but in aggregate the seven-d program should draw everyone's attention.

Spring Week will serve as an indicator of the possibilities for a res rection of social life at Villanova, a test of the willingness of the stud body to engage in a campus-wide festival. We believe that both Spri Week and this University both have great potential. Give it a chance. P ticipate. Urge your organizations and student representatives to see there are any last minute details that need consideration, any events s seeking a sponsor, any way you can take part. Make it work. Enj Villanova.

Just pray that it doesn't rain.

Nuclear Technology

To the Editor:

April 7th is a day that should be of particular interest to the intellectual community here at Villanova and elsewhere. On that day the military-industrial complex will launch the "latest" in nuclear war technology: the Trident Nuclear Submarine.

With each submarine having a capacity to hit 408 targets with a blast five times as great as that which leveled Hiroshima, this new advancement heralds a quantum leap in U.S. destructive power.

The Navy and General Dynamics/Electric Boat will mark the Trident launching in Groton, Conn., with a celebration of speeches, celebrity appearances, and cocktail parties. We, too, will mark that day — not by celebration, but by mournful reflection and protest, for the dollars swallowed by the arms race are dollars denied the uneducated, unhoused, and hungry. Although the actions, both jubilant and mournful, of April 7th will pass unnoted by many, we ask you to consider the implications of the first Trident being launched as it joins a nuclear arsenal criminal in its proportion and damning in its destructiveness.

Security

I'm sorry that Chris Arendt misunderstood my February 16 letter, but I never "inferred that Frank studied security under Hitler" ("Security," 2/23). "Jericho" Compliments

To The Students:

For those of you who watched TV last Sunday night and were lucky enough to be tuned in on The JerichoMile you know how blessed you were with such a fine film. For those of you who weren't watching this superb film you missed one helluva film.

With a touch of Rocky hidden in the film, Villanova's Dr. Pat Nolan, English professor, depicted how American "dreams and expectations never come true."

The dream, that of qualifying for the mile in Olympic competition was choked by American bureaucracy, thus ending a fine athlete/prisoner's chance for success after such a struggle.

The film which was typically Nolan and typically American was well casted, acted and especially very well written. I am sure that those who saw the film have perienced to achieve some form of p fection aborted by some upper author while he had absolutely no say in the m ter.

After such a fine writing performance Dr. Nolan I'd like to congratulate him o job well done and wish him luck in future efforts.

Congratulations, Dr. Nolan.

This week On Campus ventured out into a sunny, warm Kennedy mall crowded with veteran chain-hangers and inquired: What are the Lindback awards? Are they worthwhile? and finally, What do you look for in a teacher? Here's what we got:

No, I don't know what Lindback awards are. Yes, they can be worthwhile for improving student/faculty relationships. I look for a teacher who makes things understandable and can relate to the world of the student.

Robert Horoski — Sophomore

Lindbacks? I think they are awards for outstanding teachers or professors at Villanova. Sure they're worthwhile, because teachers need recognition to keep performing just like the student does. I look for teachers who show concern for the students and really want to see students learn. Some teachers just railroad kids to graduate. I like it when the teacher takes time out to really make you understand. It makes going to class worthwhile.

Laurie Pedrotty — Sophomore

Yes, it's the award given to two professors each year for their ability to teach and to create a rapport with the students. It's a good thing because it gives teachers a reward for what they do. Some teachers put in more time and effort than others and deserve it. The most deserving, I think, have received it in the past. I vote for the teacher that has done more than read some notes year after year; a teacher who goes out of his way to help students and make class more interesting.

Steve Kloeelen — Senior

No, I don't know what they are. Yes they are worthwhile. Why not? They reward the teacher and provide him with an incentive for future teaching. Knowledgeability of subject matter, personality and overall intelligence in the classroom are important qualities in teaching for me.

What Fools These Mortals Be!

The Chronicles of Tex

Editor's Note: — The following article is reprinted, with permission, from the March 9 issue of the Daily Athenaeum, the student newspaper of West Virginia University.

Ah, what fools these mortals be!

They leave, packed with shorts, T-shirts, tennis rackets, bottles of suntan lotions and oil, rolls of film and money. They return, a week later, packed with dirty shorts and T-shirts, tennis rackets, empty bottles of suntan lotion and oil, rolls of redundant pictures of drunk, sunburned friends and ocean sunsets, and no money.

I am one of the wise ones. I go home for Spring Break. I don't blow two hundred dollars in a week. I eat three meals a day. I get my term papers out of the way, read the volumes of books I'm supposed to digest by the end of the semester. Spring Break is the only time out of the entire year that I am not wild and crazy. It is my time to catch up as the rest of the university falls behind.

So I don't wear white my first week back to campus. So my nose isn't red and peeling. So I haven't stayed up, driving all night. So I am one of the smart ones.

Walter got suckered into it this year. He'd always gone home for Spring Break, like me, but because he is out to change his image, he opted for the more popular route. The boy is becoming positively unflappable. Nothing I said to him would change his mind. He was determined to go and suffer with his fellow Florida-bound vacationers.

"You'll come back with no nose, no money and no sleep," I reminded him.

"It's something I have to do." Walter replied, speed-reading his horde of books because he was going to leave them behind. I couldn't imagine Walter without his library. I was truly worried.

He returned a week later with no nose, no money and no sleep.

"You look awful." I said cheerfully.

"I feel great," he said cheerfully. "I met this beautiful girl. Her name is Melissa Pissoffa. She's from WVU."

"Great," I replied sarcastically. "You travel 1,200 miles to meet a girl from the very university you are attending!"

"She's worth it!" Walter remained adamant.

"Hey, that name sounds familiar. Doesn't she have kind of a really oversized nose?" I asked.

"Nothing's the matter with her nose!" Walter replied vehemently.

"Well, you can meet her if you want," Walter said, glaring. "There's going to be a Ft. Lauderdale party this weekend at the house of another guy I met down there. Everybody that went to Lauderdale is invited."

"But Walter," I reminded him, "I didn't go to Lauderdale. I don't have a tan. They'll suspect something."

"Don't worry about it." Walter replied, diving into the first of his horde of books again. "By Friday everyone will have more or less lost their tan."

Walter was right, of course, and I have never been one to pass up a good time.

"I'm leaving," I announced to no one in particular, since Walter had already disappeared in search of his date. I knew I didn't have a chance to make it with any of the girls, being in competition with all those tans Walter had assured me would have faded by now. I was half-way to the door when a vision floated by. I was awe struck. She was beautiful. Long blonde hair, big blue eyes, wearing — of course — a white gauze blouse to accent her tan. I made a 180-degree turn, took a deep breath and headed back to the beer. I might not have a chance with her now I thought to myself, but sooner or later her deep tan would fade, and we'd be on the same level and I could meet her then. The future held bright promise. In the meantime I would simply follow my vision around and feast my eyes on her while trying to learn everything I could about her.

"Hey, Pale-face," someone greeted me. "Let me guess," my antagonist continued, "you went to Lauderdale and fell askeep under an umbrella everyday you were there, and that's why you don't have a tan."

"Very funny," I replied. Great come-back.

I had done the right thing. My parents needed me. My mother had been overjoyed to see me when I first got home.

"Tex? Is that you?" she greeted me as I crashed through the front door loaded down with laundry and books. "Gee, it seems like you were just home for Christmas yesterday, and now you're back again. How long will you be home this time? When do you go back to school?" she asked eagerly.

With these warm thoughts of home, I followed the girl in the white gauze shirt the entire night. Sometimes I lost track of her, but she usually surfaced again. I asked someone at the party, nonchalantly, if she was with someone, and I was informed she was. It was hard, but I asked if that someone she was with had a tan, and again I got an affirmative answer. It doesn't matter, I told myself. I made the right decision.

It was getting late. The house was clearing out, the beer was all but gone. I still didn't know my Vision's name, but the next time I saw her I was going to introduce myself and find out who she was.

"Hey Walter," I called, spotting him, looking awkward as usual, by the door. "Are you leaving?" I asked.

"In just a second. I'm waiting for Melissa."

"Yeah, I'm waiting for someone too," I said. And as I finished my sentence, I looked up and there SHE was. She walked over toward me, smiling, heading for the door and her date waiting outside. This was my chance.

"Are you ready to go, Walter?" the Vision asked my sun-tanned roommate.

"Sure. Hey, I want you to meet my roommate, Tex. Tex, this is Melissa Pissoffa."

"You're Melissa?" I repeated, my jaw unhinged. I was shaking her hand but I hardly even realized it. "I-I've heard so much about you," I mumbled. I definitely had had the wrong girl in mind.

"Oh, Walter is too sweet," she smiled at him. Nerdy, Test-of-your-Life Walter was dating this bombshell. I was confused. This was Walter, the guy who hadn't missed a class in his four years of college until I locked him into the bathroom one day. What did this stunning blonde see in Walter? "You're awful lucky to have a roommate like Walter," Melissa continued. "He looks so handsome with his tan, and so cute with his little peeling nose!"

That was it. I knew then I'd made a mistake.

The peeling, the suntan lotions, the all-night drive, it was all worth it. Walter was sporting his prize. Walter had been right.

Ah, what a fool this mortal be!

Small organization has openings for young executives. Good pay, good future, job satisfaction.

We're the Coast Guard.

We may be small (about 37,000 strong) but our jobs are some of the most important ones in the country.

As you probably know, we're in the business of saving lives and property.

But we're also charged with protecting our coastlines, our Great Lakes, our waterways. Regulating the new 200-mile fishery conservation zone. Intercepting narcotics trafficking. Monitoring the vessels that come and go at all of our major ports.

Big jobs. Requiring top people.

That's why we need good, qualified, ambitious men and women.

Put your Bachelor's Degree to work.

We're especially interested if you have a technical degree—in engineering, science, mathematics, or computers. We've got the work that takes your special talents and skills.

Once you finish officer's candidate school—18 weeks in Yorktown, Virginia—we'll give you a job with responsibility. You work with the most advanced equipment and technology known. It's good work, good surroundings, with men and women of your talent and abilities.

The benefits. And the rewards.

A starting salary of over $10,000 that can increase by over 40% in your first three years with normal promotion and seniority raises.

Free medical and dental care. A quarters allowance. Tuition assistance for off-duty education. Thirty days of paid vacation a year.

And a generous retirement plan for those who make the Coast Guard a career.

Plus the reward of performing in an organization that is considered the very best in the nation.

How to apply.

See your college placement office, or call toll free 800-424-8883 (except Wash. D.C., Hawaii, Alaska) for more information.

The Coast Guard needs officers. What other company will make you an officer and give you a job fitting your title after 18 weeks?

Our Representative will be here March 29, 1979

extremely social and your range of interests is wide, if not always very deep. The field of publicity will attract you and you would be good at it, or in any similar showy and exciting environment.

Cautious and precise, a person whose mystic number is four may well achieve great personal fortune. You are very self-disciplined and seldom approve of spendthrift methods of living. Perhaps because growth is attractive to you, spring is your best season.

Five is sociable, quick and changeable. If this is your number, you are fun to be with most of the time, but you are capricious; in some instances, you can be unexpectedly harsh. April and May are the best months in the year for you, and your bright mentality will do well in one of the fields of communications. You have a talent for organizing things, and have always been independent of thought and opinion.

A six person is romantic and artistic by nature. You are gentle in manner, sometimes possibly deceptively so. People might think you are easy to sway because of your mild exterior, but they would soon find themselves to be much mistaken. You are rocklike in your stand on your convictions, steadfast in your affections. Security in life appeals to you, and winter, your best season, is also your favorite. You are philosophical in most things, lucky with money and black is the color that favors your fortune.

If you are a seven, you are also deceptive, but in a different way than six. Seven is stubborn and self-assertive on the outside, masking a great warmth of heart and unusual consideration. You are modest and independent. In work, you will often achieve great success although you start off with typically seven-like modesty.

Eight has great courage and personal bravery and you prefer things to be honest and forthright. You are aggressive and will persist at a task or a problem until it is done or solved. Yellow is your color and the middle of each season favors you and your life.

Nine is the number of human understanding. You may well have a great tendency toward personal sacrifice for the good of others. Careers in the medical field and in social welfare often attract people whose number is nine. Late summer best suits your nature. Despite the gentleness in your nature, there is a really stubborn streak in you and, in some cases, you may be quite eccentric in your attitudes. You hide your occasional pessimism in hard work, and your capacity for patience is near legendary.

The Student Government Association

To The Losers . . .

Of course you're disappointed. It was a tough campaign to say the least. Long hours planning stategy, dorm-storming, poster-hanging, and stretching your $40 spending limit into $100 worth of propaganda.

You've blown-off most of this weeks classes and probably a few tests, consumed 100 gallons of coffee, and incensed your roommate by turning your dorm room into a campaign headquarters.

Your ideas for change have bee ridiculed and rebuffed. Your character has been used and abused by people you don't even know. Yet, somehow you've survived it all with your smile still intact for election day. It's just too bad elections are left up to voters.

Well, the ordeal is over. In an election one gets all or nothing and you've ended up with the latter. However, by running for an office you've assumed a responsibility to become involved in University goverance and to keep the student body aware of current issues.

There are a myriad of positions open to any Villanova student. These include The Standing Committees of the University Senate which are a very important part in the formulation of University policy. These committees include the areas of Student Life, Budget, Rank and Tenure, Rules and Review, Athletic Advisory, Social Action, University Planning, and Academic Policy. These committees' produce the resolutions which ultimately become Senate legislation.

The Student Government Assembly is currently being reorganized to make it a more effective organization. The committees of the SGA assembly will be concerned with the everyday problems encountered by students at Villanova. As you can see, the possibilities are limitless.

Finally, you should perform what is known as the "watchdog" function. Make sure that Student Senators work towards accomplishing what they promised in their respective campaigns. Attend the Caucus meetings and find out what's going on. Make your ideas known to any Senator who will listen and even to those who won't. In other words . . . BUST CHOPS. It's a campaign tradition long lost in Villanova politics.

To The Winners:

During his 1978 bid for Student Body President, Vinnie Caprio, once said, "I'm not afraid of losing . . . I'm afraid of winning." This statement sums up the realities of Student Government at Villanova. It's a full-time job that offers little or no reward. (unless you count having Father Driscoll call you by your first name.)

An endless stream of meetings will parade across your calendar. You will be accused of "doing nothing" in a governing structure that is completely at the mercy of the Administration and Board of Trustees. You have no power as a Senator, repeat, there is absolutely no power which accompanies your new position. You'll be fighting a no win battle to control tuition increases and cuts in student services. But worst of all, you'll be doing all this for a student population who seemingly couldn't care less.

Welcome to the Villanova Merry-Go-Round.

—Tom Platt

On Graduation Day

Dear Seniors,

The most blessed event is just around the corner (and I don't mean Easter). The Colleges of Commerce & Finance and Nursing will graduate on May 14, 1979 while the Colleges of Arts & Sciences and Engineering will graduate on May 15, 1979. Four years of studying, partying, attendance at cultural and sporting events and Cat's Eyes are coming to a close. Correction — 3 years of Cat's Eyes. Four years of Villanova and what it has meant to you will culminate on Graduation Day.

Parents, who have in most cases footed a possible $25,000 education bill and other related fees, are taking days off from work, are traveling miles and paying expensive hotel rates to see their son or daughter graduate. The Baccalaureate Mass will commence at 10:00 a.m. and will probably run 45 minutes to an hour. Prospective graduates and their families will then go to lunch at some nearby restaurant and reminisce over the four years of college and the valuable experience learned. About 1:30 p.m., a parade of graduates and their relatives will head back to Villanova for the moment they've all been waiting for.

Picture the Scene:

Scene I.

The Fieldhouse is packed with approximately 4,000 people all anxiously awaiting for the festivities to begin. Through the front doors comes the Class of 1979, followed by their respective faculty members, administrators and honorary speakers. Ushers are running up and down frantically making sure the isles of seats are filled accordingly. The place seems to be in mass confusion. Cameras are flashing at a rate of 1 per second while the graduates, hopelessly try to locate their families in the stands. The participants in the graduation are finally seated and eyes are now shifted to the stage which seats a few students, administrators, and honorary guests.

Scene II.

This scene is a little less intense, whispering has ceased, and the camera flashing has slowed down to a rate of 1 per 15 seconds. A few words of kindness are expressed by some administrators to the students about the important contribution they have made to Villanova (about $25,000). The Honorary degree recipients will each speak for 2-5 minutes on a topic of their own choice. The Student speaker from each college will then give a 5 minute dissertation on their feelings on a given subject. I think it's their own feelings, or does the screening committee really screen adverse Villanova propaganda. Nevertheless, the speakers make a fine and eloquent speech. The Curtain falls and preparations are made for the next act.

Scene III.

Father President Driscoll is about to address the Assembly. The Fieldhouse is motionless. They anxiously await the verdict from Fr. Driscoll. Fr. Driscoll approaches the podium and says, "The Class of 1979 has now successfully completed four years of Villanova education and are now graduated." What's this? No roll call? No diploma? What's going on here? Is this how our parents are rewarded for sending us to Florida for four consecutive Spring Breaks, footing the bill for four years of tuition and room and board and buying that new car for Graduation day? Graduation seems to be anticlimatic rather than climatic. But wait there's more. A box is placed at the exit doors. The box reads "Alumni Contributions."

So ends another Great Story about Villanova University.

Respectfully yours,
Joseph T. Cassidy
Student Body President

TALENT SHOW

By Cheryl Seifert

The words "talent show" very seldom spark much interest in the general public except for the few hardnosed hams who think this just might be the break they've been waiting for. But just add the words "prize money" — and again for the BIG EVENT — VILLANOVA'S SECOND ANNUAL TALENT SHOW, scheduled for April 5th, at 7:00 in Kennedy Mall. Prizes were big last year, and they're even bigger this time around: $100 FIRST; $75 SECOND; $50 THIRD. Sound good? With that kind of money, I'll bet we'll even entice some closet accordian player to step out to the tune of "Beer Barrel Polka!"

So, if you have talent of any kind — well, almost any kind — and you're interested in picking up some fast money and having a hell of a time doing it, stop by the Villanova Union Office today and fill out an application.

Important dates to remember: March 27 — all applications due in Union office; March 29 — a screening/preview session of ALL acts; April 5 — THE BIG EVENT!

A Commuter Primer

By CHRIS EHART

I am a victim of circumstance.

As a result of Villanova's unfortunate location, my unfortunate birth to my parents who live in Wayne, and my limited funds, my college experience hasn't been that glorious period of growth and maturity I was hoping for.

Residents just don't realize how colleges are not geared toward commuters. All those Wine and Cheese parties, Coffee Houses, and exam-time doughnuts at 10 p.m. are no good to us if we're at home.

Since most of my resident friends are unaware of commuter dynamics, I have prepared a handy COMMUTER PRIMER which we non-residents can give to ignorant dormies.

Part I — The Thrill of Commuting

A. By Private Mechanical Means — Cars can be great — if you have a sticker, an 8:30 class and money for gas and repairs. Try to get in the lot 9:30 or later. Keep trying. Keep wondering why you paid $25 for the sticker. Try to get to school: get stuck in your snowbound driveway; get caught in traffic on 320 (curse loudly); get a flat from a Famous Delaware Valley pothole. What fun!

Bikes are a pain. Traveling along Lancaster is rotten — no shoulders, few sidewalks, crazy drivers. I'm also too scared my bike will be stolen or mutilated by the time I have to leave.

B. By Public Mechanical Means — PT is my lifesaver. Some people however, do not live anywhere near a train or bus route, so please don't recommend PT on all those snowy days.

Train fares are a rip — unless your dad works for the railroad. Mine doesn't. Trains are also on time when I'm late.

Next week: Types of Commuters.

Dr. Nolan's 'Jericho Mile'

By JOYCE POGGI

On Sunday, March 18 ABC-TV aired the world premiere of Dr. Patrick Nolan's play, "The Jericho Mile," starring Peter Strauss.

Nolan wrote the screenplay, ten years ago and sold it to ABC in 1972. He developed the idea for a television presentation from an article in a prison magazine about an inmate who ran close to a 4-minute-mile.

Peter Strauss, who is remembered for his fine performance as Rudy Jordache in Irwin Shaw's "Rich Man, Poor Man," plays a magnificent leading role. He is Murphy, an inmate of the Folsom State Penitentiary in California serving life sentence for patricide. He is a man alone pretending nothing exists outside the prison walls.

Running against no one and without training serves as an outlet for Murphy. Nolan explains, "running is a way of defending with the walls up." One day, after someone puts a stopwatch to him, he discovers he runs close to a 4-minute-mile. He has a chance at the Olympic gold medal, but in the end, run his "own Olympics."

The story, however, is not of an inmate who runs. The story deals with racial conflict, social groups and man in his environment.

"Running is just a framework," states Nolan. "The story is of the interrelationships between man and groups in prison, and the way in which his potential causes the prison to reorganize and redefine its potential. But it doesn't last.

"Murphy has two fates: one is decided by the prison population and one is decided by the Olympic committee. But nothing changes in the end."

Nolan's account of brotherhoods and cliques which develop in prison is quite vivid. In one scene, the labor brigade antagonizes those in a picket line boycotting construction of a running track. Finally, all the inmates begin to work for Murphy in a common cause.

The movie ends the way it began with all the inmates suddenly taking notice of Murphy's fantastic speed.

Peter Strauss, star of "The Jericho Mile."

The film includes actual inmates as well as actors from the film industry. "Written for the east coast," Nolan has several references to Villanova. He uses the names of several runners and students, and also plays on the name of Track Coach Jumbo Elliott to the film's version of coach Belloitt.

As Nolan talks about his triumph, he is very modest and reserved. What pleases him most about the entire project is that the warden of the state penitentiary approved his script. "There were many problems attached to filming on location inside the penitentiary. The warden was "my harshest critic about the content and spirit of the script."

Nolan is a 1955 graduate of Villanova and has been teaching here for 17 years. He has been writing plays and screen plays for 19 years. His first production was in 1968 entitled, "The Hourglass Moment."

Later, "The Jericho Mile" was written and finally brought to television. ABC was very excited about the movie, largely because it is unique in its class. And rightly so. The story as well as Strauss' performance are potential Emmy-award winners.

It is refreshing to finally view a movie of man's self-determination and of his association with other men in such real situation. This is a movie long to be remembered.

Editors' Note: The Villanova Union will present "The Jericho Mile" on the BIG TV, next week in the West Lounge. Check the Big TV schedule for date and time.

Villanova Fights To Free Russian Jew

By TONY CENTONE

According to the Helsinki Accord signed by the Soviet Union in 1975, "The right of an individual to leave one's own country is universal." However, it has been evident for the past 50 years that what Russian officials say and what they do are two entirely different things. This is true in the case of emigration also. Particularly in regard to Jews who wish to leave Russia. Thousands of Jews are denied exit from the Soviet Union each year on the grounds that their job (or someone in their family's job) deals with "secret classified material" which can't be allowed to leave the country. One such case is that of Alexander "Sasha" Yakir.

Sasha, a 21 year-old engineering major, has not come in contact with such material but his father, a "mechanical engineer," has. That is why Sasha's family has been denied exit from the Soviet Union. Sasha's father, Yevgeny, subsequently lost his job after applying for an exit visa and had to find menial work which barely enables his family to live. Later, when Sasha decided he wanted to leave by himself, hoping that someday he would be able to get his parents out, he was denied exit by Moscow officials on what they called "humanitarian grounds" — "We do not split families."

Sasha is one of the many reasons Bradd Boxman and other Jewish Union members traveled to Washington on February 14 to meet Congressional Leaders and State Department Officials who are attempting to free hundreds of Sasha's who are being detained behind the "Iron Curtain." The trip, Bradd said, was a success.

Students from Villanova and colleges all over the east coast met first with State Department Official Bill Farren of the "Bilateral Affairs Division of Soviet Desk."

He spoke of such U.S. plans as "wheat curtailment," in which the U.S. would threaten to cut back on their wheat export to Russia unless the Soviets eased their emigration restrictions. The problem with this, Farren says, is that Soviet officials would rather "let their people starve than lose face over an issue with the West.

The lobbyist next held a standing vigil in front of the Soviet Embassy. The group presented embassy officials with a petition naming those individuals they wished released by the Soviets. Then they capped off the day by meeting with members of Congress and aids to such influencial senators as Kennedy and Ribicoff. Fr. Drinan, a Massachusetts congressman, told the group of the "Jackson-Vanik Amendment" that Congress produced which, he said, is "the only real stimulus toward bringing about a liberalization of their (Soviet) emigration policies." An aid to Representative Ozzie Myers (D-Pa.) spoke of drafting a "joint letter of Congress" to petition the Soviets to allow a long list of "refuseniks" to leave the country.

Bradd Boxman speaks with Cong. Bob Edgar.

The greatest amount of cooperation came from Delaware County's Representative Bob Edgar (D-Pa.). Mr. Edgar showed the group a list of the vast legislation he had worked on toward easing Soviet restrictions on emigration. In a personal letter to Villanova, he expressed his concern over the difficulties facing Sasha and others like him and he pledged to work for their release. It is hoped that the promises of these men will hold true, but even if they do this does not mean definite success.

Not only has Sasha been denied exit from the Soviet Union but he has been drafted into the armed forces as well. That is why he is presently in hiding from the government. When he is found (and it is certain he will be found) he will be in quite a bit of trouble.

What can we do as students? Write to the U.S.S.R. and demand Sasha's release. A great amount of letters may be the only thing that insures Sasha's safety. You can pick up post cards at Bartly cafeteria every Wednesday and Friday between 1:30 and 2:30. The cost is only 20 cents.

Bradd related an instance similar to that of Sasha's in which an outspoken Jew who was refused emigration was brought to a detention center by Soviet officials. "Do you know what this is?? an official asked showing him a stack of letters. "No" responded the man. "This is the only thing keeping you alive."

On April 23, the Jewish Union will hold a "Free Sasha Day." The event will have a three-fold purpose: 1) to encourage the writing of letters, cards, and petitions to the Soviet Union to insure Sasha's release; 2) to educate as many people as possible about the injustices committed against "refuseniks" in the Soviet Union; 3) to express our collective and individual concern for the welfare of a fellow human being. It's hoped that as many individuals as possible will join the Jewish Union, the Center for Concern, and the Campus Ministry in making this day a success. For further information contact Bradd Boxman at 353-2599 or the Center for Concern at 527-2100, ext. 760. Your involvement could help insure the safety of a fellow student and a fellow human-being. Sasha could be you.

We've Got Your Number

By CAROL GOLDFARB

The 70's rage of astrology and "what sign are you" is fastly being replaced by numerology and "what number are you."

What's in a name? A numerologist will reply "much much more than you suppose." Although numerology has gained most of its present popularity in recent years, it is actually one of the oldest of the psychic sciences.

The name number is an expression of a person's developed personality, and a key to achievement. The first step is to find the number represented by the name. This is done with the figure apphabet:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I
J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R
S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z

By reference to the chart, any name can be transcribed into figures, letter by letter. When added, totals can be reduced to the primary number representing the name vibration. As an example, the Name Suzanne Marie Tavani:

S	U	Z	A	N	N	E
1	3	8	1	5	5	5
	M	A	R	I	E
	4	1	9	9	5
T	A	V	A	N	I
2	1	4	1	5	9

The total letters in Suzanne is 28; Marie is 28; Tavani is 22; thus 28+28+22=78; 7+8=15; 1+5=6

One indicates total independence. Leadership qualities are very much present, coupled with a desire to be the one in front. You may have a tendency to be impatient, even reckless at times. October and November are the decisive months of the year for you. You can be extravagant with your money and in your behaviour, but when bold and decisive steps need to be taken, yours is the leadership and the courage required.

If you are a two, you are diplomatic, and most understanding and sympathetic of other people's problems. Autumn is the best time of year for you, be it to make decisions or to handle those deep streaks of moodiness which sometimes assail you. There is a streak of egotism in your nature but, more often than not, you hide it from the outside world.

Three indicates qualities of affection and generosity. The duality can be seen between the happy-go-lucky exterior and the emotional, sometimes melancholy interior of your nature. The high summer is your best time; you are

CENTER FOR CONCERN

Gay Rights

On the last Sunday of June, 1969, the New York City Police raided a gay bar called the "Stonewall." This time the Lesbians and Gay men did not go peacefully and the result marked the beginning of the Gay Liberation movement: The Stonewall Riot.

Ten years later, after many Gay Liberation Day marches throughout the country, San Francisco Superintendent Harvey Milk announced to his friends the idea of having a National Gay Rights March on Washington, D.C. Last Fall Harvey Milk was assassinated. In memory of Harvey Milk and to commmorate the 10-year anniversary of the Stonewall Riot, Lesbian and Gay people across the country began to think seriously about a march on this nation's capital.

The weekend before Villanova's Spring Break, Philadelphia hosted an historic conference. Delegates from over 170 Gay organizations across the country met to determine if and when there should be a march. Late Saturday evening February 24, after seven hours of heated debate, the motion to have the march passed. After two more hours of deliberation the date was set for October 14, 1979. On Sunday the delegates were faced with the problem of forming a structure that would organize the march. The Lesbian Caucus demanded complete gender parity in all positions and "totally non-gender specific language in publications, press releases, and public statements." A similar demand was made by the Third World Caucus, who asked for 20% overall Third World representation. Late Sunday evening a structure was agreed upon that met all the demands of each caucus. The elected officials im-

Southern Rock at Fieldhouse

By STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

The Charlie Daniels Band, one of the better known names in Southern Rock appeared in the Villanova Field House last Sunday. Unfortunately there weren't too many northerners there to greet them. In any event it was, for the people who attended, like having your own private concert.

From what I was able to see (and I had excellent seats) Charlie Daniels is not a flashy type of band. The musicians are plain ordinary guys just like the rest of us, they appear to be nothing special.

On Sunday morning I went down to the field house to watch the crew set up. There were three tractor-trailer trucks full of equipment. I got to talking with one of the truck drivers who was on his way to the St. Davids Inn; he said that Charlie Daniels is the best act that he has worked for.

Charlie Daniels has been in the music business for most of his life. Reflecting on his life he says, "I never wanted to do much but play music." And indeed he has done exactly what he wanted to do, and he does it well.

Born in Wilmington, N.C., Daniels is the son of a lumberjack. He has been playing music since his early childhood except for the five weeks that he worked in a Denver junkyard.

Daniels first got his career started with a honkey-tonk group called Jaguar. They played every dive bar from North Carolina to Texas and he got his first recording contract with Epic while playing with Jaguar. The first single he released was called "Jaguar."

After playing with Jaguar for several years he decided he would move to Nashville. Once established in Nashville he became a session musician playing mainly guitar but filling in on bass, fiddle and banjo and mandolin. Daniels performed on three Bob Dylan albums: Nashville Skyline, Self Portrait and New Morning. He has also played with Ringo Starr, Al Kooper, Pete Seeger and Earl Scruggs.

At the same time Daniels was a producer. He was producer for a now defunct group of the late 60's — The Youngbloods. Producing their two best selling albums, Elephant Mountain and Rule the Wind, he decided that he was soon destined to be a solo performer. Daniels currently has six albums on the market and each one seems to become more popular than the previous one.

His most recent album, High and Lonesome, seemed to establish his band as a pleasant combination between country and rock. Hence he appeals to both audiences. His newest album, soon to be released, Midnight Wind, will introduce music that will defy categorization.

At the fieldhouse the most notable songs played by CDB were "Birmingham Blues," "South's Gonna Do It Again," "Whiskey," and "Long Haired Country Boy." Villanova was the last leg of their college tour and at the end of the month they will be doing a nine month tour from Los Angeles to New York. So if you missed the Charlie Daniels Band on Sunday catch 'em next time around.

A Drama Of Life, Death and Love

By PAUL VIGGIANO

When war is declared, Truth is the first casualty.
Arthur Ponsonby

War isn't pretty, as a matter of fact, a famous individual once said that it is hell. We have had our share of Vietnam movies — Coming Home, Heroes, The Boys in Company C, Who'll stop the rain? and Rolling Thunder. But along comes a movie that achieves a humanity and eloquence that some of the others touched but could not sustain — The Deer Hunter.

"The Deer Hunter" links life in an upstate Pennsylvania steeltown to the Vietnam War, and with boldness and passion, comes closer than any previous film in defining the moral strengths and weaknesses of America in the second half of the 20th Century.

Its protagonists are three young steelworkers, Michael (Robert De Niro), Nick (Christopher Walken) and Steven (John Savage), who went willingly to the war as an escape from the oppressive routines of the factory and from a macho sense of adventure. For the three men, that spirit is reflected in tamer form in their drunken weekend pursuit of deer to shoot in the Allegheny Mountains above the grimy steel town of Clairton in western Pennsylvania.

The drama begins and ends in the same place, this small town where life is bounded by the Russian Orthodox Church, The center of spirituality. The tavern is the preserve of men who spoot pool, argue and spray Rolling Rock at each other.

The young women, who work in supermarkets and raise children, are simple and beautiful while life is filled with expectation. The older women resemble Russian dolls, stout and stern. The church is the rock and the ritual for the women. The deer hunt is the ritual in which the men find release.

De Niro is the leader in the friendship, solitary and self-reliant in the hunt. He is the best of the hunters, who believes almost mystically, that "one shot is what it's all about." Director Michael Cimino makes the hunt a religious experience, one that views the deer as a symbol of gentle innocence and admires the clean killer who stalks it.

After a drunken spree in the mountains and a wild Russian wedding, the three men go off to Vietnam for no other reason than that the United States is at war. Their patriotism is innocent, uncomplicated and touching, but they are unprepared for the holocaust that awaits them.

"The Deer Hunter" is brutal but swift in its war scenes. A Viet Cong slaughters the innocent with a grenade into a huddled group of helpless civilians hiding in a shelter. The film is at its most savage when the three friends meet two years later. They are prisoners in a tiger cage suspended in a raging stream. Above them, their captors are forcing each prisoner to play a deadly game of Russian roulette. It is a tense and savage sequence where death hangs on the pull of the trigger: an empty click, if lucky, or a roar that the victim never hears as his life explodes in a fountain of brains and blood. The film is laden, but never burdened, with metaphor, and this image of suicide is its most effective.

Liv as 'Mama'

By PATI NASELLA

If the ideal Mama could be conveyed on stage in all her love and unselfishness then there would only be one person for the job — Liv Ullman. The source of strength and love is the part Liv plays as her Norwegian family faces many external conflicts in San Fransisco.

I Remember Mama began it's off broadway performances last Monday night at the Shubert. Presented by Alexander H. Cohen and Hildy Parks, this new Rodgers, Channin and Meehan musical comedy is based on the 1944 Broadway hit by John Van Druten and Stories by Kathryn Forbes.

The story revolves around Mama who somehow irons out all dilemmas whether they involved her children, husband, sisters or zesty Uncle Chris. Because of her good heart she can see things that seem to pull her family out of their troubles, even if she lies. When Mama tells you the moon is just 35 miles away, you laugh, but then you understand. When Mama tells you that "It is not the End of the World" which was one of my favorite numbers in the play, you believe her.

I have to stop her to say that it is this magnificent portrayal of the perfect mother that warrants Liv's not so magnificent singing. It almost seems appropriate that she can't sing. We all know Mamas can't sing. Right?

Young Katrina, Kristin Vigard, is the oldest daughter and longs to be a writer. She sings "A Writer Writes at Night" which was her rationalisation she used to persuade Mama into letting her write later into the night. She has difficulties in finding subject matter for her stories and this search ends up in a comical mish-mash of historical literature. She eventually writes a story and receives money for it. She hands the money over to her needy family, thus rescuing them from poverty and the need to move back to Norway. The older Katrina, Kate Dezina, narrates the play, which is the story of the people she remembered and loved.

Along with this narration, the stage setting, directed by David Mitchell, brings us into the happy but poor struggling family's life by means of a revolving center stage. There are an innumerable amount of techniques which perfect the play and to mention a few, the use of a spinning stage with steps and rooms attached facilitates the shift of scenes. Suburban scenes are beautifully projected onto the stage by superb lighting. The outdoor scene was so natural with the stage decorated with landscaped shadows.

The orchestra, directed by Philip Lang, developed the change of moods beautifully. It is definitely classy Broadway stuff and will be in New York on May 3.

To recapture that feeling security you had as a child under your mother's wing and to witness the ideal mother, you must see Liv Ullman as "Mama".

I don't think there is any more need for praise, let Liv show you herself. I Remember Mama will appear at the Subert, 250 S. Broad Street and for tickets, call 735-4768.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

There is good news and bad news concerning Cheap Trick at Budokan. First the bad news. Cheap Trick demonstrates how a rock band can nosedive into the world of shallow and meaningless lyrics. Now the good news. Most of the tunes have that irresistible beat that can hardly go unnoticed. The instrumental and vocal appeal camouflage the sad excuse for lyrics, and can appease anyone suffering from rock and roll withdrawl symptoms.

The album was recorded in Tokyo, and from the sound of the shrill screams and cheers, I wouldn't be surprise if the entire population of Japan stormed the music hall for the event. It should be noted that the audiences exuberance doesn't interfere with the energetic musical efforts of Cheap Trick.

Side One is salvaged only by the last song, "Need Your Love." The preceeding cuts fall victim to monotony, lacking a catchy melody line. This can be filed under the category of ordeal rather than interesting listening. "Need Your Love" remedies a seemingly disasterous situation, and from that point on, watch out as Cheap Trick delivers a one-two punch that is incredible.

Side Two revvs up with a driving version of an oldie but goodie, "Ain't That a Shame." This one is sure to become a Cheap Trick standard, as it is already a major factor in the albums saleability. Moving right along, lead singer Robin Zander and boys explode into "I Want You To Want Me," which is my personal favorite. Next, the only cut from their excellent Heaven Tonight Lp to make it on this one, "Surrender." This number was a big underground hit last summer, and loses nothing in the live interpretation. "Goodnight Now" and "Clock Strikes Ten" bring us to the conclusion of Cheap Trick a la Oriental. Despite an awkward opening, by the end you might find yourself cheering for an encore along with the rockers' friends at Budokan.

At the end, a sorrowful peace descends. Survivors pick up their lives, and for those who can manage it, there is hope and love. The level of acting in "The Deer Hunter" is a standard set by the incomparable De Niro. Christopher Walken is superb as the haunted friend who abandons home and life itself. Meryl Streep brings grace, beauty and a definition that transcends mere lines in a script to the role of the woman De Niro loves.

"The Deer Hunter" is a deeply humanistic tale or ordinary people caught up in tragic events. In 183 minutes Cimino skillfully weaves it all together into an absorbing movie of life, death and love. If it doesn't receive the Academy Award for Best Picture, there is no justice.

NROTC VILLANOVA - WHY NOT THE BEST!

Teamwork Is The Key To Assembly's Success

By PETER J. RYAN

If you are a participant in the 4:30 Alumni intramural basketball league you will have already come up against or will soon face a team called "Assembly." What makes this team interesting is the fact that the majority of the members are twice the age of their opponents.

Ed Rideout, who carries the lengthy title of Director of the Alumni Annual Fund, sums up his feelings on Assembly by stating "... we're out there because we love the competiton and it's a good way to meet the students." Assembly consists of eight faculty members, but the nucleus of the team centers around Rideout, Professor Dan Regan (Philosophosy), Ed Collymore, the Director of Social Action and former world class sprinter with Villanova, and Jack Schwarz of the English department.

Rideout credits the success of this squad (currently 2-1) to teamwork. "If we can get eight players at a game we can rotate everyone in and out and play good ball." At 6' 3" Dan Unger has been a key to the Assembly cause while Brian Jones (Sociology) has added considerable experience to the backcourt. "We are always winning more than we lose and in recent years we've made the playoffs," adds Rideout. The team concept of Assembly has been in existence anywhere from 8-10 years and also extends itself to softball.

Mr. Rideout is employed by Villanova to handle the Alumni Fund and consequently spends a good deal of time traveling to cities all over the east coast with the help of Bob Capone in an attempt to obtain donations from this schools graduates. Thus, while participating in the league Mr. Rideout has the opportunity to get a little exercise as well as meeting the future graduates. Rideout's efforts in getting to know the students is apparent when you consider that he is involved in various senate committees and is a moderator of one of Villanova's fraternities. "The important thing is that we have a good time and get a chance to meet the kids," concluded Rideout.

The Assembly Takes A Breather.

Massimino Named Coach Of The Year

Coach of the Year honors go to Villanova's Rollie Massimino. The Wildcats finished with a 9-1 record in the Eastern Eight, with a 64-55 setback at Rutgers being the only blemish. Under Massimino, Villanova has either won or shared the EAA regular season title in all three years its existence.

The youth movement has taken over the EAA as four underclassmen, three of whom are sophomores, were named to the 1979 All-League Team.

Rutger's James Bailey, the lone senior on the squad, considered one of the premier players in the East, was named the Outstanding Player of the Year in the EAA for 1979.

Bailey is joined on the team by Villanova's Alex Bradley (17.1 ppg, 7.7 rpg), Lowes Moore of West Virginia (17.5 ppg), Pitt's Sam Clancy (15.4 ppg, 12.8 rpg) and George Washington's Mike Zagardo (15.8 ppg, 9.0 rpg).

"Jammin James" as Bailey is nicknamed, finished the season strong to climb into second place in the league scoring with an 18.4 ppg average. He also placed fifth in rebounding (8.2 rpg) and 11th in field goal percentage (.505/192-380).

A new honor this season, Rookie of the Year, was awarded to Duquesne's fabulous freshman Bruce Atkins. He led the league in field goal percentage (.609/134-220) and was second in rebounding (10.0), while being the Dukes most consistent performer all season.

Rollie Massimino was named the Coach of the Year in the Eastern Eight.

Frisbee Team

By STEVE KLOEBLEIN

This past Sunday marked the start of the spring season for the Villanova Ultimate Frisbee Team as it hosted a tournament. Teams traveled from Lehigh, Swarthmore, and the Philadelphia Frisbee Club to play at Villanova. The weather for the day was nearly perfect with temperatures soaring into the upper fifties; however, very strong winds that are typical for this early season play dominated the afternoon and had a noticable effect on the quality of play.

Villanova seemed to be effected the most by the wind as they placed fourth in a field of four teams. The team from Swarthmore placed first in the tournament by beating P.F.C. (4-7); and Lehigh (8-2). Lehigh placed second after defeating V.U. (11-8) and then losing to Swarthmore in the second round of competition. Philadelphia placed third by losing to Swarthmore and then beating Villanova (17-10).

While the day was disappointing for Villanova it was not without its bright points. Bill Gallagher led the team's scoring with five goals, C. Scott Fitzgerald followed with three goals and five assists, and Dave Carson also had three goals. The team will be hosting another tournament next Sunday with teams coming from Rutgers, The University of Pennsylvania and Jefferson Medical School.

The ACC Doesn't Have A Monopoly Over Eastern Basketball

By PATRICK FLYNN

In the March 17 issue of "The Sporting News," Associate Editor Mike Douchant complained that the NCAA had offered up a watered-down version of its prestigious basketball tournament, citing St. John's, among other participants, as teams that "should be watching the tournament on television."

One week later, Douchant was praising the reigning Lords of College Basketball for compiling what he now describes as "one of the strong strongest and best-balanced tourney fields ever." In particular, he lauded those same Redmen of St. John's for helping to shoot down the theory that "East is Least," a basketball maxim which Douchant now proclaims "an unjust doctrine that finally should be buried."

What was the reason for this great change in opinion, which is indicative of many experts' reversals? Well, two of the East's finer, but more neglected teams in terms of natural media attention, St. John's and Philadelphia's own Penn Quakers, knocked off the Atlantic coast Conference's best, Duke and North Carolina, respectively, in the second round of the playoffs. In themselves, these games were not earth-shattering occurrences. On any given day, one good team can conquer another. Penn and St. John's are more than good. But, within the context of the NCAA tournament, where each game is a season and everybody is on top in terms of mental preparation, these two conquests afforded Eastern basketball a shot in the arm. They gave this region a re-affirmed winning identify. And they helped to gain back a small protion of the publicity and recognition which Eastern basketball has deserved for so long, but been robbed of by the ink-grabbing exploits of the ACC and other print-gobbing machines call conferences.

In all fairness, I must correct one misconception that has surfaced in this area over the past two weeks, namely that the ACC myth is dead. There never was a myth. Only an exaggeration. Holly Farms and Pilot Life can be assured that they still sponsor one of the best conferences in all of basketball. The real message in the South's "Lost Weekend" is that the teams from the Northeast, the Penns, the St Johns', the Rutgers and, yes, the Villanovas, can stand up to competition from anywhere and come out on top as not. If you don't think so, check out these numbers; Temple, Penn, and St. John's, seeded 7th, 9th and 10th, respectively in the Eastern Regionals, played in seven contests against the ACC clubs (whose champion and runner-up were ranked No. 1 and No. 2 in the same regional), and pulled out no less than six victories over Billy Packer's beloveds. Bringing it a little closer to home, the Big 5 carried a 4-3 slate against its confederate competitors.

Enough numbers. Let's talk about basketball, for real as it's played on the hardwood (or the Tartan Turf — it is 1979). I'm a native of ACC land, one who has spent many a weary hour listening to Lefty Driesell's promises of a "UCLA of the East" and learning to expect something short of that. I grew up with the ACC and learned to marvel at its stars, from Bob McAdoo and Barry Parkhill; through the David Thompson-John Lucas years and finally Phil Ford's dynasty. I was slightly skeptical when I moved up past the Mason-Dixon line looking for hoop action. Honestly, I've seen a different game up here.

It's a game where defense means looking for steals, not Oscars, as a driving ball handler is seldom greeted by two or three opponents who gracefully hit the deck like so many leftovers of a World War II air raid, expecting an offensive foul.

It's a game where the four corners doesn't spell the end of the world, simply because the referees allow the defensive men to play the game and they, in return for the favor, make the best of it by refusing to loaf, by playing forty minutes every game.

Where players earn notoriety between the lines of a gymnasium floor and not the lines of newspaper propaganda.

And where fans are educated and open-minded enough not to sulk and sit home wasting valuable tickets, as the ACC faithful did last weekend when their favorites were left back on campus, of all places, victims of the East's double edged sword.

It's a better game up here, where snow jobs during basketball season refer to the weather and not the media.

There are good things to be said about ACC basketball. A fine record in tournaments (prior to this year's embarrassement) as well as fans who can be as rabid as any when there's a winner in sight, are two examples. But they can't have our Palestra, or the unique pretzel vendors which surround our visit there. They can't touch our streamers, (although Billy P. does call that "debris). They'll never experience Pat's steaks on a windy, 20 degree Friday night after a pleasant triumph or a heartbreaking defeat. They'll never sign Yo-Yo as a free agent.

But more importantly, they can no longer claim basketball supremacy in the Eastern portion of the nation. Bob Weinhaur, Tony Price, Rooney Salters and the gang took care of that for this year at least.

So pack my clothes and hand me my coat. I'm headed home for the weekend and I'll have a lot to talk about.

Paige Hopes For Olympics

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

When Don Paige went out for the track team as a freshman in high school, his coaches knew he had the potential to be a good runner. But through hard work and determination, Don took their opinion one step further and has blossomed into the great runner he is today for Villanova.

Paige, along with the rest of the members of Villanova's Track Team, proved their indoor track supremacy when they clinched the NCAA Track Championships this month. Earlier in the season, the team also took the ICAA Championship.

"At the beginning of every year, we set some goals. Everyone understood that we expected to win the ICAA's, as well as having a good shot at winning the NCAA's," explained Villanova's trackster.

Don Paige was named the outstanding performer in the 1976 Philadelphia Bicentennial Track Classic.

Last year, the track team lost one of the greats in Villanova track history, Mark Belger, to graduation. Paige acknowledged that last years's team was good, but "this year's team is one of the strongest teams ever. We're strong in every event dealing with the track."

This year in the NCAA Championships, Paige set an American record in the 1000-meters and a world record in the 1000-yard run. When asked to describe what it's like being Number One, Don paused to think. "It was great to win but one thing has to be remembered. Western schools don't run heavily indoors. I consider myself one of the top indoor runners; I run it well. But, odds have it, I'll be beaten."

The first outdoor meet of the season is the last weekend in April, the Penn Relays. "This meet is a big event, a lot of fun and a chance to really get psyched up to win," noted the junior Finance major. "Some people say they've never seen a track meet. Well, this gives the student body a chance to come and see us close to home. This is the best meet ever to see. It has runners from all over."

After becoming the best, motivation often becomes difficult. But the Villanova speedster explained that it becomes a personal thing. "You have to uphold your name. The Championship gives you confidence to train harder for better times. Besides, the outdoor season is when the Europeans start to run and the're excellent runners."

To pick one race as his greatest accomplishment was hard for Paige. He considers every race a milestone. But to single out one specific victory, Don chose his victory over Mark Belger at Madison Square Garden. "Mark is a great runner but I set a world record in the 1000-yard, 11-lap run. It was my third straight Milrose Games victory at the Garden."

The long-range plan in the future o Dlon Paige is an event which everyone in the country hopes for, The Olympics. Paige is no different and hopes he can add the Olympics to his progression as one of the premier runners in the world.

Banner Year For Attendance

After a stumbling beginning in 1977 when the then Eastern Collegiate Basketball League held its first Championsip Basketball Tournament in the Spectrum in Philadelphia and only 8,194 showed up for the three day event, the conference now known as the Eastern Eight, has come of age.

Using a new format this year, first round games were played on the home court of the top four teams at the conclusion of regular season play. There was more interest in Eastern Eight league games and this interest was compounded in the first round, using four sites instead of the previous Tournament format of afternoon and evening doubleheaders. The four first round games drew 19,699. The largest crowd attended the Duquesne-West Virginia game at Morgantown where 9,630 showed up.

The Tournament drew 50,91 fans for the semi-final and Championship games, with the final game a sellout as 16,009 fans attended. The semi-finals drew 15,208 which broke the all time Pittsburgh college basketball attendance record set last year in the semi-finals when 13,376 were in attendance.

Some comparison of how well the Eastern Eight Tournament has grown is shown in attendance figures from some of this season's other Conference Tournaments:

Atlantic Coast Conference: 63,000 (15,750 1st round — 47,25 semis and finals) Southwest Conference: 58,549 (12,202 1st round — 15,449 quarter-finals — semi and finals for total of 46,347). Big Eight: 58,111 (28,900 1st round — 15,703 semis — 13,508 finals). Eastern Eight: 50,916 (19,699 1st round — 31,217 semis and finals). ECAC New England: 24,25 (11,800 semis — 12,450 sellout fo finals). Sun Belt Conference: 19,300 (7,100 1st round — 8,10 semis — 4,100 finals). ECC 11,231 for semis and finals.

Women Finish Fourth In Easterns

Freshman Sue Giordano (Yardley, Pa.) won two individual events and combined with Junior Mary Hogan (Glen Falls, N.Y.) and Sophomore Laura Proske (Staten Island, N.Y.) for a victory in the senior trio competition at the 10th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Synchronized Swimming Conference Championships this past weekend at Radnor Senior High School.

Villanova, the host school, finished fourth in the two-day affair which was won by the State University of New York at Albany, which finished with a team total of 53-1/2 points.

Wheaton College of Norton, Massachusetts led after Friday's first two events. Susanne Hoff-Mullen, one of the nation's leading synchronized swimmers, paced Wheaton by winning the senior figures and senior solo events. She was paired with teammate Diane De Rosier to win the senior duet competition.

Giordano helped Villanova garner 40 points when she was a victorious in junior figures and junior solo. She and Proske finished one-two in junior solos to give the Wildcatalinas an early five-point lead after three events.

Big Bucks In Pro Sports

By ELMORE SMITH

In an era of free agentry, overnight millionaires, and big buck superstars, one cannot help but wonder as to where it is all going to end. The days of taking the family out to the ballpark are gone forever, unless you have a bank account similar to that of J. Paul Ghetty. The one dollar bleacher seat went out with one cent bubble gum, and the price of a beer and a hot dog is equivalent to the average working man's hourly wage. Even with the ever spiraling inflation rate, it appears professional sports is not keeping pace.

At one time during the college basketball season this year, I had the opportunity of watching the Dean of college basketball, Al Maguire interviewing one of the ACC's premier players, Duke's Gene Bank's. It was teaming with the usual pomp and circumstance not uncommon in such interviews; but then Maguire got right to the point. He asked Banks what he would do if someone from the NBA approached him with an offer of half of a million dollars to play on his team in the NBA next year. The unflinching Banks, replied without batting an eye "Your only offering me half of a million?"

I was literally spellbound. How in God's name can a twenty year old with two years college experience demand more than a half million dollars? Marx must be rolling over in his grave. It is known fact that the big bonuses are causing increased ticket prices, but Banks is only a case in point. The NBA's attendance figures have dropped drastically in the last two years. Some of Baseball's premier franchises, Oakland and Pittsburgh to name two, are in grave danger of going under. Professional Football's only saving grace is only due to the fact that each team plays at most ten home games, but even at that you can't touch a ticket at an Eagles game for under eighteen dollars.

Granted, professional sports is a business. It is a business that treats men like herds of cattle, takes the best years of their lives, and then discards them for slaughter, with little or no compassion. Professionals have the right to earn good money, but at the same time unless an equilibrium is reached somewhere along the line, the bubble is going to burst. In the meantime ticket prices continue to rise. Television anyone?

Women's Track Holds Marathon

By MARY ELLEN BORKOWSKI

The women's track team has tried several ways to earn money this past winter for their proposed trip to Hawaii to compete in some meets. Their most unusual method occurred this past weekend on Villanova's track. The women ran a twenty-four hour relay with people pledging money for each mile the team completed.

The relay started at 4:30 on Friday afternoon and continued until Saturday afternoon at 4:30. Ten women were involved with each running a mile at a time before handing off the baton. The runners were Doriane Lambelet, Mary Ellen Borkowski, Brigid Leddy, Sue Shea, Katie Thompson, Amelia Cain, Carol Gilsinger, Jennifer Whitfield, Brandy Johnson and Maureen Sullivan. Eight of the ten runners were still running well at the completion of the relay.

The women were hoping to break the collegiate record of 218 miles and 376 yards, but their mark of 202.5 miles fell just short. However, the team made their second goal of breaking 200 miles. Each girl ran very well, covering about 23 miles during the 24-hour period. Sue Shea averaged 6:31 per mile to have the fastest average with three other runners averaging under seven minutes per mile.

The women would like to thank all those who came to watch and offered encouragement during the relay, particularly those who ran with the team to keep them company. Pat Robinson ran over sixteen miles with the relay as a pacer during the night and during Saturday. Several members of the men's track team ran as pacers during the night and early morning and are to be thanked, particularly Brad Gair, Dan Liebler and Rob Earl. The women would like to thank those who stayed to help time the mile: Jim Malloy, Ann Guida and Paul Mariaini. The team mascot, Ted E. Bear, is also thanked for staying the night.

To sum up the feelings of the team, Sue Shea was asked if she would do it again if given the opportunity. "It was an experience, but there is no way I would do it again."

Maybe there are others out there who would dare to challenge the mark of 202.5 miles that the women established. If so, good luck to all who dare.

Kathy Straccia Enjoys Best Year At Villanova

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

Almost four years ago, Kathy Straccia set an individual goal for herself to attain at Villanova. On February 17, Straccia achieved her goal when she scored her 1000th point for the women's basketball team.

This point was a first at Villanova because Straccia became the first woman to reach the 1000th point plateau. When she set her goal, Straccia believed it was a realistic one. She knew that Mary Ellen Boylan (1976 graduate) fell points short and with an expanding schedule each year and upkeeping her scoring average, she could reach her goal.

Straccia's feeling after reaching her goal was a moment of relief. "After looking forward to it and the pressure of reaching it," she explained, "it was more reliving to play afterwards."

Along with her 13.8 scoring average over four years, Kathy averaged 6.2 rebounds and almost five assists a game this year. During the past season, Straccia three times dealt nine assists which became a single-game record. Her talents on the court led the Wildkittens to a 17-8 overal record, most successful for a women's team.

According to Straccia, Villanova in the future will have a "fairly good chance among Eastern schools." Women's atheltics have become more competitve and she credits Mary Anne Steinrod with advancing the women's program here at Villanova. In the past couple of years scholarships, additional court time, better playing conditions and an expanded schedule have kept the Wildkittens at the competitive level.

Another factor which helps a program is attendance at games. Straccia explained how Steinrod scheduled some games this year preceding men's games at the Fieldhouse. When fans come early to the men's game they catch part of the women's game, see the competition and then they are likely to return later.

Looking back over the four years, Straccia said this year was one of the best. Straccia enjoyed travelling this year with the squad on their weekend trips to Scranton and Virginia. Playing in these comfortable conditions produces less tensions and pressures and according to Straccia makes it, "a lot of fun."

Powerlifting

The Villanova Barbell Club will send five powerlifters to the National Collegiate Powerlifting Championships in Pensacola, Florida this Friday and Saturday.

Seniors John Morgan (Maple Glen, Pa.), Sam Correnti (Reading, Pa.) and Len Discenza (W. Hartford, Ct.), junior Joe Jacono (Glen Mills, Pa.) and freshman Vince Sferra (Raritan N.J.) will be the team which will try to win Villanova's third national championship.

Only Villanova and Texas A & M have won more than one national championship Villanova's last one coming in 1974.

Villanova finished seventh last year to Louisiana Tech, the host school, in the nationals.

Intramural Basketball

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Competition remains intense in intramural basketball, especially now when the top teams in each division consider each remaining game a must-win situation. The number of undefeated teams are gradually declining (now down to 11) but once-beaten teams are still hanging in there for remaining playoff spots.

The Cougars (5-0) and Bomb Squad (4-1) coontinue to dominate the 3:30 Alumni league. Two weeks ago both teams were tied for first with 3-0 records. Last week Bomb Squad took over first place by running its record to 4-0. This week, however, the Cougars picked up two wins, including a 44-38 victory over Bomb Squad, to regain sole possession of first place. The 4:30 league is still led by the Sun Kings, now 5-0, and in second place is Bang Gang (3-0). Express, now 4-0, is tied with ANS for first place in the 5:30 league. These two teams meet on March 26, setting up a big showdown which will probably determine the winner of this league.

The 6:30 league is very competitive with 4 teams vying for playoff spots. Simple Dreams and The Rags, both 5-1, are tied for first. Meanwhile the Ice Men trail in third with a 4-1 record and the Wildmen cling to fourth place with a 3-1 record. The 7:30 league is also very competitive with "Gimmie-The-Ball" in first with a 5-0 record, SPOA, who have 2 make-up games due to snow cancellations, in second at 3-0, and the Fighting Irish trailing in third at 3-1.

In the St. Mary 5:30 league, The Express, the only team with a 6-0 record, remains in first place with Home Grown, now 4-0, and All The Young Dudes, 4-2, trailing them. Beasts of Burden, still 4-0, remain atop the 6:30 league with Stampede, now 4-1, holding onto second place. In the 7:30 league, Saco East (4-0), continues to pull away from Newtown Squares (3-1) and third place On Tap (4-2).

Phil Farrell is now certain that the playoff format will consist of the first and second place finishers in each league, including the frat league, and two wild card teams — 20 teams in all. The captains of the intramural softball teams meet Monday night and their season begins Wednesday.

Bowling

Villanova's bowling team has been invited to compete in the National Bowling Councils sectional roll-offs for the first time in its history.

The Wildcats, who qualified as a conference representative after finishing runner-up to Penn State in the Eastern Pennsylvania-Maryland Intercollegiate Bowling Conference, will travel to Bel Aire, Maryland to compete in a nine-game roll-off.

Villanova will be pitted against give other squads: New Jersey Institute of Technology, Penn State, St. Vincent University, Corning Community College and West Virginia, with a team with the highest pin count going to Milwaukee, Wisconsin or the nationals, April 19-21.

Baseballers Down Delaware

By JOAN BARNISH

The Villanova Baseball team opened its season last Sunday, in good olde Wildcat tradition by beating the University of Delaware Blue Hens, 7-4.

In an impressive win, the Wildcat's solid infield proved to be in prime form by turning four key double plays. Shortstop Chris Nurse added to the infield success by having 11 putouts. This is the first time since his knee injury last spring that Nurse has seen action.

Villanova didn't wait long to get on the scoreboard. With Dave McHugh and Bob Loscalzo hitting back-to-back singles at the top of the first and designated runner Bill Duryea running for catcher McHugh, Villanova scored its first run.

The top of the third inning saw a repeat of the first with McHugh and Loscalzo singling and Duryea scoring on a wild pitch.

Dom Melillo, in the sixth, drove home Kevin Cooke from third in a perfectly executed suicide squeeze to give the Wildcat's a 3-0 lead. Later in the inning Nurse, second baseman Tom Hank and centerfielder Stan Luongo all singled, with Nurse and Hank scoring on McHugh's two-run double.

Delaware finally got into the action at the bottom of the seventh with an unearned run on a Wildcat infield error.

To provide the Wildcat offense more insurance, senior Dom Melillo hit his third career home run in the eighth inning and Tom Hank scored on McHugh's second double making the lead 6-1.

Delaware was not going to make it an easy win for the Wildcats and came back to score three unearned runs as pitcher Mike Venezia tired and was relieved by sophomore Phil Sartori in the bottom of the eighth. Sartori shut the door in the ninth and was credited with the save.

Delaware, one of Villanova's most competitive opponents, was ranked second in the northeast last year and had a 26 hit attack on Villanova pitchers last spring to beat the Cats 23-8.

But this year, with Venezia limiting The Blue Hens to only four hits in seven innings and Sartori allowing hits, the story proved to be different.

A strong pitching staff proves to be the key to any baseball season. In a 30 game college season, pitching depth is very important if long winning streaks are to be achieved. And the work Sunday of Venezia and Sartori and the earlier performances of Steve Shammer and Ed Szymanski in inter squad scrimmages gives Coach Larry Shane the type of staff he will need to field a competitive ball club.

This weekend the Wildcats meet Widener for the first time in their opening home game on Saturday at 2:00 p.m. and they play Dartmouth, 2:30 p.m. Sunday at home. The week continues with St. Joseph's and Penn away on Monday and Wednesday and on Thursday the Cats play at home against a strong West Chester State team.

Softball Opener

By ANN WOLFORD

The Villanova softball team opens its season on Thursday as the women travel to Salisbury State for a very tough first game, according to Coach Debbie McKee. The Wildkittens face their strongest opposition in the first week of play as they go up against three formidable opponents in the shape of Salisbury State, Trenton State, and Westchester.

Second year Coach McKee and the team are looking forward to beginning the season and bettering last year's 6-5 record. The team's extended schedule includes 15 games and a tournament sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania.

One of the bright spots on the team, says Coach McKee, is the pitching staff. The staff is headed by Sophomore Eileen McEvoy, a fastball pitcher. She is backed up by Junior Nancy Rooney who specializes in control. Diane Messing, a talented freshman, rounds out the staff.

Returning from last year's infield are third baseman Judy Kolb and Junior Suzy Stroud who will be switching from second base to first. The rest of the infield will be filled by a group of freshmen, transfers, and last year's returning players, explains Coach McKee.

McKee looks for a "quick, fast, and young" outfield. Senior Nancy Lamb may return as centerfielder, or she may move into the infield. Left and right fields will be played by freshmen.

When hitting is mentioned, all thoughts turn to Senior Sandy Arena. Arena, also a fine defensive catcher, led the team with 6 home runs and was first or second in almost every offensive category.

Overall, the team is going to be defensively oriented. They will be aggressive and play the game one run at a time. It is a young team only eight returning members and eleven new members.

All home games will be played on St. Mary's Field. The Wildkittens host Philadelphia College of the Bible (PCB) on April 4 for their home opener.

Final exam. You need only one sip to recognize the clearly superior quality and taste of Old Grand-Dad. Cheers!

Old Grand-Dad Bonded is authentic Kentucky sour-mash Bourbon, made with pure limestone water, the finest grains, and aged in new charred-oak barrels.

Winterhalter SGA Victor

Voter Turn-out Less Than 20%

P.J. Winterhalter, the SGA's new President.

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

P. J. Winterhalter was chosen student body president with 772 votes in an election marked by the lowest voter turnout in years. Winterhalter is currently serving as a junior Art senator.

Less than 20% of the student body voted, with 1520 votes cast. In past years, this percentage has ranged in the twenties.

In other races, Tony Cofone, Mark Zappy and Dave Dear were elected as Arts senators, and Paul Reuscher will represent Sciences. Henry Amoroso and Dave Blachly were chosen as C & F senators, and Martin Badewitz and Mignon Miller will represent Engineering and Nursing respectively. Barbara Bibb and Joe Cooper were elected to the Rank and Tenure Committee, and Matt Clark from Arts and John Casey from C & F were chosen for the Academic Policy committee.

The Association of Non-Resident Students also held elections on Thursday. Laura Stecklair was elected president, Robert Uberti vice-president and Mary Foti secretary-treasurer.

Elections were also marked by controversy over eligibility and the absence of write-in candidates. Conflict arose when Henry Amoroso, a C & F candidate, failed to turn in his nominating petitions by February 28, making him ineligible for the race. Amoroso contended that he had misunderstood the rules and should be allowed to run.

A special meeting of the Elections Commission, called to decide the issue, ruled that due to "misunderstanding on Amoroso's part" and "lack of availability" on the commission's part, Amoroso would be allowed to run with penalties.

As a result of the decision, Susan Lyons, Elections Committee Chairman, resigned her post.

"She didn't feel she could fully represent our decision since she didn't agree with it," said John McKenna, who took over as chairman.

Unlike last year, write-in candidates who do not have to go through the required nomination process, were not allowed on the ballot. "The constitution doesn't make a provision for write-ins," McKenna stated.

"They would have had an unfair advantage."

Due to the resignation of one candidate, Ray Bauso, the presidential race was not as close as was expected. Bauso quit the campaign on Tuesday, March 20, after he and the three other candidates had debated in the West Lounge. At the time of his rebuttle, he announced he would not run, and would pledge his support to Michael O'Connor.

Winterhalter received 51 percent of the vote. Mike O'Connor took 37 percent; Ken Fody trailed with 12 percent.

This year marked the first in which the Arts and Science voting constituencies were split. Paul Reuscher narrowly defeated opponent Hugh McNalley, in the race for the Science seat, 72 to 70.

Budget To Be Finalized

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The long awaited University Budget for the 1979-80 academic year is scheduled to come before the Senate at an extraordinary meeting next Wednesday.

Senators will receive a copy of the budget today, five days before the meeting. This conflicts with the resolution passed last year by the Senate that Senators must receive the budget 30 days prior to discussion on the floor.

At its March 16 meeting, the Senate expressed its desire to ready the budget for the April 10 meeting of the Board of Trustees. Also at that meeting, Senator Alvin Clay, chairman of the Budget Committee, cited a predicted 9.4 per cent increase in tuition, a 10 per cent increase in room and board, and a 5 per cent increase in faculty salaries in the budget.

The Senate is also to approve the Tenure Evaluation of the Rank and Tenure Committee at Wednesday's extraordinary meeting. That report and the tenure report of the Faculty Affairs Committee are to be formally discussed at the Senate's regular April 20th meeting.

Provincial Elected

The Very Reverend Robert M. Wesson, O.S.A. has recently been elected as Prior Provincial (Superior) of the Eastern Province of the Order of Saint Augustine ("Augustinians"), with Provincial headquarters at Villanova University, Villanova, Pennsylvania.

Father Wesson, 44, will remain as Provincial-Elect until he is formally installed as Prior Provincial in June of this year. He will succeed the Very Reverend Harry A. Cassel, O.S.A., who has been Prior Provincial since 1971.

A native of Lynn, Massachusetts, Father Wesson entered the Order of St. Augustine after graduation from Merrimack College (North Andover, Mass.) in 1956. He was ordained to the priesthood at Merrimack College in June of 1961. He holds Masters degrees from Villanova University (Villanova, PA) and Augustinian College (Washington, DC) and has done Doctoral Studies at Boston College.

Since ordination, Father Wesson has held numerous teaching and administrative positions in institutions of higher learning administered by the Augustinians. At Merrimack College he was assistant Professor of Religious Studies (1962-69), Chairman of the Religious Studies Department (1967-69), and Chaplain of the College (1965-68). At Villanova University he has taught in the Religious Studies Department for the past ten years, most of those years teaching honors Courses. In 1970-71 he served the University as Dean of Student Activities.

New President Optimistic

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

"Next year will be a big year," said P.J. Winterhalter, newly elected student body president.

"The climactic point will be Father Deegan's report to the Board of Trustees in September on the experimental student life package." Next Fall, the Vice President for Student Life will meet with the Trustees to discuss the package, which includes visitation and campus social activities.

"After that point, there will be changes, and there will be something to work with," said Winterhalter.

Winterhalter said he expects visitation will be continued at Villanova. "The caucus and assembly will work hard to expand visitation," he said.

"No matter what you say, alcohol is also a part of student life," said Winterhalter. "Catch-19 will be continued, at least to allow alcohol on campus," he said.

"Catch 19 has kept low-key, and it stayed out of the election. But it is growing and will grow more. We're going to see if we can pull some strings somehow, because changes can come," said Winterhalter.

He said he does not believe the fact that the University Senate voted against supporting Catch 19 will be a hinderance. "The Catch-19 resolution will be rephrased and restructured, it will get more exposure and be better prepared, and it will pass the Senate," he said.

A very high priority next year will be to revitalize the SGA Assembly. The Student Life committee is now working on a reorganization of the whole SGA, possibly combining the RSA, ANS, and the SGA.

P.J. Winterhalter, new SGA president

"A very high priority next year will be to revitalize the SGA Assembly," said Winterhalter. "The Student Life Committee is now working on a reorganization of the whole SGA, possibly combining the RSA, ANS, and the SGA. This will have a lot to do with the Assembly," he said.

"One major objective will be the budget," Winterhalter added. "It's very late this year, and we're not getting proper time to study it. We're going to get after the committee next year so the students can be better prepared," he said.

Winterhalter said the SGA will also be concerned with the theatre in the Connelly Center. "There's no question as far as the need for a theatre. Petitions will go out to students this week. We're going to get this done as quickly as possible. We'll see how much clout the voice of the students has." "On the whole, I see the caucus as a close-knit group, and we have a lot of time to learn. The people got elected because they can communicate with people," said Winterhalter.

Excavation Planned

A group of students from colleges and universities across the nation will participate in a medieval archaeological dig sponsored by Villanova University in Europe this summer.

Their final destination will be San Leonardo al Lago, an ancient Italian hermitage probably founded around the year 1119 and inhabited by the earliest members of the Augustinian religious order.

There, students will be involved in the actual unearthing and cataloging of objects and building remnants on the centuries-old site.

The group will stay in a family-owned hotel in a residential section of Siena, an almost perfectly preserved Renaissance city in Italy. Side field trips to four other hermit sites, and to Florence, Pisa, San Gemignano, and Assisi will also be made. The month-long program will conclude with an excursion to Rome.

To prepare for the excavation work, students will be taught the principles, techniques, and methodology of archaeology and how to apply archaeology to reconstructing history, They will also study monastic life in Roman and post-Roman civilization, hermit traditions and the institutionalization of religious life. All study will take place in Italy.

Leading the project is the Rev. Joseph C. Schnaubelt, O.S.A., director of the Augustinian Historical Institute at Villanova. He will supervise the excavation work along with Dr. Alfonz Lengyel, a professor at the University of Texas who studied at the Sorbonne in Paris, and Professor Enzo Mazzeschi of the University of Siena. Teaching the course in monasticism is the Rev. Robert Malloy, S.T.D., of the University of Fribourg, Switzerland.

The project is designed to appeal to those interested in archaeology and medieval studies who want to join with Villanova and representatives of other colleges and universities in this cultural expedition.

Commuter Survey Taken

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Those who don't live on campus are often looked down upon as real college students. If you come to school by car, train, bus . . . you're called a commuter, an outsider who only uses the school's name.

Well, the commuters had a lot of opinions and things to say, so they organized. The ANS, for anyone who doesn't know, is the Association of Non-resident Students. The ANS is a great idea but only has a handful of members, so to know everyones' opinions and suggestions, a survey was made.

During the Fall of 1978, a questionnaire which concerned itself with the needs of commuters was devised and sent to a random sample of 391 commuters. It was 6 pages and dealt with all areas of student needs. In it, a commuter was defined as a student who lives with his or her family.

By January, 1979, a hefty 31 percent of the responses were returned. Since there was a preponderance of women responses, the study was adjusted to that the sixty-forty ratio of men and women would be maintained.

The questionnaire, itself, contained many general questions along with more concentrated inquiries. Car pools, the use of the Connelly Center, use of the Student Life services such as the Counseling and Career Centers were examples of matters under consideration.

Some of the results were: only 4 percent of commuters are involved in school activities (frats, student publications, intramurals, Blue Key Society, etc.), 32 percent would never use a car pool and Bartley Cafeteria is the commuters favorite pit stop.

The section which the University was most concerned with were those questions concerning the Connelly Center. The results from the survey showed that the center will be advantageous for the commuters. 44 percent of the male returnees concluded they would use the new facility while 33 percent of the females would use it.

Honors to Dance

By MAUREEN FAGAN

Four new courses, covering such diverse areas as modern dance and renaissance philosophy, will be offered by the Honors Program next semester.

A course entitled Introduction to Modern Dance will be led by Ms. Paula Sepinuck, a dancing instructor currently teaching at Swarthmore College. Designed for students who have had no previous exposure to modern dance, the course will be devoted primarily to learning and developing the beginning elements of modern dance technique.

Dr. James Bergquist of Villanova's history department will offer a course entitled Diversity in American Society and Culture. This course has as its objective to lead the student into a deeper understanding of United States society. Regional, ethnic, and religious Regional, ethnic, and religious origins of this deversity will be stressed.

A workshop surveying contemporary poetry will be led by David Sager, a Merion resident whose poetry has appeared in several national literary publications. Special attention will be given to the genesis and development of modernism, and to tendencies during the last few years toward a dominant new movement in English poetry. Students will be asked to submit original poetry as part of the requirements for this course.

Finally, Rev. Bernardino Bonansea, O.F.M. of Villanova's philosophy department will offer a course entitled God and Man in Renaissance Philosophy. This course will present the major trends of philosophical thinking in renaissance time, while setting each philosopher's thought in relation to both medieval and modern philosophy.

These courses are open to the entire university. Interested students must register for them in the Honors office, 101 Corr Hall.

University Goals Drafted

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

A much-amended statement embodying the goals and achievements of Villanova University has been issued throughout the campus.

This institutional mission statement will be followed by statements of mission and plans on the part of individual colleges, departments, and offices.

Rev. John J. McKenzie, O.S.A. served on the subcommittee of the Administrative Planning Committee which drew up the initial draft of the statements. McKenzie, who is not totally pleased with the statement's final draft, discussed its formation and impact.

The mission statement was first proposed in 1977, as a result of a conference of the Academy for Educational Development. Desire for some form of mission statement was expressed as early as 1970, at the time of the Middle States Evaluation; this evaluation led to a generalized mission statement which McKenzie considers "a bit more ambitious than this one."

After a series of amendments and re-drafts, the finalized version of the mission statement was approved, with amendments, by the Board of Trustees in February, 1978.

McKenzie objects to the Board of Trustee's rejection of a statement in the draft which placed the primary focus of the University on undergraduate programs (the approved statement does not mention such a primary focus). McKenzie feels this action will have a detrimental effect on undergraduate programs.

"Undergraduate programs are in part justified by their relation to the University's mission. This rejection could lead to fewer resources being allocated than would have been," he said.

A possible explanation for the rejection of the undergraduate statement was offered by McKenzie: "Lawyers on the Board had seen the possible results for the law school if the statement had remained."

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

NATIONAL NEWS

(Harrisburg, Pennsylvania) — There was a nuclear accident in Pennsylvania Wednesday, and some radiation escaped into the atmosphere before the building could be sealed. Authorities say the radiated steam escaped from the "Three Mile Island" Plant near Harrisburg after a water pump used to cool the reactor broke down. Authorities say no injuries have occurred, and they add that they do not consider the outside radiation to be dangerous. Residents near the plant were evacuated.

The spokesman, Karl Abraham, says the leak "appears to be confined to the inside of the containment structure — the steel reinforced concrete dome around the rector." He says officials "have not detected any significant radiation off-site." He says, "What they are seeing is extremely low radiation.

Asked if there is any danger to people in the plant, Abraham said in a telephone interview, "That's a hard question to answer." He said there are "no reports of any injuries or serious radiation exposures." Abraham said, "There are no people in the containment building during normal operations." But, he said, authorities don't have all the information yet, so they can't say for sure.

"Something caused the thermal generator to disconnect from the distribution system, and when that happens that automatically shuts down the reactor. There was some radioactivity released inside the containment, and based on the preliminary information they (the plant officials) activated their emergency plan." Abraham said they notified state and federal agencies because, in such a case, the plant is supposed to stay sealed off.

Abraham said officials "have every reason to believe" that the containment structure "will do what its name says — It will retain the radioactivity."

Another spokesman for Metropolitan Edison, one of the consortium of utilities that runs the three mile river plant, says a valve in the pressure steam system blew out at 4 a.m.

The spokesman, Blaine Fabian, says the accident automatically shut down the reactor, but that some of the radiated steam vented into the atomosphere before the building was sealed.

He says the radiation level inside the building became higher than normal, but that there were no injuries.

The radiation level outside also became higher than normal — But, he says, not to a level considered dangerous to health.

(Bagdad) — Official sources at an Arab League Foreign Ministers Conference in Bagdad, Iraq say at least some action will be taken against Egypt for entering into a treaty with Israel. But the sources say no action will be approved against the U.S.

P.L.O. Leader Yasser Arafat had called for such a move. But the sources say the ministers have neither the desire nor the power to take steps against the U.S.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned today that the Egyptian-Israeli treaty won't bring a comprehensive Middle East Peace. Speaking in Bonn, West Germany, Waldheim said that's not possible as long as there's continued Arab resistance to the Pact. Waldheim also noted that Egypt and Israel must still work out differences over the Palestinian Arab issue.

About 250 students staged an Anti-P.L.O. Demonstration in Paris yesterday in front of a Jewish Hostel Restaurant. That's where 32 Jewish students were wounded yesterday by a bomb explosion. The local P.L.O. Office has said it had nothing to do with the blast, blaming instead what it called "Racist and Anti-Semitic" elements.

(Moscow) — Soviet President Brezhnev has a bad case of the flu. That's the word from French Diplomatic sources in Moscow, in explaining why President Giscard D'Estaing's trip to the Soviet Union has postponed.

There's been no official explanation from Moscow or Paris as to why the trip — scheduled to begin today — was pushed back three weeks. But reports again raise the question of the 72-year-old Brezhnev's continuing health problems.

He was virtually out of sight for two months in the winter of 1977-78 because of a bout with the flu and what was described as a relapse. However, there are indications Brezhnev is suffering from other illnesses.

His stiffness in walking, lapses of memory and slurred speech suggest he may have suffered a stroke. And U.S. Intelligence sources have been quoted as saying he has emphysema . . . a non-fatal form of leukemia . . . and an irregular heartbeat.

Villanovans InSearch Of A Theatre

Last week the University Senate passed a resolution recommending to Father President Driscoll that the Connelly Center include a professionally equipped theatre.

In the original design of the Student Center an auditorium/theatre was included: however, financial difficulties and pressure to solicit bids for the construction of the Center itself resulted in the Board of Trustees abandoning immediate plans for the theatre.

Recently Father John E. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for Student Affairs, took steps to rekindle interest in a Connelly theatre by submitting a proposal which contained a preliminary design and estimate by Vincent Kling Partners, a prominent national architectual firm.

The two and one half million dollar price tag and design were described as "excessive" and unsatisfactory by Deegan. The proposal has been presented to President Driscoll but has not yet reached the executive committee of the Board of Trustees for consideration.

The funding for such a proposal is presently unknown. Previous contacts with Walter J. Annenberg (Philadelphia publisher and philanthropist) have not proved fruitful.

We, the Villanovan, feel that steps should be taken by the development committee and the Board to seek a reasonable design which would result in an acceptable price.

Included in these steps should be continued search for financial backing.

The mere fact that Vasey theatre's production of "Cabaret" has met with both critical and public acclaim is testimony to the company's professional skills and the theatre's development as a cultural and financial asset. "Cabaret" has been held over for additional performances.

Actually, it can go without saying that Vasey is an excellent source of income and fulfills the University's needs as a theatre. What should be stressed, however, is the unfulfillment of Vasey's needs as a theatre. It is not a professionally equipped theatre, therefore it cannot meet the demands placed upon it as it is producing professional plays. Cultural events could be greatly expanded in quality and quantity if the proper facilities were available.

The Fieldhouse, being that and nothing more, could never compensate for a professional theatre. The Traveling Music Show proved that last week when, in despair, they sought Vasey's help in transforming the Fieldhouse into something more. It should be a well known fact that once a Fieldhouse always a Fieldhouse. Only 20 people were were in the audience that night.

Penn, Temple, and La Salle have the needed facilities which enable them to host various forms of entertainment ranging from dramatic readings to jazz ensembles. A new theatre in the Connelly Center would allow Villanova to house large scale productions and larger crowds. It would introduce more variety, entertainment, and culture onto the campus.

Congratulations

CONGRATULATIONS! While the administration may be dragging its feet on a more liberal visitation policy, the Athletic department should be commended for their progressive co-ed locker and shower rooms now being enjoyed at St. Mary's.

Graduation Parties

To the Editor:

As a graduating senior I would like to thank both the Blue Key Society and the Villanova Student Union for giving my classmates and I the chance to celebrate at the 79 days and 50 days till graduation parties. I am glad to see that some organizations within the University are able to deal with the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board in a mature way.

Unfortunately, many students on this campus do not know if they are Seniors, Juniors, or Sophomores. The two graduation celebrations were supposed to be for those of us who are leaving Villanova in May . . . 1979. Not in 1980 or 1981. I do not feel that this is fair to the seniors to have to be overcrowded at an affair merely because many underclassmen thought that they should enjoy the festivities because they have friends who happen to be seniors.

If all of the underclassmen would realize that they too will graduate in the future, why then must they insist on attending a function that was not designed for them? I am sure that no harm was intended and indeed, everyone did have a good time. But still, your time will come. Let us seniors have our time now that we've earned it.

Sincerely,
Bruce Corini, '79

Gay Rights

To the Editor:

I was quite pleasantly surprised to read the article on gay rights in the March 23 Villanovan. The article's treatment of the admittedly controversial subject was relatively unbiased, and the article, in general, was informative. I believe this sets a precedent for bring up ideas which are quite alien to most of the students here, and although I am not naive enough to believe that articles like this will make anyone more tolerant, I think that at least they will generate some kind of reaction. Isn't the free expression and exchange of ideas what higher education should bring about?

Sincerely,
Melanie G. Calder

In Response To Cassidy

To the Editor:

After reading last week's "From the Second Floor," the supplement to the Villanovan, I would like to respond to remarks voiced in the article "On Graduation Day."

Authored by current Student Body President Joseph Cassidy, the article paints a bleak picture of the forthcoming commencement exercises. Cassidy implies that the only reward the graduating student (and his parents) will receive for their $25,000 investment in Villanova will be a request for alumni contributions.

It is indeed unfortunate that Cassidy's closing remarks on his four years at Villanova should be highlighted by such severe cynicism. As SGA President, Cassidy was in the best student position to create a more positive atmosphere on campus; yet he gave us little evidence of having done anything toward this end.

If, for example, as stated in his article, he is upset that there is no roll call or actual awarding of diplomas during the graduation ceremony, why doesn't Cassidy propose a motion in the Senate to alter this situation?

I feel bad that Cassidy is leaving Villanova with such pessimistic remembrances of his collegiate life. My only hope is that the rest of the graduating class will be taking with them something much more rewarding than a $25,000 education bill.

Sincerely,
An interested student

This week this reporter braved the cold winds of a March day to ask the few people who were wandering about: Did you vote in the SGA elections last week? Do you know who the winners are? What are your opinions about SGA elections and accomplishments? Here are the replies:

No, I didn't vote. I really don't know who won. I'm not really informed about elections. Maybe the candidates should go out and advertise what they do and what they want to accomplish. If I didn't stop in Dougherty and pay attention to posters, I wouldn't have picked up anything about it. Maybe they need to come to classrooms to inform the people what elections are, and what the purpose is. As in all elections, if people are really interested, something will be accomplished.

Dan Poliers
Junior

Yes, I did vote. I think P.J. won the presidency. I don't know any of the other candidates at all. I really don't know much about what the election process is. I did read a few election things but I'm not quite involved with them.

Kim Schneider
Sophomore

Yes, I voted last week, but I only know that P.J. won for President. There should be more information given about the elections and the candidates. I only voted for three candidates because they're the only ones I knew. The SGA does what it can but the administration holds them back from what they really want to do.

Heidi O'Neill
Sophomore

No, I didn't vote. I didn't know anyone who was running so I didn't vote; I didn't know what to expect from them. I'll wait till next year. As long as I've been here, I haven't seen the SGA do anything. I'd like to see them work on having Visitation expanded to all week long.

Freshman

Yes. P.J. Winterhalter won for President. He's a Political Science major, that's how I know because I'm in Political Science myself. The SGA has been very ineffective. They start off by having a lot of good intentions but they are restrained by the administration and are incapable of accomplishing anything.

Bob Bougher
Junior

Yes. Yes, I know P.J. won for President. The Arts Senators are Tony Coffone and Mark Zappy. I can't remember the other one's name. I was very satisfied with who won. I hope they can represent us as best as they possibly can. I'm looking forward to a good year as far as the SGA is concerned. The SGA tries to accomplish things but they can't always get their points across to the administration. The administration isn't always as open to student views as they should be.

Jesuit Corps Volunteers Sought

For those in Nome, Alaska, the day may begin with weather reports over radio station KNOM. In many of the Eastern cities days often start with walks through Skid Row or the Inner City. Teaching classes to Native American children on reservations in Arizona or Montana might be the daily tasks of others.

All of these activities are performed by members of the Jesuit Volunteer Corps, a lay orgainization composed generally of young adults, often college graduates. Begun in Alaska in 1956 by Jesuit priests and brothers, the Corps, then as now, was designed to work with the dispossessed, the powerless, those people whom the various systems could not deal with and find a niche for.

In the late 60's and early '70's, the Jesuit Volunteer Corps expanded into California, the northwest states, even into eastern Montana. No longer were volunteers working just with Eskimos and generally with children, but their efforts moved into the Indian reservations, into the inner city, working with both young and old.

In the mid 70's, the Corps expanded further east, and today, nearly sixty of JVC's 250 volunteers serve in the Midwest and East regions.

What does "being a volunteer" entail? A one-year commitment is asked, serving from August to August. Volunteers receive room and board, health insurance, a ticket home at the end of the year, and a $50 per month stipend for personal expenses. As an experience, many claim their year in the Corps is one of the finest, most demanding years of their lives. And, while many volunteers are not Catholic, Christian motivation is one of the attributes looked for in volunteers.

Most volunteers live together in a community setting, whether in a house, a school dorm, or a parish building. Meals are cooked and shared, as are one's daily experiences.

The work of volunteers is as varied as the places and people involved. Teachers and nurses are needed, as well as people to organize communities, work in skid rows, alcohol centers, food and job coops, and radio station, to name but a few of the positions.

This project is being undertaken by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration — Ames Research Center, and the University of Santa Clara, California.

Dr. Maloney, a radio astronomer, will help to design the computer-controlled apparatus required not only to detect radio transmissions but also to recognize that such transmissions are the product of intelligent life far from the Earth.

Regarding the general content of the mission statement, McKenzie characterized it as "a mixture of wishful thinking and real acts, a statement of what we strive for." The contents of this statement will be reevaluated in 1983.

When asked what the mission statement's uses will be, McKenzie said that no specific use was being made of it. Principally it will serve as a working paper to help in the justifying of financial outlays and the determination of goals over the next five years.

"Rather than being a golden statement that stands, it serves as a basis for something that is used as a rationale for programs," concluded McKenzie.

Where Will The SGA Go?

Now the halls are all empty, the maintenance takes the stage, pack it up and tear it down. The candidates are the first to come and the last to go working for . . . for what? Now the elections are over, what will happen, where will the Student Government go?

Perhaps the SGA has come to the crossroads. This year, in all realities, the assembly, which is supposed to have a consitituency of the student body, had nothing; for the most part it was inactive for the entire year. Now the time has come, all the elected members of the new student caucus stressed in their platform to advocate better communication to greater facilitate involvement of the entire student body. But this is a two way street; you the students of Villanova must get involved, must speak up for what you believe in. To sit back and simply complain, and do nothing about what you're complaining about is hypocritical, it is why nothing gets done at this school.

Last Thursday, a new caucus, a new group of student senators, new leaders were born at Villanova University. They are faced with the impossible task of pleasing every single Villanova Student. This caucus has their work cut out for them. Then again, so does every caucus. The challenge is there, now the University must wait for the results.

This year, immediately, the SGA will begin work for next year. Initially the new senators will be circulating petitions to find out how the students feel about putting the professionally equipped theater back into the original plans of the Connelly Center. Villanova has one of the best theatrical arts programs in the area, especially on the graduate level, and I urge the students to be in favor of this action. Those students in this major deserve more than Vasey Theatre can ever offer.

In September of next year, Fr. Deegan, the vice-president of Student Life will give a report to the Board of Trustees on the success of the experimental student life package which has been in effect at this University for the last three years. The determination of the direction of student life, of just what will be the status of visitation, will be determined in this report. The actions which come out of the meeting of the Board in September will effect the life of every Villanovan. The caucus will be watching the results of this meeting, so should every University student.

These are but a few of issues which are present to all students of this University. For anything to get done, everyone must work, not just the members of the Student Government; but you, and your roommate, and your friends. For anything to work, there must be participation. Don't just complain, get involved! We can make this University better than it is, but you have to help.

P. J. Winterhalter

The End, An Afterthought

As members of the Election Commission we want to take the opportunity to explain our position in light of some negative feedback we received during the recent elections. As members of a body of eight people who had relatively little knowledge in organizing an election it was necessary to rely on our experience as candidates in years past.

In our opinion things went reasonably smoothly considering our limited resources, time and change in leadership occurring during the week preceding the election. It was the responsibility of the Commission to create a set of appropriate rules and regulations designed to be fair to all the candidates. Naturally, it is impossible to anticipate all possible situations that could occur during the course of a campaign. Consequently, in many cases it was necessary to take an individual approach to arising situations. We attempted to base our decisions on the ultimate goals and objectives of the Student Government Association. We would at this time take the opportunity to express our sincerest apology to those who felt slighted by any decisions coming from our Commission.

We would like to extend our thanks to those members of the Elections Commission along with Fathers Deegan and Martin who put in such long hours organizing the election and counting ballots after polling hours, it is impossible to describe the mental strain involved in such a procedure, not to mention the expenditure of energy. We would also like to thank all of the faculty members and students who gave up part of their day to help out at the polls, especially Dr. George who spent all afternoon in the Dougherty Hall polling area and Mr. Dan Regan for helping organize a faculty schedule. We also appreciate the assistance given to us by both the maintenance department and security, especially on such short notice.

Now that the election is over, we would also like to express our hopes that everyone who was interested enough to put a campaign together, and go out and meet the students, will redirect their ideas and energies into other channels.

Although the SGA this past year appeared to be little more than a group of senators, this is not the case. The organization is much broader in scope and will no doubt go through some structural changes before next fall. There are other leadership positions available, in standing committees of the Senate and assembly committees. These both are valuable ways to contribute to the organization as a whole, and while you might think that they afford you with less recognition, they do. Maybe you should examine your reasons for wanting to get involved in the first place. If you are interested in becoming a part of the SGA, there is nothing stopping you.

Lastly, best of luck to next year's caucus. With the many issues at hand next year, it is imperative that as a group, you retain all of the enthusiasm you have right now. May you accomplish everything you set out to do.

Sincerely,
John McKenna, Beth Dalena
Chairman and Secretary of Elections Commission

This Is The ANS Messages From . . .

The President

The Association of Non-resident Students has a new positive image. With the election of new officers last Thursday, new leadership and ideas are being incorporated into this organization. I am pleased with the results of the elections and look forward to working along with these offices to help you the commuter. I feel they will do a good job and have the knowledge and motivation to make this organization an integral part of the Villanova community.

For all those who still do not know the name of the ANS has been changed to the Association of Commuting Students. We feel this name does not sound negative whereas the term non-resident does. So from today forward our new name will be used. Please make note of this.

During the past year, the ACS has worked to grow, expand and help the commuter feel more at home here at Villanova. New ideas have been presented to us to serve the commuter better and we will work to put these ideas into action.

I look forward to serving as President during the next year. It's a challenge but it will enable me to work for the commuters seeing that they receive the rights and services they deserve.

Laura Stecklair
President

The Vice-President

The ANS is a growing organization with great potential, and, I am happy to have been elected vice-president of it. Thank you to all the commuters who came out and voted for me: your support is and will be greatly appreciated. To the man who finished second, Charles Poznek, I never thought of you as an opponent, rather as a person who is capable of helping the ANS. Poz, your aid and support will be very important.

As some people may already know, a small percentage of votes separated Poz and I in this election. I hope that this will emphasize the fact that each person's voice is very important. I am asking each commuter to come to ANS functions and meetings and let yourself be heard. This is an organization solely for commuting students, we need your help in order to help you.

I will be available at all of the ANS meetings and activities, and, I will be in the ANS office during the week. If you can't find me, and you have a suggestion or would like to join the ANS, or have a problem or a solution, drop me a note in the office. It is on the second floor of Dougherty Hall, Room 213. If you leave a note on the desk, I will be sure to receive it.

Once again, thank you for your support, and I hope that you will continue to support the ANS in the coming year.

Bob Uberti
Vice-President of ANS

The Secretary

Next year, 1980, will be the year of the commuter. With the opening of the Connelly Center, there will be a Bigger and Better place for Commuters to go and relax. Finally, we commuters, get a place to call our own.

The A.C.S. has made many plans and initiated many programs that will last throughout the year, but to make our plans work, to make our dreams materialize, we need the support of each and every commuter. The first step in giving this support will be to get involved and join the organization that represents and works for the commuters — the A.C.S.

This past year we have seen the A.N.S. grow into an organization that is active in the Villanova Community. The A.N.S. has moved from dormacy with a total active membership of ten to a flourishing association with fifty active members. Leadership has been the key to this growth and the same leaders will be back next year to continue what they have started.

The ANS has had the support of students who care about what is going on. They see the problems that commuters face, first hand and they want to do something about the problems. Sure, it's easy to gripe and complain about parking and meal plans and the lack of social functions, but it's a different story when you gripe and complain but also attempt to do something about it. The type of people who do get involved and do want to make a change are the people who should belong to the ACS.

Commuters, please, get involved. Show that you care about one another. Join the ACS, help make the changes necessary. Be a part of a winning Team! The ACS cares. Help to make 1980 — the year of the commuter. Let's unite and prove that the commuter is not apathtic!

Introducing Spring Fever '79

At this point you are probably wondering why all this. We mean really, What is Spring Fever? What's all the fuss, the T-shirts the activities? Well, Why NOT! Spring has long been a tradition at Villanova complete with Chaining, Frisbees, Dinner dances (oh those dances) and in general you know what . . . Its just a little warmer, and the Villanova Community trades in their winter clothes for skirts and T-shirts and bright colored humor. It's a time when there are fewer students in class and you can't seem to get motivated, is that the proper word? Yes, it's possible to be a freshman and catch senioritis . . . After all the seniors are very willing to share it. So if this little note has made sense, and we think it will, you'll understand what all this nonsense is all about. We just hope you enjoy it. We certainly enjoyed (do we speak too soon) planning it. Have a wonderful Spring Fever and a great summer.

Seniors Leave Memories

by Susanne Lawler

This time of year always brings about a certain sense of recollection. Spring is here, and soon to follow will be the close of the '78-'79 school year. Many of us will be leaving only temporarily, to return once again in the fall, while others will be moving out in new directions — it is to these individuals that the Villanova Union says good-bye!

Kevin Smith, President; Barbara Burke, Coor. of Social Functions; Cathy Belleville, Coor. of Cultural Arts; and John Backus, Coor. of Major Events have all shared their time and talent, as well as their laughter, tears, frustrations, satisfactions, failures, successes, headache tablets, and most of all their friendship, with everyone in the Union.

These coordinators agree that the positions they held were very time-consuming and required endless hours of work; yet the sense of satisfaction in seeing their ideas take shape as a result of their endeavors far outweighed any unfavorable duties. On the whole they felt that the most efficient way to run a committee is for the coordinator to delegate and utilize his group to its fullest potential.

All four have their dreams for their successors to carry on. Kevin, a four year member, hopes that the new Pres., Henry Clemm, will keep open the lines of communication between the board, other student organizations and the administration. Barbara would like to see Jimmy Keale initiate more social functions and gimmicks, such as the ever popular, "Kissing Contest!" Cathy hopes that a possible small lecture series and successful coffeehouses without alcohol will be started by Cathy Farquharsin. And finally John hopes that Tom Durling will continue to increase the membership within his committee. Upon their graduation each wishes to leave behing the following: Kevin would like to leave Henry his squeakin' chair and private secretary; to Major Events-two tickets to Kinks; to Publicity-Rabbit stew; to Social Functions-Studio 54; to Cultural Arts-Libberracci; to Visual Arts-the General Cinema Co.; to Recreation-the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders; to University Services-Monty Hall; and to Operations-chapstick.

Barbara would like to leave Jimmy a pair of handcuffs and a final ba-boom; to the Union patience, understanding and endurance. Cathy would like to leave her namesake a sense of humor and a good hard-working committee; to the Union an even greater sense of spirit. And John would like to leave Tom the $8,000 deficit and three filing cabinets with no order; to the Union memories of the best coordinator ever.

As a final farewell to all of those in the Union . . . "Be happy, creative, and above all remember me — old what's his name." (Kevin) "The Union was a big part of my life . . . I made friends with the best!" (Barbara) "I wish you all good times . . . you are great people I'll always remember!" (Cathy) "I have truly enjoyed my four years of involvement . . . never relinquish the concept of 'People Place' ". (John)

Come September the Union will be minus these four individuals, and the new coordinators will have the task of continuing to keep the Union a 'People Place'. There's no place like it, with no people like it! It's great! It's fun! Thanks Kevin, Barbara, Cathy and John . . . its been real!

The Washington Connection

You never know whom you'll meet when you go to Washington with Dr. Hahn.

By VICKY PARENTE

If you are looking for an alternative to a boring session in summer school or just a boring summer, then the Political Science Department has a program you might be interested in. Under the direction of Dr. Jeff Hahn, the department is offering its annual Washington Minimester program, which is offered in May (May 16 to June 1) and is worth three credits.

Accompanied by Dr. Hahn, students will travel to Washington, D.C. to attend a series of seminars in and about the Capitol and meet with a variety of senators, congressmen, lobbyists and media personalities. The program will also include lunches on Capitol Hill, night "tours" of Georgetown, visits to area museums and the like.

Dr. Hahn, who believes strongly in outside experience to supplement class lectures commented that the minimester is "a good way to get out of the classroom and see how politics works in the real world." The course requirements are 1) participation, 2) a related text, 3) some assigned readings, 4) the submission of an interpretative diary, and 5) an evaluation exam. Obviously, the program will be of special interest to political science majors, or those planning a career in government, however it is open to all students regardless of major.

While in Washington, students will live in the dormitories of American University. However, the program schedule makes it impossible to get board so the participants will have to make their own arrangements for meals. Room costs for three weeks is $114.00 and the tuition fee is $201.00.

Dr. Hahn feels that, "The minimester is a great way to earn three credits and enjoy yourself in the process, especially if you were planning to go to summer school anyway.

Enrollment in the program is limited to 20 students so those interested should contact Dr. Hahn or Ms. Cassidy, the political science secretary in Room 201 Tolentine (ext. 242, 243) as soon as possible.

Birthday Vibes

By CAROL GOLDFARB

Although numerology has gained most of its present popularity within comparatively recent years, it is actually one of the oldest of the psychic sciences.

Last week we did the name number; now let us examine our birth number, which is unalterable and therefore holds a fixed position in a person's lite. This is obtained by adding the figures of the month to those of the day and year, thus reducing a persons' birthday to its vibratory number.

February		2
March		3
April		4
May		5
June		6
July		7
August		8
September		9
October	10	1+0-1
November	11	1+2-2
December	12	1+2-3

Thus, if you were born March 3, 1952, your figures would be 3+3+1+9+5+2 equaling 23-2+3=5. This produces 5 as your birth number.

Number 1 shows a strong-willed nature that must be centered on a positive goal. People of this type should never try to jump too far ahead, as they can rise to new and greater attainments only in a direct progressive fashion.

As a birth number, 2 reveals a kindly, tactful nature, yet one given to gloom as well as happy moods. They should avoid extremes and any indecision. Their great fault is overgenerosity. They should give the same thought to themselves that they give to others.

Three shows a keen, intuitive mind, with the ability to learn things rapidly, often at an early age. Many persons with this birth vibration are highly talented, but fail to use their ability to their advantage. Their problem is to make the most of things that they have started, rather than let other people reap the profit of their original ideas.

As a birth number, 4 stands for a steady, plodding nature, which always favors caution rather than risk. Though persons with this vibration grasp new ideas quickly, they usually prefer to study them out. Technicians, researchers, and specialists of many sorts from whom exacting duties are demanded, are common to this vibration.

Five represents an enthusiastic, adventurous nature with a flare for the unusual. Such people do not care for routine duties; and with this vibration, they are apt to do the unexpected on the impulse of the moment. They are versatile and vivacious, with a genuine interest in people that wins them many friends.

People with 6 as a birth number are usually honest, sincere, and reliable. They tend to be tolerant in nature, always eager to promote harmony among their friends and to improve conditions around them. If they do not find fame, it is often because they become satisfied with what they have, so they do not push on to higher pinnacles.

As a birth number, 7 denotes a scholarly, poetic nature. Intuition is a strong part of their nature and many such persons are highly imaginative. They are naturally fond of the mysterious and as a result may become moody and depressed.

People with 8 as a birth number mean business. It symbolizes persons who put plans into execution, complete them, and then go on to something bigger. This vibration shows a person with a strong, forceful nature, who will demand and get the most from others. Opposition does not stop them; instead, it urges them on to greater effort.

As a birth number, 9 combines influence with intellect. It shows a powerful personality, capable of high development. Their problem often is to recognize their own talents and to choose the course to follow. Art, music, skill, inventive ability, all are found with number 9.

University Hoagie Relays

By PAUL VIGGIANO

"Extra onions please."
Joe Italiano

Since I was reared in the "southern" part of Philadelphia, I have had my share of hoagies. A true hoagie expert must have a keen wit, sharp tongue, accurate taste buds and most important of all, an iron cast stomach. (Eat a hoagie at four in the morning if you wish to test your bodily functions.)

Well for those who substantiate on hoagies (and many students do) your time has come. On April 28, the first annual "University City Hoagie Relays" will be held at Danny's Inn, 40th and Spruce Streets. The Relays are being sponsored by Danny's Inn to benefit the American Cancer Society.

The rules are as simple as this. Participants must be organized into groups of five. Sponsors must be found to support each team. Teams will compete against each other and the clock in creating and eating hoagies. Whoever makes and eats the most hoagies in thirty minutes is the hoagie champion. A dubious distinction indeed. Winners will be awarded a Hoagie Trophy and will also be honored at a party at Danny's Inn.

Some of the personalities that will be judging the event are Hank Sperka, Sidewalk Gourmet for Action News, Chris McCory of WPEN and Elaine Tait, food editor for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Anyone can enter including individuals, groups, students, businessmen, sororities and fraternities.

Nancy Bollinger, account executive of American Advertising, is in charge of publicizing the campaign. She comments, "It's a great idea, it's for a good cause and most important of all, it's a lot of fun."

Each participant must fill in an official entry blank. There is an entrance fee of two dollars which will be contributed to the American Cancer Society and everyone who enters will receive a free "Hoagie-Relay Team" T-shirt. Entry blanks will be published in local newspapers and are also available at Danny's Inn. For more information call WA 3-9100.

So let's see some Villanova hoagie fanatics enter and give this University yet another Championship. Burp! Will someone pass the Alka-Seltzer.

"...And Nobody Came"

Traveling Music Plays to "Crowd" of Twenty

By BETTY RUTKOWSKI

I'm sure everyone has heard the rhetorical question, "Suppose they gave a war and nobody came?" Well, last Thursday night, the Villanova Union sponsored a cultural event, and, sad to say, practically nobody came. I walked in with three friends to find the entire fieldhouse empty except for one couple in the front row. The performance was delayed a few minutes looking for a few thousand hopefully coming "fashionably late," but eventually opened to a slightly sparse crowd of twenty, yes, twenty, in a fieldhouse that has a capacity of 3,200.

Despite this demonstration of apathy by the Villanova community, The Traveling Music Show put on an excellent performance. They protrayed various aspects of culture in a different manner, sometimes even in a humorous fashion totally departing from the "long-hair" concept of culture that may not appeal to you.

The troupe worked from a simple set reminiscent of early traveling minstrel shows with a bandwagon in one corner of the stage and a piano in the other. Slide shows backed some of the presentations.

The show itself covered diverse exhibits of talent. Interpretive dancing was well performed by the Great Chazy Dance Company. Dance scenes ranged from intricate ballet set to the music of Bach to modern jazz dancing with a highlight performance of "Frankie and Johnny." The amazing voice ranges of the troupe were exhibited in the performance of contemporary as well as classical pieces. Ann Fleming did an excellent rendition of "Anyone Can Whistle" in a strong, entertaining fashion.

The dramatic side of culture was covered with a scene from

Judy! Judy! Judy!

By JANEMARIE T. COYLE

It will be "Hard Times For Lovers" at the Villanova Fieldhouse on April 6th. As a victim of the VU visitation policy, you might feel that it is always hard times for lovers, but, Judy Collins appearing in concert that night is bound to soothe your frustration and spread at least a mild case of spring fever.

Judy Collins, one of America's most popular female vocalists is embarking on her first American tour in several years. Her repetroire will include her new release, "Hard Time For Lovers," her 17th album for Elecktra Records, in which she interprets an impressive range of composers that include Rodgers and Hart, Randy Newman, The Eagles, and Steven Soundheim.

Collins stated, "More and more, I'm becoming a very classical, and very American kind of singer."

She has always been interested in "classical American music," since being introduced to it by her father, a blind bandleader, songwriter and announcer during the golden age of radio.

In the early 60's she recorded her first two albums for Elecktra, "Maid of Sorrow" and "Golden Apples of the Sun." Both brought her critical acclaim and Time magazine acknowledged her as a major contender for the female folk crown.

In the mid-60's, Collins became an activist lending her time, name and music to political causes. In '64, she went to Mississippi to help with the registration of Black voters.

She has also performed in various political campaign benefits. In '67, she became involved in the Women's Strike for Peace, and along with Ethel Raim co-produced an album entitled "Save the Children."

"Wildflowers," released in '67 was Collins' first album to be certified gold by the RIAA, an honor which was later shared with five other albums: "In My Life," "Who Knows Where the Time Goes," "Whales and Nightingales," "Colors Of The Day" and "Judith."

In July '77, Elecktra released "So Early In The Spring: The First Fifteen Years." The double-album set is a compilation illustrating the four main facets of her musical career, highlighting her folksinging, political activism, interpretive singing and "Judith." songwriting.

"Hard Times For Lovers," released in February of this year represents some of the best songs in the American pop tradition.

Tickets for the concert are available at the CIC, Ticketron and Mad's in Ardmore. Admission is $6.50 general public and $5.50 with a VU ID.

Gibbons' Haunting Elephant Man

By TERRY O'TOOLE

While the nation received a glimpse of some of Villanova's literary talent last Sunday night during the airing of Dr. Patrick J. Nolan's The Jericho Mile, the product of another campus writer, 1976 graduate Tom Gibbons, has been gathering attention on a smaller, local scale.

The Philadelphia Company's production of Gibbons' The Elephant Man, a haunting study of a hideously disfigured man and his battle for acceptance into humanity, is a powerfully directed, totally engrossing theatrical experience. Gibbons, who worked in a bookstore in the King of Prussia Mall while waiting for The Elephant Man's debut, has managed to present a commentary on conformity and our conceptions of the human body and the human mind that holds the viewer's attention without wandering.

Dr. James J. Christy, chairman of Villanova's theatre department and a member of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Company, steered Gibbons' play towards the small stage of the Company at the Philadelphia College of Art at 312 South Broad Street. Robert Hedley directs The Elephant Man, Gibbons' first work, while Lanie Robertson stars as John Merrick, the veiled, shrouded deformity whose features resemble those of an elephant, and Louis Lippa is Sir Frederick Treves, the London surgeon whose autobiographical accounts of his attempts to acclimate the "elephant man" into society served as the basis for the play.

The production consists of a reflective dialogue between the two characters, recounting the awful life Merrick has led, his abuse as a freakshow, his rejection by all who have seen him, his terror at his

Roxy Music

Albums for review generously donated by Just For The Record, located in Rosemont Village, Rosemont, Pa.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Roxy Music is one of those groups that have a very loyal cult following. Not quit as large as the Grateful Dead's following, but still of considerable size.

The main force behind Roxy Music's popularity is lead singer Bryan Ferry. As usual, Ferry is at least partly, if not totally responsible for the music and lyrics on Roxy's latest outing, Manifesto. This album should break new ground for the band as it seems to be catching the public's ear rather quickly. In a sense, it picks up where "Love Is the Drug" left off. Manifesto has a track for even the most biased listener.

Side One starts off appropriately with the title track, which is, for the most part, an attractively progressive instrumental. As the album proceeds, three factors become more and more apparent. First, their brand of music is unique. Second — while they are unique, they are unmistadably British. Their style is so heavily British accented that you might even experience an occasional note or chord right out of the early British invasion. Third — there is even a breath, however slight, of David Bowie. Notice the saxophone arrangements and the vocal inflections.

As a unit, Roxy Music flaunt their talent best in a Ferry composition entitled "Dance Away" featured on Side Two. This can stand alongside "Love Is the Drug" as classic rock and roll via Roxy Music.

Other highlights include "My Little Girl," "Cry, Cry, Cry," "Angel Eyes," and "Ain't That So." Yes, the cult following behind Roxy Music continues to grow, and albums like Manifesto are the reason why.

Bryan Ferry, Phil Manzanera, Andy Mackay, Gary Tibbs, Paul Thompson, Alan Spenner and Paul Carrack make up Roxy Music. These guys have been around for some time, and if Manifesto is any indication of things to come, Roxy Music have even greater success to look forward to.

glimpse into a mirror at the of 13. Robertson is brilliant as deformed man, speaking in the ening, pained cries of one who endured a life alone.

The Elephant Man opens with errick's moaning, his beseeching for understanding, for the ing touch of another human's nd. While at first Robertson ys the part with such force that "creature" terrifies the dience, the tragic proportions of character are gradually exed, culminating in Treves' realization that Merrick possesses a brilliant mind, fully aware of the life that has rejected him.

The dramatic offerings of The Elephant Man could fill a thesis. Let it suffice to say that the production is truly an experience, a theatrical examination of the struggle of life that engulfs the audience. Gibbons is currently working on his second play, and if it equals the intensity and emotional level of The Elephant Man, the young playwright should feel very satisfied.

King Richard Never Looked So Good

Al Pacino will be coming to Philadelphia to perform in the play Richard III. Pacino is usually referred to as "a man of the cinema," but his passion is the stage and he has several live performances to his credit. He made his New York stage debut in Israel Horowitz's The Indian Wants the Bronx and has performed in the first part of David Rabes trilogy, The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel.

Pacino has also been to Villanova's Vasey theatre. Last year, he charmed Vasey with a marvelous night of natural, impromtu excerps from plays, poetry and his personal philosophy on the art of acting.

Pacino, on stage has a macho magnetism, yet is sincere and the upcoming performance of Richard III should prove to be exciting. He performed, in Richard III, in Boston and Clive Barnes of the New York Times has said "that for a real theatre goer to miss him is a diminution of experience, a tiny death." Richard III is going to be at the New Locust Theatre from April 11 to May 6, and good seats are still available.

Intramural Basketball Season Closes

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The Intramural Basketball League is winding down the '78-'79 season and this year's playoffs just might be as exciting as the recent NCAA Championships. Of the nine divisions, eight, including the frat league, have more than two teams vying for 20 playoff spots.

The undefeated Cougars (6-0) lead the Bomb Squad (5-1) and the Celtics (3-2) in the 3:30 Alumni league. The Cougars and the Bomb Squad have the best shot at the playoffs. In the 4:30 league, Bang Gang, now 5-0, claimed sole possession of first place from the Sun Kings, now 6-1. Third place faculty-led Assembly (4-1) also seeks to clinch a spot to the post-season tournament. Express (6-0) remains undefeated while ANS (6-1) lost one in the 5:30 league. However, both teams seem likely to reach the playoffs. In the 6:30 league, six of the nine teams are still fighting among themselves for playoff contention. The Rags (6-1) remain in first, while tied for second are Simple Dreams and Bound For Glory, both 5-2. Tied for third are the Wildmen, the Bears and the Ice Men, all at 4-2.

Undefeated "Gimmie-The-Ball" (6-0) and SPOA (4-0) lead off the 7:30 league with the Fighting Irish (4-2) trying to hang onto a playoff possibility. Cats Fall

On Monday, the Cats finally fell to defeat. It was a hard fought 4-2 loss to the Hawks of St. Joseph's. This time the hitting wasn't there as the Cats managed three all afternoon. The Hawks pushed across three runs in the top of the ninth and a ninth inning Wildcat rally fell short. Ed Szymanski again pitched eight strong innings, striking out eight, before tiring in the ninth.

The Wildcats continue their busy schedule with a rematch against St. Joseph's today. The Cats return home on Sunday with a game against the La Salle Explorers at 1:30 p.m.

The week continues with a game against defending NCAA Division Three Champ Glassboro State at home at 3:30 p.m. The Cats then play Annapolis next Tuesday against Drexel on Wednesday and Lafayette on Friday.

Former West Virginia A D

Byrd Named EAA Director

Fred Gruninger (Rutgers AD), President of the Eastern Athletic Association announced today that Leland E. Byrd has been named to head the league as its first Executive Director.

In making the announcement Gruninger said, "The search for a capable person to head the Eastern Eight was a long one. We interviewed many qualified and responsible people for the position and the time and effort spent was worthwhile. We came up with a most positive result in our selection of Leland Byrd."

Leland E. Byrd was the Athletic Director at West Virginia University when the Eastern Eight was formed three years ago and served as its President for the first two years. This association and his continuity with the Eastern Eight were the main reasons for his receiving the unanimous vote of the eight Athletic Directors of the member schools. Gruninger stated, "Leland Byrd was one of the architects of the Eastern Eight and his dedication and commitment to the league, along with his outstanding background is inter-collegiate athletics were the major factors in his appointment. He is well respected by everyone associated with the Eastern Eight and has a fine reputation among all NCAA schools."

The growth and success of the Eastern Eight the last two years increased the need for a full time league official. Gruninger remarked, "With the success of the recently completed Eastern Eight Tournament (50,916 fans attended the tournament) and the crest of popularity that college basketball is riding on, we are looking forward to the new decade of the 1980's. We feel that Leland Byrd can best provide the Eastern Eight with the leadership necessary to make it one of the top leagues in the nation."

Ironically, Byrd was a member of the Search Committee last summer when he was then Athletic Director at West Virginia University. He resigned that post following the 1978 football season, stating he did it, "in the best interests of creating a spirit of unity in West Virginia." He was replaced by Richard Martin as Athletic Director on February 1, 1979.

Byrd submitted his name as a candidate for the Eastern Eight post in early February. The Athletic Directors met to discuss his candidacy, reviewed his application and interviewed him for the position of Executive Director. When it was unanimously agreed by all eight Athletic Directors that he met the qualifications they were looking for, he was offered the position and he accepted.

Byrd remarked, "I had no intention of applying for the job with the Eastern Eight when I first announced my resignation as Athletic Director at West Virginia University. But after having a month or more to reflect and deliberate about the position, I considered it one of the best opportunities in intercollegiate athletics." He further stated, "I honestly feel the Eastern Eight can become one of the top leagues in the nation because of the quality schools involved and the great potential of the areas in which the schools are located."

According to Byrd the areas of immediate concern are: an in-season and tournament television package; a competent staff of officials under league supervision, ratings of officials to guarantee quality officiating; expanded media exposure, particularly in areas outside the Pittsburgh and Tri-State area; a review of the Championship Tournament format so it can be planned well in advance for a number of years; and a review of the other sports in which the league holds Championships to get them on a sound basis."

Byrd initially will open a full time office in the Pittsburgh area in the near future.

Stickmen Fall To Opener In Lehigh

By BRUCE MURRAY

The Men's Lacrosse Team opened the season with a tough loss 15-8 to a talented Lehigh team. "In this game, the midfield was the difference," said Coach Lee Stevens. "They just played a better game than we did" He continued, "Their midfielders came up with the crucial ground balls, and we were not able to get the ball up to our attack." The Wildcat goals were scored by Junior's Jeff Bergman (3), Billy Hook (3), Bobby Adams (1), and Sophomore Jimmy Carey (1). Defensively, both goalie Bobby Hughes and defenseman Frank Frasco played good games.

Overall, the outlook for the lacrosse team is optimistic. "We played impressively in our preseason scrimmages, especially against Connecticut College," said Coach Lee Stevens, "and if we can play that way throughout the season, we'll be successful. We could go (8-3)."

This year's team is led by Senior Co-captains Jim Beese and Eddie Krempa. According to Coach Stevens, both are extremely talented and both have started for Villanova since their freshman year. The starting attack, consisting of Captain Beese, Adams and Hook, is one of the best around commends Stevens. But the key success for this year's team relies on the play of the midfield, especially Captain Eddie Kremp and Juniors Bergman and Jim Sweeney. Also at midfield, Sophomores Al Horcher and Paul Grady (currently suffering from a knee injury) must make their presence felt.

Tennis Team Falls

By TONY PANGONAS

The men's tennis team opened their 1979 schedule with a tough 6-0 loss at the hands of Howard. The doubles were not played due to a two hour delay caused by inclement weather. The squad is coming off a disappointing 8-15 record last year.

Dr. Langran, the coach of the men's tennis team, must be patient with his young team, which has one freshman and three sophomore starters. This lack of experience caused the Wildcats to lose many close matches last year.

In their match with Howard, the Wildcats could only manage to win 2 of 14 sets. Top-seeded Sophomore Tom Fieger, second-seeded Senior Co-captain Pete Desmond and third-seeded Sophomore Bill Sullivan all lost two straight sets. Despite this loss, these are the men that the Cats are counting on to carry them to a successful season.

The Wildcats' schedule does not get any easier. There are 26 matches on their schedule to be played in 38 days, which includes an overnight trip to Washington to play Georgetown and Catholic University and another overnight trip to New York to play Montclair and Fairfield. The Wildcats will also complete in the Rider Invitational Tournament later in the season, which they were close to winning last year. Next week's home matches include St. Peter's tomorrow and Lehigh on Wednesday.

Women Win In Water

Freshman Jenni Frank ended her first year at Villanova spectacularly as a triple national champion when she captured the 100-, 200- and 400-yard individual medley races at the third annual AIAW Small College National Swimming and Diving Championships in Reno, Nevada, March 7-10.

Franks won the first event, the 400 IM, in 2:10.77, a three-second margin of victory. She established a new national record of 2:10.0 in a prelim heat. The 400 IM, her second event, was run in 4:40.12. Following in second place was Beth Smith, in the national record in the 100 IM, swimming a 1:00.06.

Freshman Tara Baroody finished third in the 200-yard backstroke and 24th in the 400 IM. Freshman Mary Maier drew a 14th (50 freestyle), 24th (100 free) and 31st (50 butterfly). Sophomore Alice Mishen splashed to a 17th in the 50 breaststroke.

The group placed sixth in the 200-yard medley relay and 16th in the 200 freestyle relay.

As a team, Villanova finished 12th, 126 points behind the winning score of 340 points posted by host Nevada-Reno. Drexel was second with 319.

The Men's Tennis Team will host St. Peter's tomorrow at 1:00 p.m.

Cats Fall To Hawks After Three Wins

By JERRY W. VASA

The 1979 Villanova Wildcat Baseball team continued its winning ways with consecutive victories over Swarthmore and Dartmouth, before finally tasting defeat at the hands of Hawks of St. Joseph's. The Cats' 3-1 record is one of the their best starts in recent years. If they continue to play the exciting brand of ball they are currently playing, we can all look forward to a very enjoyable season to come.

The batmen picked up their second victory of the season as they traveled to Swarthmore for their home opener and came away with a 14-8 victory. The Wildcats' bats came alive early in this contest as they exploded for six first-inning runs. Included in those runs was Stan Luongo's first collegiate home run, a 370 foot blast to right. Ed Szymanski pitched six strong innings allowing only one earned run, while striking out seven.

The Wildcats upped their season's record to 3-0 last Sunday as they downed the Big Green of Dartmouth 11-6. Again the batmen got started early as Bob Leacalso hit a two-run double following consecutive singles by Stan Luongo and Dave McHugh. Dartmouth got even in the second inining on the first of two home runs by Robert Carrol, this one a deep shot to center.

The Wildcats broke things open in the third with six runs. The inning was highlighted by Tom Harrison's RBI single, Chris Nurse's RBI double, and Luongo's two run single.

In the meantime, Wildcat pitching ace Mike Venezia, shooting for his second straight victory, settled down to holding the Big Green scoreless over the next four innings.

The Cats added another run in the fifth on Chris Nurse's solo home run. Nurse continues to make an impressive comeback after missing all of last season due to a knee injury. Besides his hitting, Nurse has settled down the often error-plagued Wildcat infield with his defensive prowess. Nurse and Tom Hank combine to make a solid defensive unit up the middle.

Dartmouth tried to play catch up ball in the seventh, and they used the long ball to do so. Bob Carrol hit his second homer to lead things off. After another home run and a couple singles, Coach Larry Shane decided that Venezia had seen enough action. He called on relief specialist Phil Sartori, who promptly shut the door.

The Wildcats then added insurance runs in the seventh on McHugh's sacrifice fly and again in the eighth on Kevin Cooke's solo home run. Dartmouth then added another solo homer in the ninth, but that was all they got. All told, Dartmouth had four home runs compared to the Wildcats two. But the Cats' 13 hit parade, led by Dom Melillo's 3-5 performance plus errorless ball, proved to be too much for the Big Green.

Dave McHugh homers in the ninth inning but to no avail. Villanova lost to St. Joe's, 4-2.

A Sports Fan's Nightmare

By PATRICK FLYNN

Welcome To Limbo.

If you're just a casual observer of athletics, you've probably lost the meaning of that greeting. But if you're a dyed-in-the-wool fanatic, you know all too well what this weekend brings.

There's nothing to watch. Not a thing. College basketball has been buried until November. Baseball is on the threshold of a new campaign, but that's still to come and does us no good now. In short, this is the weekend which God has set aside as penance for those of us who have neglected all of our weekend responsibilities for the last four months in order to grasp Dick Enberg's every word; and who will neglect all of our weekend responsibilities for the next six months in order to grasp Joe Garagiola's every word.

Sure, something will be going on tomorrow and Sunday. There is always a golf tournament for those of you (and there must be seven or eight of you on the East Coast alone) who relish that sport, or at least melt at the thought of hearing the beloved Vin Scully whisper for two days straight. Wide World of Sports will probably contribute some menu of weightlifting, gymnastics and ski jumping, but that is hardly a replacement for NCAA round-ball. Then there is the NBA, which doesn't really get interesting until the playoffs, and the NHL which doesn't really get interesting, period.

So this weekend gives us a good chance to catch our breath, to reflect on what has just ended and to look ahead to what will soon begin.

I guess I can accept the close of the college basketball season. It was a fitting finish. The NCAA tournament was a great success for the simple reason that, beyond the shadow of a doubt, the best team won. Michigan State wasn't worthy of that title throughout the whole season, it would have meant the rubber room for you. But over the past two months and, more importantly, over the final weeks, they were unbelievable. They were a juggernaut, a powerful machine which chewed up Lamar and LSU, disposed of Notre Dame, humiliated Penn and then dominated the formerly unbeaten Indiana State Sycamores on their way into the record books. Right now, no team in the world could beat the Spartans. They're the champions and I'll accept that verdict, even if it does mean closing the door on the 1978-79 season. (Even so, just one more "blue-chipper" from Al McGuire would be greatly appreciated)

But what really did happen to Penn? Obviously, I put the whammy on them last week with my lavish praise of their accomplishments, but there must have been more of it. To put it simply, Saturday's 101-67 fiasco was a once in a lifetime occurrence (or twice in a lifetime if you remember Villanova's version of the Penn stomp, 90-47 in the 1971 tourney). The Quakers penetrated well, handled the ball keenly, but just couldn't put it in the hole in the first half. Michigan State, on the other hand, paced by perhaps the greatest 1-2 combination in recent history in Greg Kelser and 'Magic' Johnson.

All of that can be forgotten now. The college hoopsters put on a great show, but now it's spring. Spring . . . that beautiful time of year when a young man's fancy turns to baseball.

Board To Vote Tuesday

Senate Rejects Budget

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The University Senate rejected the proposed budget for the 1979-80 Academic Year at a special three and a half-hour meeting Wednesday. It will send to the Board of Trustees recommendations that faculty salaries be raised 7 percent, and that tuition and room and board cost increments be kept to 7 percent.

Dean Alvin Clay, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, presented the budget, observing that "the priorities have been met, with the exception of faculty salaries." The proposed budget included a five percent raise in faculty salaries.

Immediately after the budget was presented, Senator Sterling Delano moved to reject the budget. He noted that the University has been operating at a surplus for the past 12 years. "It is difficult for someone who's served on this Senate for three years to accept a 10 percent increase in tuition and a 5 percent increase in faculty salaries, when in the last 12 years, we've been operating at a surplus in excess of one million dollars yearly."

Student Body President Joseph Cassidy, who seconded the motion, pointed out that the Senators did not receive the budget 30 days prior to discussion on the floor, as mandated by the Senate last year. He also said that the budget is not in line with priorities, since faculty salaries and student tuition are the top two.

Cassidy called the question to a vote nearly 15 minutes after discussion had begun, but the body voted to continue discussion.

Mr. Edward Murray, chairman of the Administrative Budget Committee, presented charts to illustrate "two problems; a stagnant student population and inflation."

Murray said that according to the Chronicle of Higher Education, faculty salaries at Villanova are ahead of those at other schools. He said "our situation is no different than the situation facing most schools in the country."

Dr. Angelo Armenti, Senate Chairman, pointed out however, that faculty salaries are far behind the cost of living.

Dr. Robert Langran was met with an ovation from some 70 spectators when he concluded, "it is intolerable to expect a five percent increase in salaries when the cost of living is in double figures. I cannot believe the budget is so tight not to allow for a 7 percent increase."

Two hours after the meeting began, Student Senator P.J. Winterhalter called the question to a vote. Not one Senator voted to approve the budget, and without six abstention the vote to reject the budget was unanimous.

Senator Joseph George moved that the Senate recommend to the Board of Trustees a 7 percent increment in faculty salaries. This was the recommendation of the Senate Budget Committee.

There was discussion that this motion be tied to a seven percent increase in tuition, but the body

Villanova Radiation – Safe

By GINO DEMARCO and DIANE MISKEL

Villanova and surrounding communities have no present or future danger from last week's Three-Mile Island nuclear mishap, according to a spokesman from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which has its regional office of inspection and enforcement in King of Prussia.

The Commission, along with numerous government agencies, has been testing the area for the last few days with tele-radiation meters that measure the cumulative radiation in the area, he said. The counts indicate 2-5 milarectons nuclear dissipation within two miles of the site. The spokesman claimed the Environmental Protection Agency uses a variable of 1000 milarectons a day for any serious consideration of evacuation.

At the rate of leakage of the Harrisburg plant last Tuesday the radiation would have to continue for the next two hundred days for people to being worrying, said the spokesman. He said the only reason for the evacuation of the pregnant women and young children from Harrisburg was that they are most susceptible to radiation.

Last Monday night, members of the national Mobilization for Survival and Philadelphia's Keystone Alliance, both anti-nuclear power and nuclear arms groups, met with Villanova students.

Mobilization for Survival showed a filmstrip, the theme of which was "the use of the atom for peaceful energy is actually a very dangerous health hazard."

A major by-product of the nuclear generating process is plutonium, according to the filmstrip. One pound of this material, it said, if dispersed, would have enough power to kill every man, woman, and child on this earth. Mobilization feels that this material is not disposed properly and scientists are not fully stressing the hazards of this process.

The public has been made aware of this fact in light of the recent happenings at the Three Mile Island plant outside of Harrisburg.

Bob Smith, a member of the Brandywine Peace Community commented, in reference to Three Mile Island, that people "are not really aware of the seriousness of such situations because officials in charge don't seem to be taking drastic measures. It seems the problem doesn't exist."

He observed that last Wednesday, when the incident occured, people ran toward the nuclear plant, as if they were running to a fire. "Something is wrong with the whole psychology of the thing," he said.

"We keep conceiving of new and different technological advances and in most cases we do not know our own inventions well enough to deal with them fully," he said.

Poet To Speak

By JOHN H. SCHWARZ

The English Department is sponsoring appearances on campus by the American poet W. D. Snodgrass and the English biographer Michael Holroyd.

Mr. Snodgrass will read his cycle of poems-in-prograss, The Fuhrer Bunker, on Thursday evening April 19, at 8 p.m. in Corr Chapel. The poems are monologues spoken by Hitler, Goebbels, and others in the bunker just before the end. Mr. Snodgrass's first book of poems, Heart's Needle, won the Pulitzer Prize in 1960. His poems, translations, and essays have appeared in most of the leading literary magazines. He has given readings of his work at major universities across the United States and Canada. Under State Department auspices, he has appeared in eastern and western Europe, the Middle East, and North Africa. He is writer-in-residence this semester at the University of Delaware.

Mr. Holroyd, who is working on the authorized biography of George Bernard Shaw, will speak on "Shaw and Women" on Friday afternoon, April 20, at 2:30 p.m., in Vasey Theater. Among Mr. Holroyd's publications are biographies of Lytton Strachey and Augustus John. He is at Penn State this semester.

Both reading and lecture are free and open to the public.

Pro-Life Seminar Held

By EILEEN CUNNIFFE

On Saturday, March 24, the Villanovans For Life held their third annual Pro-Life Education Seminar. This year's program was planned primarily for high school students and their moderators, and was attended by groups from several area schools, as well as students from West Chester State College and parishioners from St. Thomas of Villanova in Bryn Mawr. The seminar was organized by members of the VFL Education Committee, under the direction of sophomore Martha Duprey.

The purpose of the seminar was two-fold: first, it was to educate pro-lifers as to the facts surrounding current life-related issues; secondly, it was to help schools to organize their own pro-life groups.

The day's activities got under way at 10:00 with an opening address from Dr. Benedict Paparella, of the Villanova Philosophy Department. This was followed by the presentation of a powerful documentary film entitled "Who Shall Survive?" and a discussion led by Mrs. Peggy Roach, a member of the Pennsylvanians For Human Life.

The legal and historical aspects of the abortion issue were discussed by Mr. Edward Knorr, chairman of the Delaware Valley Citizens for Human Life, and a Villanova alumni member. The morning program concluded with a discussion of political and social dimensions of the pro-life story, as presented by Mr. Dan Regan of the Villanova Philosophy Department.

Mr. Jack O'Brien, Assistant Program Director of the Villanova Union, conducted a session on establishing a group, emphasizing the need for good leadership and motivation skills. Ed Kosak, president of the VFL, conducted a workshop dealing with the recruitment and retention of members. Project Ideas were offered by members of the VFL and of the pro-life club at Archbishop Carroll High School for Girls, in Radnor. The seminar was concluded with remarks from Father David Brecht, O.S.A., moderator of the Villanovans For Life.

"Let's get out of here!" characterizes the first thoughts of most people upon hearing of the second explosion at the Three-Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant (TMI) last Friday, explains Carol Verdi and Harry Cantrell, both 23 and first-year medical students at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center of Pennsylvania State University, in Hershey, Pa, seven miles from the plant.

Both Ms. Verdi and Cantrell had left a cancelled Humanities class on Friday morning when they saw their scheduled professor, a Ph.D. in theology, who explained that an at-first unpublicized second explosion had taken place a few hours earlier and he had been asked to act as a Chaplain to calm the panic-stricken patients, many of whom were checking themselves out of the hospital. At this point, "we were angry that no one had bothered to inform the general public of the second explosion when it first happened," commented Cantrell.

Neither one consciously realized the close proximity to TMI, and they never considered a possible accident. "It was like Pearl Harbor during World War II before the bombing: people knew about it but didn't think about it; the same of TMI," said Cantrell.

One of the most frequent outcries heard concerns the obvious lack of communication between Metropolitan Edison (Met Ed) officials and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). In addition to conflicting stories over a potentially tragic situation, many people wonder as to the validity of the news which is publicized. "They keep lying to us, you just don't know what to believe and I don't like it at all," said Ms. Verdi.

Cantrell reiterates the thoughts of many people, regardless of their feelings on nuclear power development, "If something like this could happen, it deserves to be set back 10 years. The emergency system went on and then someone just shut-off a switch. I can't fathom that one button can fail an entire multi-million dollar plant!"

With the recent release of a movie, about a southern California nuclear power accident, "The China Syndrome," many people entertain thoughts of a possible connection or even sabotage with the TMI plant. But as Cantrell says, "If it was sabotage, some weird group would have taken responsibility, and it's a 'little' too extreme as a movie advertisement."

Ms. Verdi and Cantrell as well as others say the fear is there, "but what can we do about it, it's out of our hands."

voted this down. Cassidy instead added to the motion a clause to recommend "that this increase will not result in an additional increase in student tuition." This motion was passed almost unanimously.

Cassidy presented a separate motion that the Senate recommend that tuition and room and board increases be kept down to 7 percent. This motion passed the Senate by one vote.

The seven percent increase in faculty salaries amounts to $400,000 more than the proposed budget. The decrease in student tuition will amount to $500,000 and the room and board decrease will amount to $150,000, according to Fr. Thomas Mahoney, vice-president for Financial Affairs.

Some suggestions to make up this money were discussed. Senator Langran recommended "looking at the money derived from interest on the endowment." Fr. Mahoney said that this money was already budgeted, and the motion was tabled.

Cassidy suggested that University football team be moved from division 1-A to 2.

After some discussion on referring the motion to the Senate Athletic Committee, the motion was tabled.

Though not in the form of a motion, Father John Deegan, vice-president for Student Life, said that some money may be gained by separating room and board fees, and cutting down on the housekeeping costs.

The Senate recommendations will be forwarded to the Board of Trustees, which will meet Tuesday, to make the final decision.

Greek Week

By GEORGE BOZZUTI

Thursday, April 19th is the opening day of Greek week which signifies the start of the annual fraternal olympiad. There will be no torches or blasts of cannons but many cries of anguish and shrieks of agony as the glorious Greeks compete amongst themselves in true Athens/Sparta-like fashion for the coveted Villanova pennant.

For those of you who are not familiar with Greek week, it is a series of sporting events in which organized teams from the fraternities and sororities on campus compete. These events traditionally include a tug of war contest, a pie eating competition, a track meet, a swimming contest, a trivia spectacular, a Greek chariot race and probably the most favored event of all — a chugging battle to test the palate.

The overall standings in the '78 Greek week left Zeta Rho in first place, Tau Kappa Epsilon in second, and Lambda Chi Alpha and Lambda Kappa Delta tying for third place.

The schedule of events is as follows:

Thursday, April 19
Tug of War — Mendel Field — 4:00 p.m.
Friday, April 20
Pie Eating — Kennedy Mall — 12 Noon; Track Preliminaries — Stadium — 5:30 p.m.
Sunday, April 22
Trivia — Physics Lecture Hall — 8:00 p.m.
Monday, April 23
Track Finals — Stadium — 5:30 p.m.
Tuesday, April 24
Swimming — Field House — 7:00 p.m.
Wednesday, April 25
Chariot Race — Austin Field — 4:00 p.m.

Becoming Accustomed To Life's Threats

After The Deluge . . .

And when the sand was gone and the time arrived
In the naked dawn only a few survived
An in attempts to understand a thing so simple and so hugh Believed that they were meant to live after the deluge.

Before the Deluge,
from Jackson Browne's
Late for the Sky

The deluge almost came this week. It almost came just an hour's ride down the Pennsylvania Turnpike. It almost came in a town where many Villanova students were born and raised, and where their families and friends still live. It almost came in a magnitude and proximity we had, in the past, chosen to dismiss as a remote possibility.

The nuclear crisis at Harrisburg's Three Mile Island generating plant scares us, and it should scare you. We have, it seems, grown accustomed to news of wars in the Middle East, tensions on the Chinese border, rioting in Iran, starvation in Africa and Asia. And perhaps we have grown docile; after all, we are a generation born in the wake of a great war, raised amongst assassinations, racial riots, Vietnam and counterculture, maturing with Watergate, inflation, energy shortages and massive poverty. Our sense of outrage and concern has been dulled, and we seem content to turn off the television when the news gets too disquieting.

When a threat to life existed some 90 miles away, however, we were awakened to the imminent danger surrounding us, to the horrible consequences an uncontrolled technology could have, if not in real physical harm at least in mental anguish. Petitions were circulated, rallies organized, knowledge sought, media attention focused.

But what will happen next week, next month? Will Three Mile Island go the way of Buffalo Creek, which opened our eyes to the problems of the American mining industry, the 747 disaster on the Canary Islands, or even Jonestown, which is already a relatively forgotten issue? When things cool down, will we be content to go on living, pretending that the problem cannot happen again, maybe this time with worse consequences?

Don't close your eyes. Don't avoid issues, not only nuclear power but hunger, poverty, energy, injustice, care. Play a part in determining your future, instead of simply hoping there is a future. Don't gamble that you will be lucky enough to live after the deluge.

Footnotes

On campus last weekend, our faith in the resourcefulness of Villanova students was restored when residents of Stanford hosted a "Radiation Day" party in the sunshine on Saturday afternoon. The event went without incident, although the day was later marred by a food fight in the dorm's cafeteria. The party itself was a reminder of college life as it was meant to be, and as it should be at the University. So have faith and dare to have fun — it's not bad once you try it.

Apparently, few read our editorial on Spring Fever '79 two weeks ago, since rain came regardless of prayers. Undaunted, the week's leaders pressed on, and, everything considered, did a noble job. Still, it would have been nice to have some sun. . .

In Response To "In Response To Cassidy"

To the Interested Student:

I am sorry if I projected a bleak picture for the forthcoming commencement exercises, but I still feel that as the highlight of a Villanova career, graduates deserve more recognition, especially those achieving academic excellence.

My collegiate life has not been marked with pessimism, but with the greatest of optimism. I would not exchange the friends I've made or the education I received. My frustration at Villanova is in "the role of the student in University governance." The Student Government Association is an enthusiastic organization with very hard working individuals. The Student Government receives little recognition or thanks for their work. Your statement pointing out the lack of effort on my part is unfounded and untrue. At the March 17, 1978 meeting, a motion co-authored by me was presented to the Senate stating: "Resolved: That the University Senate recommends to Father President Driscoll that, if possible, the commencement date of the year 1978 be moved back one week, and that all future graduations be one week from the end of finals." At a Calendar Committee meeting of 1978-79, I again pointed out the importance of moving graduation date back in order that we received our diplomas.

Lastly, I did write letters to Father President Driscoll, Dr. James Cleary, VPAA, and Father John Deegan, V.P. of Student Life, requesting that the names of distinguished honors students be called out on graduation day.

In retrospect I've had a very rewarding career here at Villanova with few disappointments: those disappointments stemming from "the role of the students in University Governance."

Sincerely,
Joseph T. Cassidy

Dean Of Men's Office

Dear Sir:

I am currently a sophomore who had the misfortune of choosing a number above the cutoff in the lottery. During the last two weeks I have heard many students complaining about how incompetent the Dean of Men's Office is. I disagree strongly with this attitude. That office had been my first visit every day for the week following the lottery. Each day Mrs. LaBella and Mrs. Grace kept giving me names to call and offered encouragement.

A few days ago I found a very suitable residence for next year at a reasonable cost. For that, I thank Mrs. Grace, Mrs. LaBella, and Mr. Martin for their time and patience. You all deserve a great deal of credit. Continue the fine work and to those who only criticize, the problem may not lie with the Dean's Office but with yourself. Think about it.

Sincerely,
Bruce Keogh

Stage Crew Thanks

Editor:

After reading last week's commentary on cultural programs, I'd like to correct one small error in reference to the Traveling Music Show. It's quite true that transforming the Fieldhouse into a professional theater is an impossible task but all of the credit goes to the Villanova Stage Crew for endless hours of work on the Wednesday and Thursday, before and during the show. There was an all out effort on their part to make the stage presentable to the audience and the performers. For those efforts, along with those during the concerts, dances, coffeehouses, lectures and discos we've had this past year I'd like to express my sincere thanks to the Stage Crew.

Sincerely,
Lucy Gorski

Senate Disbands English Dept.

By MARIANNA ROSANNADANNA

During a half-hour long meeting last Friday, the University Senate delivered a one-two punch in its bout with inflation by voting to discontinue all English courses at Vanillanova, and to disband the expensive University Fund Raising Office.

The motion to eliminate the English department, presented by the Senate Budget Committee, met little opposition. Alumni Senator Delraso summed up the argument: "It's all very admirable to want to continue English classes at Vanillanova, but let's talk some dollars and sense. It's going to cost approximately 30 percent the cost of the entire rathskellar of the Connelly Center to keep the English department. That's not to mention the cost of the Yogurt Shop that's going to take the place of the Pie Shoppe."

Former Senator Delano, who was an English professor, noted that the Senate was setting a precedent by eliminating an entire liberal arts department. "What's to go next?" he asked," "History? Sociology?"

"Probably Philosophy," said one C&F Senator. "Let's face it. These liberal arts don't mean nothing in the real world."

One Science Senator suggested retaining some English courses, maybe just some essayists, like Bacon or Swift, since no one writes poetry anymore, anyway.

Senator Langran of Poli-Sci proposed only teaching American Literature courses, but the body decided unanimously to take the simpler course of eliminating the whole English department, and perhaps adding a few less expensive Accounting I courses to the liberal arts core curriculum.

In another cost-cutting move, the Senate also decided to eliminate the University Fund Raising Office. "Why, the paperwork for the Covenant Campaign alone was equal to the expense of the English Department plus the upkeep of Vasey Theatre today," said one Senator.

"Ninety percent of University income is derived from tuition," said one knowlegeable student senator. "I don't see what the purpose of this fund raising office is. Let's get rid of it and spend the money where it's needed," he said.

Several Senators wished to question the Vice-President for Development about the efficacy of the fund-raising office, but Fr. Riley had excused himself from the room just prior to the motion.

One of the most crowded Senate meetings in years saw the prededent setting of the demise of the English department for budgetary purposes.

Vandalism is bad, but continues at Vanillanova.

Vandalism Again

By BRUNO SAMMARTINO

Despite what University officials say, vandalism is enjoying a revival of renewed interest on Vanillanova's campus, costing students hundreds of dollars a year in breakage fees and surcharges.

"Vandalism is not and never will be a problem on campus, no matter what you print in the paper," said one University spokesman. "Vanillanova students are as mature and responsible as they have always been."

In response to the 25% increase in room and board slated to be charged next year to cover the costs of this scourge, several mature and responsible students have banded together to form the "Vanillanova Vandalism Vigilantes," a radical group dedicated to ending the war on vandalism.

"Vandalism is bad and can cause damage," said Roy Turfburger, founding father and self-appointed president-for-life of the organization. "We don't think that asking our daddies to pay an extra $500 a year is really fair. I don't do vandalism. It must be people off the streets, or those darn commuters who wander through our buildings and break things. We're sick of paying so when we find somebody doing bad things to our places we're going to throw them through a window or something, like putting their heads through doors. Besides, we get to wear these nifty white hoods and burn crosses."

Some outspoken members of the administration hold the same views as Turfburger. "Vandalism is definitely on the rise," stated Rev. Nice, OSA, vice president for Maintenance Affairs, "and I have the pictures to prove it if you page."

Vandalism is not restricted to student dormitories as many mistakenly believe. The mysterious replacement of clocks in Bartley Hall classrooms and a fire which gutted a wastepaper basket in Tolentine earlier this billing period are examples of the pervasive and even wide-spread effects of vandalism.

Although the entire Radnor Township Fire Department responded to the blaze, neither firefighter would comment on the origins of the blaze. Officials speculate that it was accidental and resulted either from spontaneous combustion of the layers of dust collected in the Board of

New Trustee Named

By RON JAVERS

Rock guitarist Frank Zappa, one of the music world's most avantgarde artists and a founder of the Mothers of Invention, was named to Vanillanova's Board of Trustees last week in an attempt to bring fresh input to the group and to "make Board meetings a little livelier," a University spokesman said yesterday.

"We're very pleased to have Frank working with us," Fr. John M. Driscoll, University president, said. "We feel that his broad experience with LSD and other hallucinogens has given him an expanded outlook on life. Frank is a valuable asset."

The move came as a surprise to many in academic circles. Zappa first came into contact with the University when he met a Board member at the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1968, and is rumored to have partied with the entire Board during a fund-raiser for the Chicago Seven. Aside from the now classic "Vanillanova Board of Trustees — Frank Zappa interviews" printed in Rolling Stone during 1975, the musician's relationship with Vanillanova has remained somewhat of a mystery.

"I am truly shocked by this appointment," said a leading faculty member who asked not to be identified. "I mean, Zappa is getting old, and his records were never big sellers. If you really want to make the Board work, why not get someone like Pat Boone who is at least still musically viable, and represents America at its very best."

Boone is said to have been a heavy favorite among some Board members, but his admittance to consuming over 6 quarts of milk a day is said to have had negative

This is the Villanovan Parody Issue. It was conceived and written on the premise that the greatest injustice that one man can do to another is to take himself too seriously. And taking Villanova seriously is a one-way ticket to Haverford State Mental Hospital.

This is satire. This is parody. This is good-natured fun. Please don't sue us. Please don't call us dirty names. Please don't cut our budget for next year and make us share office space with WKVU.

The Parody is the collective work of some of the more demented (and courageous) members of the Villanova Community. To all those whom we have failed to offend, malign, slander, or embarrass, we sincerely apologize. Better luck next year. But please be gentle as you serve your summonses. Show us a little compassion. We are very sick people and need help. But at least we're laughing, and if you haven't learned to laugh at yourselves by now, you're in bigger trouble than we are.

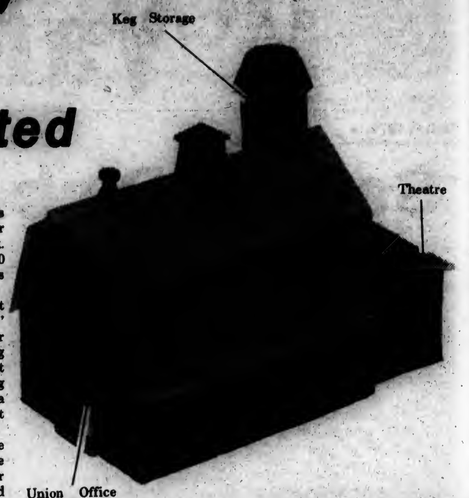
Connolly Center Completed



By FLOYD R. TURBO

Construction of the University's long-awaited Connolly Center was completed early this week. The opening, scheduled for 1:00 this afternoon, is a full 11 months ahead of schedule.

"For a while there I thought that they'd never get finished," confided Marc Tickman, director of the center. "Money was getting tighter and tighter, so we put things in high gear to get the thing done. Of course, we had to cut a few corners here and there to meet our budget."

Minor modifications in the original design of the structure were required to make room for the new theatre which was added after construction was begun. Tickman explained some of the other architectural changes that the monetary crisis has predicated.

"Well, the Rathskeller had to go, especially with Student Activities giving the L.C.B. my old office in Dougherty. We added instead another 'multipurpose' room and student lounge area. We think that this area could still become a hub of campus activity. It'll be especially useful during drop-and-add and course adjustment periods. We've been very sensitive to student reaction to the demise of their pub, and we knew that the only thing Vanillanova students like more than beer is waiting in line. It is a place where all students can come together to socialize."

Commenting on the exterior modifications, Tickman continued, "I'm sure that those tiny changes won't affect the way Villanova students use or appreciate the Center. The high vaulted roof design may resemble a barn, but it has many advantages. I'm sure that it will attract a lot of students to the facility ... especially Sheehan residents."

The center is already booked solid for the remainder of the semester, housing the Vanillanovans for Life Square Dance and Apple Bob, the Union's Jerry Lewis Film Festival, and the Connelly Theatre's production of the original play, Here Comes Edna with a Saxophone.

Rathskeller's replacement to be used to aid drop and add lines.

"The response by certain student organizations has been tremendous already," said Tickman. "But before we make any more definite plans for the building I've got to hire an operations manager to handle the day-to-day affairs and answer the phone when I'm out to lunch."

A & S Dean Named

By CHUCK "BURNED AGAIN" CHEERLESS

Rev. John P. O'Merrimack, O.S.A. has been named the new Dean of Arts and Sciences, it was announced today by Father President Dristan.

O'Merrimack fills the post vacated last Christmas by the former Rev. Richard D. Brezhnev, O.S.A., who resigned "to pursue his own academic interests."

The appointment of O'Merrimack came as a surprise to the members of the Dean Search Committee, who had labored for six months to review all the candidates, nominate two possible choices, and submit their suggestions to Father Dristan. O'Merrimack's name had not been submitted by the Committee.

"If Father Dristan had wanted an Augustinian as dean, he should have told us," stated student Committeeperson Cathy Pesky.

"I should think it would have been obvious to the Committee all the inherent advantages of having an Augustinian dean," responded Dristan. "For example, who else but an Augustinian dean could make an error and immediately forgive himself?"

"The appointment of O'Merrimack only reinforces my belief that our administration is 'collar-blind'," stated Dr. Bernard Riled, a faculty representative on the Committee. In addition, Riled said he felt that Dristan didn't even consult the Committee's work before reaching his decision.

Dristan immediately mollified Riled's anxieties by stating, "I'm not sure what material the Committee submitted to me, but I bet it was just fine."

Some members of the faculty supported Father Dristan's selection of the new dean.

"I feel that the Dean Search Committee was a sua sponte sham. In no way did they represent the interests of their constituients," declared Professor John Stewed of the modern languages department. "Father Dristan had no choice but to select O'Merrimack."

In defending his decision, Dristan concluded, "I looked at all the candidates and their resumes fairly and impartially. The selection of an Augustinian as dean in no way suggests a conservative or anti-secular bias on the part of the University administration and trustees."

In related events, former Villanova President Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., was appointed to the Board of Trustees today.

Bianco Selected RA Of Year

By DWIGHT MANSBURDEN

It has been officially announced by the Dean of Men's Office that Rocco "Smiley" Bianco has been unanimously elected Resident Assistant of the Year for the third time.

The annual award is bestowed upon a worthy recipient in recognition "for outstanding achievement in the field of interpersonal counseling, for extraordinary and humane sensitivity to the problems of undergraduate residents, and for performances above and beyond the call of duty or limits of reason" according to the selection committee chairman, Dr. Horatio Backhoe, formerly of the Religious Studies Department.

When asked to comment on the reasons for the unprecedented designation of Bianco as R.A. of the Year for three consecutive years, Backhoe said, "Rocco is the best; there are no two ways about it. Among his many qualifications are his innumerable 'textbook' busts. He's a role model, and despite his gruff appearance and fondness for using certain four-letter vernacular expressions, a really nice guy. Besides, he's not afraid to use his gun."

Bianco's staff.

Rocco "Smiley" Bianco, RA of the year in action.

Backhoe continued, "When Rocco's around there are no other R.A.'s. He's made busts in every dormitory on campus. The man covers more ground than Meatloaf."

The 56-year-old Bianco, an ex-member of the Philadelphia Police Force, commented on the prestigious commendation.

"It's always a thrill and I'm really quite flattered. I just wish my wife could be here to see me. You see, she was blown away by some two bit punks who broke into our house and stole my war mementos. That's why I left the force to come here where I had a little more freedom to express myself."

Bianco, a Peace and Justice major in the University's Continuing Education Program, told reporters at the awards luncheon that he attributes receipt of this year's award primarily to his reorganization of the Stanford Hall resident staff.

"Yea, I took a lot of boneless worms with no guts or backbone and turned them into a crack unit. When I was assigned there in September I was amazed how they could put so many guys with no personality in the same place."

Public opinion differs with Rocky's interpretation of his success. Many informed individuals in Bianco's area are of the opinion that the award was a direct result of his self-arrest on his own visitation violation earlier this year. "He turned himself in within fifteen minutes of the infraction," said one resident, "and kept washing his hands for weeks afterward."

Bianco's future plans are far from certain. "After living at V.U. anything would be dull. I'd like a job that will challenge me and the things I've learned here and in the dorms ... like bartending at Kelley's."

Canoe Crashes

(From the Diassociated Press)

Vanillanova's Spring Fever '79 ended on a somber note this week as four senior mechanical engineers drown when their cement canoe sank after ramming the Strawberry Mansion Bridge on Philadelphia's Schuykill River.

A grieving Dr. Robert Cinch, dean of Engineering, paid the four dedicated mariners a haunting tribute.

"They went down with their calculators strapped to their belts," Cinch said.

The Cement Canoe Races, normally a festive event with mechanical engineers from area colleges racing on the river, took on tragic dimensions when the Villanova four sat in their canoe before its cement had dried, thus permanently attaching themselves to the boat.

"We didn't realize what had happened until we rammed the bridge," said Scott Dull, the lone survivor of the incident. Dull was reportedly mooning the shore at the time of the accident and only lost his pants in the accident.

Efforts to save the four sinking students were thwarted when the conservative engineers refused to slip out of their pants, preferring a tasteful demise to the embarrassment of safety.

Visitation Denied

By RENEE RICHARDS

The Vanillanova Board of Trustees, in an extraordinary meeting last night voted unanimously to abandon plans to extend the "great experiment" and rescind any form of visitation at anytime in any dormitory anywhere on campus.

"We've been wanting to do it for years now," said one prestigious Board member. "We just figured that if we were going to do it we'd better do it before Zappa got here."

The action is seen by many as yet another symptom of a pervasive renaissance of conservatism at Vanillanova. The deadly disease has spread to near epidemic proportions among undergraduates, especially those enrolled in the College of Commerce and Finance."

"In the last two weeks I haven't been able to keep my shelves stocked," said Norm Waxmonger, proprietor of "Both Sides Now," a unisex boutique on Lancaster Pike. We used to get maybe one or two engineers a week in here for wing tipped oxfords, or a lonely honors major or two here on weekends, but there's been nothing like this, honey."

The Board based its decision on other more tangible and objective criteria, in particular, a drastic rise in the incidence of social diseases among the undergraduate population.

The Trustee continued, "The infirmary's penicillin shipments have increased exponentially since this whole business started three years ago. If people are sick they'll leave school. If they leave school, they don't give money. And if they don't give money, we certainly aren't going to. Visitation had to go."

Anticipating a small amount of student dissatisfaction with their decision, the Board has made several provisions for enforcing the measure. "We feel that this conservatism thing is a fad at best and wouldn't be able to carry our plans for more than a year or two," he continued, "so we've taken some concrete action in the area of implementing our decision."

Construction has already begun on the world's largest chastity belt which is to be fitted around Alumni Hall. "Trust us," the Trustee interjected, "We've already called Guinness and Ripley. This will put V.U. on the map." The girls of Alumni were not available for comment.

The University is also planning the conversion of Good Counsel Hall into a totally modern convent. Several Board members expressed their excitement over the prospect of raising the necessary capital to complete the renovations. The University's "Convent Campaign" will begin next week with an intensive mailing campaign, $50 tuition hike, and other fund raising activities.

The "Convent Campaign's" goal is to raise approximately 8 million dollars. "There's an awful lot of glass area to stain over there, but I'm sure that we can obtain the needed revenue," the Board member confided. "After all, we did it before, didn't we?"

The Board had no comment on the possible connection between their decision and the rash of suicides occurring lately by inhaling next to Accounting majors.

Vanillanova's Convent Campaign swings into high gear.

Candidate's Day

The Fester family.

Once again, as in years past, The "Throw Away the Key" Society's annual Candidate 'sDay was a huge success. Graduating seniors from high schools, dance schools and cooking schools all over the country came to survey Vanillanova's beautiful suburban campus. The highlight of the day was Father Martini's lecture covering all aspects of campus social life. The lecture lasted four minutes, allowing little time for students to become as bored as they will be when they return in September. Another memorable presentation outlining Vanillanova's dedication to Christian principles was given by Father "You can call me Ray, or you can call me Jay, but ya doesn't has to call me Father" Raxon.

Pictured above are Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Fester and their son Chester who were extremely pleased with the Candidate's Day festivities. "Elvira and I just know that Vanillanova is the perfect place for our Junior!" stated Mr. Fester exuberantly. We agree. What this school needs is Chester Fester — another dummy who lets somebody else pull his strings. Maybe in four years he'll be student body president.

RSA: April Fools!

By GINA De DICCO, RICH HILL, MARK SCHADT and F.N.

Last Saturday night the RSA sponsored a trip to Harrisburg. From comments of those who went, it was a "hot time in the city!" It seems that Harrisburg is making its bid at being the melting pot of the East. It has been rumored from several authoritative personnel that President Carter has spoken personally with the radioactive rods, and he has been assured that a melt down is of no possibility (you can rest assured America). But what of the effects?

The Villanova Security guards, being trained to look for unusual events, have noticed that there has been a decrease in the size of the student body. The Administration, however, denounced all rumours of radiation poisoning, as the speaker waved his mutated arm to a crowd of five (must be apathy — what do you say KB.?)

Stanford Hall was in the spirit. They had a party celebrating "Radiation Day." Get ready for a $10,000.00 repair bill for the discarded paper cups and there will be no more visitation for the remainder of the semester. Who said V.U. is no fun?

The RSA has announced the formation of a new branch. It will be the MSA (Mutated Student Association). First on their priority list will be the installation of wheel chair ramps in the University Center. Second on their list is a plan to encourage members of this prestigious club to donate their bodies to the Villanova Biology Department.

Lottery: The Best Way

By MARK GRAVES

I had the pleasure of experiencing my first housing lottery this year. After observing and participating in it, I wondered if there wasn't a better way of solving the housing problem here. Is there a different system that could be applied here at Villanova with greater success?

My conclusion, after some research, was that there isn't. Despite the impersonality of being reduced to a number, the program seems to be quiet effective. This success can be attributed directly to the offices of the Dean of Men and the Dean of Women. Each person who participated was given total consideration in getting the best possible room next year. APO should also be commended for their invaluable help in the program. The only criticism concerns the waiting in lines, which seems to be an inevitability in major administration programs. Many people had to miss classes because of delays. Perhaps another day should be added to correct this drawback.

Nearly everyone that I talked to thought it was run well. Freshmen enjoyed the security of guaranteed housing next year, and the cut-off numbers for sophomores and juniors was relatively high. This, and the cooperation of all involved, made this year's housing lottery as successful as possible.

RSA does it in the dorms. You can do it too! The following positions are open for next year: Publicity, Organization & Development and Social Committee Coordinators. Pick up applications in RSA office — 2nd floor Dougherty.

LCB Turns The Screws

By JOHN E. WALKER

Four Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board special agents, disguised as Vanillanova undergraduates, arrested the entire male population of Austin Hall in a daring midnight raid last night. The action is the third such dormitory sweep in the past two weeks, preceded by the arrests in Simpson and O'Dwyer Halls.

Claude J. Bland, special collegiate prosecuter and director of the L.C.B.'s Radnor Township branch office, when questioned about the rash of raids perpetrated by his squad on Vanillanova residence halls this academic year, commented, "You people just aren't taking us (the L.C.B.) seriously! Hey, I went to right school, I know what goes on at those college parties. Besides," he and added, "it's the beginning of the month and my unit could match the regional raid record." The rationale behind the arrangment of an entire upperclassman dorm was presented by Bland. He said, "There must have been about fourteen or fifteen kids under 21 with booze hidden in their closets and beers concealed in refrigerators. The law's clear, and you guys are over 18 and legally responsible. We're following the book."

LCB agents disguised as V.U. students stake out the campus.

While the reasons for the Austin arrest are still unclear, the charges pressed against the residents of both Simpson and O'Dwyer stemmed from a Vanillanova Union-sponsored keg party ten days earlier.

According to a reliable source, the party was contained to a single room and heavily monitored by bouncers from DKN and the Operations Committee. "Man, we checked I.D.'s at the door and everything and then this guy comes up and flashes a card at me. I yelled to the guys to get rid of the keg, so they threw it out of the window and took it over to Simpson. Next thing I know I'm doing five to ten in this hole. The worst part of it is, I'm beginning to lose my buzz."

Bland said of the incident, "We made the charges stick with O'Dwyer, but we've had to drop them against Simpson. We felt that VICE had a stronger case."

When asked why other area colleges were denied the pleasure of his company's company, Bland said, "Well, Drexel, Penn, and Saint Joe's are in Chuck Farley's district. He's only got about four months before he retires, so he doesn't give two Schlitz."

A Vanillanova Student Life and Activities spokesman had no official statement about the situation or the L.C.B.'s petition for recognition as a student organization and request for office space. Off the record, however, Fr. John Doogan said, "Well, maybe it'll cure our housing shortage. I don't know what to do, but I think that the SGA has some sort of rally planned."

Since the flow of alcoholic beverages has been all but cut off and Vanillanova turned into a dry campus, the Student Government Association has organized an airlift campaign with other East Coast Universities. "So far, the University of Virginia has been the only one to respond to our plea for help," said one of Villanova's many unidentified Student Senators. "U. Va. is sending 24 cases of Seagram's which should be getting here in time for graduation."

SGA sponsored airlift breaks blockade.

Another Pizza Palace

By MAMA CELESTE

Dean of Men Harlan B. Waxler cut the ribbon at the grand opening of the Fedigan Hall Pizza Palace last Tuesday night.

The gala affair was well attended by about four hundred starving North Campus residents, trying feverishly to fulfill the minimum daily adult requirement of grease and other nutrients not present in the meals served in the Pit.

The Fedigan pizzeria and pinball oasis is the fourth such mozarella paradise on campus. According to Captain Inane of Security, the pie pens are causing more problems for his men.

"We can't keep enough vans on the roads to rush all the guys to the infirmary now, and they want to open another one!" Inane was, of course referring to the ptomaine epidemic attributed to a bad shipment of pepperoni.

"We understand the Captain's concern," said a bilingual representative of the pizza chain, "so we plan to open the next Palace upstairs at the infirmary and cut out the middle man."

The only dissenter on the evening in a moment of weakness, smiled and was rushed immediately to Bryn Mawr hospital for emergency reconstructive plastic surgery.

"I saw him smile once before, and he looked like he was in great pain. No one here realised the severity of his condition," confided a physician at Bryn Mawr.

The Dean's present condition is listed as satisfactory.

Are you concerned about your health?

Most people are — and right now the faculty and staff of Villanova University are being given the opportunity to choose among various health care plans. Your options during this open enrollment are to remain in Blue Cross/Blue Shield, or join a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO).

Briefly, HMOs are prepaid medical plans which assume direct responsibility for providing comprehensive health services for enrolled employees and their eligible dependents. Besides 100% coverage of hospitalization and surgery, HMOs also cover: any visit to the doctor's office, physical exams, eye exams, immunizations, prescription drugs, physical therapy, all laboratory and X-ray work, and 24-hour emergency treatment.

One of the most significant benefits provided by an HMO is Preventive Health Care, with the usual high cost factor for such care eliminated.

THE HEALTH PLAN — sponsored by Greater Delaware Valley Health Care, Inc. and HEALTH SERVICE PLAN OF PENNSYLVANIA are two of these options. These are the HMOs which many people chose to be covered by last year — and they found it a highly satisfactory experience. Ask around and see how others feel about these unique plans. Look over the information packets which have been distributed and exercise your option by April 22, 1979 to be effective May 15, 1979.

In wake of last October's Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board raid on Vanillanova's campus, much criticism has been raised about the social atomosphere at the University. For this week's On Campus question, The Vanillanovan ventured into Kennedy Mall and selected some students at random to ask what they thought of the social environment at Vanillanova.

Margaret Mary Mahoney,
Freshman, Good Counsel

"Well, to tell you the truth, I like it the way it is. After all, who wants raunchy beer parties and disgusting, drunk boys hanging all over you. I'm happy now, just studying, sleeping and studying. That's what you're here for, to study, not to have a good time. I have to keep my grades up to enter the convent anyway."

Peter Frampton,
Freshman, Corr

"When I first came her, I thought this would be a wild place. I mean, I though I was living in a dorm named after a beer, ya' know? I guess when things get a little slow, I just tune in to WKVU and listen to myself. It helps."

Dawn Free Spirit,
Junior Alumni

"Oh, wow, man, like I don't see what the hassle is. Everything is so beautiful here, ya' know. Wow, it's like far-out, I'm one with the trees and birds and the sky. I'm really freaking out now, too, because I just read that Zappa is coming to the Board. He's great. Would you excuse me now, it's time for my fix."

June Litella,
Emily's oldest sister,
English department secretary:

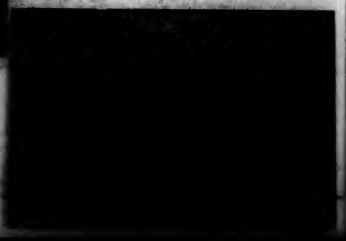
"Actually, the LCB's crackdown on campus, bringing campus social life to a halt, has been a blessing in disguise for me. I've taken to going to area bars where I've met various sundry gentlemen who show me what a good time is all about, especially the Southern gentlemen."

Myra Meek,
Senior, Sheehan

"I'm glad there hasn't been much social life on campus lately. At least I know I'm not missing anything while I'm waiting for my face to clear up."

Ted Lubner,
Junior, Fedigan

"In a word — Aaaagghh!!"



The Unknown Vanillanovan,
Corr Hall, Room 401

"It's great, Danny Baby, really tops. Vanillanova University's social life is one of my favorite things in the world. The others are paper cuts and mild concussions! HA! But seriously, ever since Chucky got canned, chain hanging's been it. Dougherty's always a good place to meet people, but the cafeteria and the rest are the PITS! HA!"

Ticket Sales Down

Vanillanova PA — Vanillanova ticket Manager Charlie Frank announced yesterday that there are still plenty of tickets left for four of the six home football games this year.

"We just haven't been able to move about 10,000 tickets for the Penn State, Alabama, USC and Notre Dame games. There are alot of other things going on these days like a Glee Club Concert, a soccer game and a Blue Key Meeting," notes Frank.

"If this trend continues we'll be forced to cut ticket prices from $5.00 to $.50. Another possibility will be asking WKVU not to broadcast these games," admitted the famed athletic administrator that doubles as a vendor at Veteran's Stadium. So far the only sellouts are Rider College and Delaware County Community College. The line to purchase tickets for these two contests extended down Ithan Ave. just past Good Counsel Hall.

Basketball tickets aren't selling any better reports Frank. "We still have a lot of tickets for Notre Dame, Indiana and Michigan State in the fieldhouse. The only sellout at this point is Eastern College on New Year's Eve," explains the aging administrator. Poor ticket sales for the basketball games is a surprise since the Cats are expected to be tough under first year head coach Chubby Cox.

In order to foster interest in ticket sales among the undergraduate population, the Athletic Department has adopted the same sales technique as Veterans Stadium. "By combining the ticket office with men's urinals we'll get them coming and going."

Vet's Stadium — the ticket office inspiration for V.U.

Intruder Apprehended

Local police today released this photograph of the infamous Sheehan Intruder who terrorized Villanova's campus last year. Shown shortly after his arrest on charges of indecent exposure and lewd conduct, Ferd Narone (center) is consoled by his wife, Ralph, (left), while a puzzled Villanova security officer looks on. A police spokesman explained that the delay in releasing the photograph resulted from the potentially incriminating "flasher's raincoat" which Narone is wearing, and which he wore on his nightly forays through the halls of women's dorms. The significance of the banana has not yet been disclosed.

Coincidentally, he returned the moment after the body voted unanimously to disband the office. In a related incident, several senators reportedly saw the shadow of a Roman collar and an ear pressed to the window of the West Lounge during the voting for this particular motion.

At the end of the meeting, Student Body President Hop-Along Cassidy proposed that tuition increases be kept down to five percent, his rationale for the proposition being, "better late than never." The student senators so enthusiastically supported this motion that they mistakenly raised their hands when Senator George moved to table the proposal "for further discussion and clarification." The motion is expected to return to the Senate floor in September, at which time the University Budget is also expected to be completed.

impact. Also considered were Reverend Ike and the Duchess of Windsor, but in its final analysis, the Board rejected them in favor of the quiet, calm demeanor of Zappa.

Vanillanova's Board of Trustees has, in the past, been criticized for its apparent lack of communication with the student body and its lack of fund-raising skills. How does the Zappa appointment fit into the Board's plans? Apparently, the musician has agreed to deal in which a gift of $11,000 or more will bring a Zappa concert to your home for one evening, a gift of $50,000 or more will bring Zappa and band to your home for an afternoon barbecue and evening performance, and a pledge of more than $100,000 will bring Zappa to the alumnus' home for a week of live-in fun, including abuse of the entire family and guaranteed destruction of property in addition to the rock and roll.

"We've undertaken an extensive survey of our alumni and have found Frank to be the most appealing act available, especially to graduates over 50," a University spokesman said. "Don't ask me why, it might be his classic recording of Movin' to Montana Soon, which was always a favorite of mine.'

Zappa could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman for the guitarist, who was reportedly lecturing at Oxford, insisted that the appointment was "a dream come true for Frank. He's always admired the work of Jim Croce and Don McClean, and is proud to be affiliated with their alma mater."

Damage was confined to the lower floors of Tolentine, although 21 experimental rats from the Psychology department were treated at Bryn Mawr Hospital for smoke inhalation after refusing treatment at the infirmary. Several offices were slightly damaged.

"This is the second time I've been burnt at V.U.," said Assistant Vice-President for Academic Affairs Dr. William Cheerless. The Dean of Men's Office was miraculously spared from any smoke damage due to the blood of those who lost campus residency spread on its door and lintel.

"We have the technology. We can rebuild Tolentine," said Dr. Robert Cinch, dean of Engineering. "But first we need some wealthy Catholic philanthropist interested either in becoming a Trustee or receiving an excellent tax write-off and getting a building named after him to contribute about $4,000,000.00."

Interested persons should mail their contributions, in small unmarked bills, to:

with Leslie Muchmore and the Phila. Company

Deborajane Governor and J.J. O'Donnell marvel at the complete lifelessness of a sperm sample in a scene from Ashes.

By STEVEN COMBS

Heritage. Are we our father's ns? Must their ideals be our eals? Society. What happens hen a man can't live up to others' finition of masculinity? Family. hat future is there for a barren arriage?

Ashes, a Philadelphia company roduction, raises these questions d proposes some answers. This not a show that you can just atch. It grabs you, shakes you, d demands attention.

Ashes is directed by Villanova University's own Leslie Muchmore and that is no mean feat. He has managed the staging of scenes in a way I would have thought unworkably graphic so that the impact comes through without explicitness. The performances he elicits from the two leads are superb.

Colin and Anne are an Irish couple living in Britain. Their attempts at parenthood, Anne's miscarriage, and finally, the rejection of their application for adoption, is chronicled with a clinical heartlessness that cuts to the bone.

Matthew Clair plays Colin, a bisexual Irishman who is disowned by his family for his stand against the violence of the I.R.A. and chastised by society for his failure to live up to the world's idea of "a man." Time and again he asks whether there is such a thing as "a man." What is it that defines our being except our actions? Might not our nature change or are we the prisoners of a static species?

Carla Belver, as Anne, ages visibly on stage. Her pain is so real that the strength she finds to carry on must support not only Colin but the audience as well. Her miscarriage leads to the removal of her womb. The trauma, agony, and helplessness of such an ordeal is delivered so clearly that it transcends age or sex.

For the first hour of the show I was repulsed. But that is author David Rudkin's purpose. His play seeks to show a situation where the concepts of heritage, masculinity and parenthood are not only irrelvent but wrong. The characters must define their existence in completely new terms. At the end of the show, Anne tells of a dream wherein a child not of this world crosses a barren, scorched field to take her hand. The imagery is masterful.

David Warner as "Scapino."

Scapino to open April 18

The Graduate Theatre Department of Villanova University announces its final show of the spring season: the rollicking comedy Scapino! Opening April 18, the production will run through April 21, and play the following week, April 25-28. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m.

An adaptation of the classic Moliere farce, The Machinations of Scapin, Scapino! recounts the adventures of the crafty servant (Scapino) who outwits old masters so that young lovers can be together. Love-starved young men, swooning young ladies, and boisterous fathers cavort through a plot abounding with challenges to family honor, mistaken identity, threats to life and limb, cajolery, chicanery, and a little pocket-picking. Terri Fimiano will direct this "Italianized" adaptation by Jim Dale and Frank Dunlop, packed to the brim with slapstick humor, sight-gags, songs and dances in the best Moliere Commedia dell' Arte tradition.

David Warner, known to Vasey Theatre audiences for his sparkling performance as Algernon Moncrieff in our summer and fall productions of The Importance of Being Earnest, will assume the title role. A little "Italy" will be created on the Vasey Stage, conceived by set designer Leslie Muchmore and costume designer Susan Trimble.

Don't miss this zany, lighthearted production at Vasey Theatre. Group rates are available. For reservations call 525-6288.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

Hard Times For Lovers is Judy llins' 17th album for ektra/Asylum records and the dy never sounded better. In the st, I found it extremely difficult sit through one of Miss Collins' bums from beginning to end. e material was simply unsusining. Not so in this case. If u're a diehard fan of the ngstress, you will revel in Hard mes For Lovers.

The title track, written by Hugh estwood, is utterly contagious. hat remains of Side One is more pically Judy Collins at her best. owever, in "I Remember Sky," e sinks unfortunately to that unstaining level of sounding like lie Andrews in her quest to imb every mountain.

One of the nicest interpretations on the album is that of "Desperado," written by Eagles members Don Henley and Glenn Frey. "Desperado" is without a doubt an authentic anthem for southwestern America, and Judy comes through beautifully.

"Starmaker," a Carole Bayer Sager composition, is by far the strongest of the ballads and projects an accurate idea of what Judy Collins is capable of. The themes from two motion pictures, "The Promise," and "Ice Castles" nicely wrap up Hard Times For Lovers.

A few words on the album jacket. Maybe a more appropriate title for this effort would be "Nudie Judy," as Sweet Judy Blue Eyes rides the reverse side of the album cover bare back. That's right, Judy Collins goes Lady Godiva — without the horse, of course. Judy feels that she is in her prime, so she posed "tastefully nude" as he would put it, for photographer Francesco Scavullo. Look, Judy, you're either naked or you're not. At any rate, the cover is pretty damn good, and so is what's inside.

Bad Finger

By THOM STYLES

Badfinger was, and remains yet, band without which the world ould quite nicely survive.

Perhaps this critique would go a ittle smoother by dissecting the bove sentence.

First of all, Badfinger was a and that bashed out a hit, "If you Want It and sputtered around or about three albums before disappearing from the scene altogether. For a Badfinger anthology, try cruising the cutout and die bins. You can probably get he lot for about ten bucks.

They are not a band without influences. A casual sitting of "Airwaves" is enough to convince one hat traces of ELO, George Harison, and other middle class riented musicians (Other names ould be heaped in, like the earlier Hollies and Kinks). I'm not out to axe any of these acts, each has made viable contributions. Unfortunately, most of the "Airwaves" Lp seems dedicated to the weaker aspects of these contributions.

Side one is nicely arranged, fairly well engineered (except for the title cut, which is so faint that I thought it was a misplaced background track. Actually, it segues into 'Look Out California', and in general, a bland bit of pudding, musically.

Side two sounds like Ray Davies' vocals dubbed craftily onto a Baby Grand instrumental track. Granted, there is an improvement in musicianship, though the songs are throttled by whimpy lyrics. The bright spot of the record is on side two, a tune called 'Come Down Hard' that's go some life to it.

The world could quite nicely survive a few more cuts from Badfinger like it.

Bad Company

By BOB LYNCH
and KEVIN KELLEHER

It's been three years in the making but the latest from Bad Company has finally arrived. Desolation Angels is a pleasant surprise for the casual listener or even the most avid Bad Company fan. The music is unmistakably Bad Company but with an added dimension. They seem to be going the way of all rock and bands these days, half music, half technology. The use of an occasional synthesizer has broken into their style. Once criticized for their monotonous tones, the band now seems to be moving in another direction. Success has allowed the band to experiment with their talents and expand their musical horizons.

Bad Company consists of lead vocalist, formerly of Free "Alright Now," Paul Rodgers. Simon Kirke, also from Free on drums, Mick Ralphs on lead guitar and Boz Burrel on bass, both from Mott the Hoople. The band members met at a concert where Free was a back group for Mott the Hoople. At that time neither band seemed to be going anywhere. Coupled with the death of Free's bass player, Paul Kossoff, both groups decided to disband and form a group of their own. Boz Burrel said it best, "None of us are superstars, just survivors." All the band members have been in rock music for ten years or more. The only one that shows signs of aging is Paul Rodgers. His straining voice can be heard in several songs on the album. Just how long he can last, only their concert tour will tell.

Side one of Desolation Angels opens with "Rock 'n' Roll Fan-asy." This song is reminiscent of a former Kinks tune by the same name. It's a rocker that expresses the joys and dreams of Paul Rodgers as he basques in the rock and roll limelight. This was the first song of the album to hit the FM Airwaves. The second cut, "Crazy Circles," is a version of the accoustic side of Bad Company. "Gone, Gone, Gone" is Boz Burrel's first attempt at songwriting. It has a basic theme like many of their songs. There might be a touch of personal feeling in this tune about leaving a woman and drinking to forget her.

The flip side of the album contains some basically toned down material, the exception being the first song. "Lonely for Your Love," written by Mick Ralphs, is reminiscent of the Bad Company of old. It drones on with the same rhythms that can be heard on most of their previous albums. "Oh, Atlanta," the second cut, could be confused with the Little Feat song of the same name. It's rather strange to hear a British band try something with a country rock flavor.

At the UK Spectrum

By MAURICE J. KELLY

A musical invasion from the British Isles took place in South Philadelphia when two bands, namely U.K. and Horslips made their Spectrum debuts on Saturday evening March 24. .

Horslips is a surprisingly intelligent band capable of infusing in their music social comment, historical awareness (albeit with a good deal of romanticism), fairy tale motifs and at the same time throwing in some rock and roll. The lineup consists of Jim Lockhart on keyboards, flute, whistles and vocals; Charles O'Conner on mandolin, fiddle, concertina, and vocals; John Fean, guitar and vocals; Barry Devlin bass guitar and vocals; and Eamon Carr, drums.

They warmed up the crowd with an old favorite entitled "The Power and the Glory," then quickly moved through three more selections before taking time out to personally introduce themselves. While Horslips are meticulous with regard to their lyrical style, the instrumentals are able to enjoy a life of their own, therefore giving the band more dimension. The only drawback in the performance occurred midway through the show during a rather ambitious dealing with Irish mythology entitled "The Book of Invasions Part One." It did not go over too well for the individuals responsible for mixing the sound managed to distort it to such an extent that various vocal harmonies and high keyed instrumental passages were hopelessly lost. The problem repeatedly plagued the band for the remainder of the evening.

Finally, U.K. played and they are capable of being the next major progressive influence in contemporary music. Perhaps it may be difficult, condering it's only a three piece band. But their concert was technically flawless and the individual talents of Messrs., John Wetton, Eddie Hobson, and Terry Bozzio were impressively showcased. However, there is only so much that a band of this size can do in a live situation without having to resort to prerecorded overdubbings and the like. So it was with a general air of disapproval that the audience noted the lackluster rearrangement of what up until this point had been considered U.K.'s signature piece, namely, "In The Dead of Night." The guitar of former member Alan Holdsworth is definitely missed. (As of this writing, both Holdsworth and Bill Bruford, another former member of the band, had teamed up to work on a solo effort by the latter, that album having been released over this past summer).

As previously noted, while some material was limited due to the actual number of musicians involved, the concert overall was a success. Wetton's bass work and vocals (ala King Crimson) came through forcefully on such numbers as "Danger Money" and "Time to Kill." Eddie Jobson, who got his start with Curved Air and Roxy Music, was a truly amazing sight to see handling his consoles of keyboard and electronic effects with an air of near fanaticism especially on a solo piece entitled "Alaska." Jobson's electric violin work was to be highly commended as well. Then there was the one man percussion section of Terry Bozzio. He has proven himself to be every bit as capable as Bruford was during his tenure with the band. Bozzio came up with some amazing rhythm lines throughout the show.

Overall, U.K. is a welcome sight to the progressive music scene coming at a time when bands such as Yes are established in a comfortable but stagnant niche and other groups like Genesis are struggling valiantly to stay together yet failing miserably in trying to live up to their past musical accomplishments.

In conclusion, there is a void in this genre of music that presently needs to be filled. I for one would like to see U.K. rise to the occasion. And despite only three members they still have a lot of musical potential, not only to survive but to create as well.

The Disco Domination

The Straw That Broke the Camel's Back.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

In the summer of 1974, The Hues Corporation had a smash hit on their hands, entitled "Rock the Boat." This very familiar tune is one of the first forerunners of a new brand of music that has thumped its way to the top of the music industry. Disco has practically become a household word, and its effects have extended much farther than the dance floor.

"Rock the Boat" was succeeded by yet another milestone in the popularity of disco. The summer of '75 saw everybody moving to Van McCoy's "The Hustle." This song prompted a dance craze that was, at this point, still confined to the night lifers, or the club set.

Coming into vogue in 1976 was Vicki Sue Robinson whose voice was immortalized in vinyl with the early disco classic, "Turn the Beat Around."

Around this time, a new sound came out of Munich, Germany, and at first was classified as orgasm rock, attributed to the talents of none other than Donna Summer with her sensual "Love to Love You Baby." The original 17 minute version of this song was watered down for AM airplay, and was noted more for the moans and groans rather than musical content.

Simultaneous to the Robinson hit, Donna Summer strutted her stuff on a one time Barry Manilow number one song, "Could It Be Magic." This cut was included on Donna's second album, Love Trilogy which was one of the first disco albums to be a commercial success.

At this point, the "discomania" was beginning to spread without check. For some, disco was becoming a lifestyle.

All of this laid the ground work for what was the turning point, a change of focus in the world of music. Before the fall of 1977, the word was that disco was a mere fad, and wouldn't make it to 1978. By Christmas, the fever had spread. John Travolta, with a little help from his friends, the Brothers Gibb, danced his way to an Academy Award nomination for his role as Tony Manero in one of the biggest box office smashes in history, "Saturday Night Fever." The soundtrack album, of the same name, went on to surpass Fleetwood Mac's Rumours and Frampton Comes Alive as the industry's most successful recording. Although the Bee Gees had been a major force in the pop mainstream for a better part of the 60's and 70's, their popularity reached an unsurpassed pinnacle that they are still riding on. At one point in the winter of '78, the Bee Gees were responsible for 6 of the nation's top 10 songs. A feat never before accomplished.

Disco Becomes a Life Style.

After the release of Saturday Night Fever, discos were, and still are, the most sought after night spots, with those too young for Philly clubs, crossing the river to enjoy the other side of midnight in New Jersey.

Today, the largest record sellers are groups like the Village People, who sing of Macho men and Y.M.C.A.'s. Unfortunately, the popularity of disco is so widespread that groups are putting out quantity instead of quality, hence, the Village People's latest endeavor, "In the Navy" is a sham compared to their first, and best, "San Francisco."

A more positive aspect of the immense popularity of this brand of song has channeled itself into even the most rock oriented stars. To check out the most obvious paradigm of this, look at the number one album and number one single for the better part of 1979. Rod Stewart had the most successful album of his career in Blondes Have More Fun, catapulted to the top by a concurrent number one single, "Do Ya Think I'm Sexy?" A group sometimes filed under punk, Blondie had a disco hit with "Heart of Glass."

Of course, aside from the Village People, there are groups that are strictly disco. Riding high is Gary's Gang and their hit Lp Keep On Dancing; Ultimate with "Touch Me Baby"; Chilly Ter Year Love; and fantastic Foxy with Hot Numbers, the great follow-up to the "Get Off" Lp, and Amii Stewart's jassed up "Knock on Wood."

The fever is spreading folks, so don't resist it. Get on your feet and dance to the beat. Disco is an expression of freedom and happiness. Leave your problems behind and take yourself to a disco for the "ultimate" nightlife experience.

Stickmen Win Two Before Trip South

The Men's Lacrosse Team went two for two last week with wins over both Widener and Dowling Colleges, scoring 15-5 and 16-11 respectively. Currently, their record stands at 2-1.

"In both games, the team played well, overall," commented Coach Lee Stevens. "We were able to beat the opposition to the loose balls, and we were able to score the goals, too."

Against Widener the Wildcats had a general field day and they easily defeated the less experienced team. Against Dowling, Villanova showed off its talent; the Cats exploded as Co-Captain Jim Beese pumped in six goals, Billy Hook scored four, Jim Sweeny three, Jeff Bergman two, and Bobby Adams one. "Goalie Bobby Hughes played a good game," praised Stevens, "and attackman Bobby Adams has accumulated 12 assists in the first three games."

This week the Stickmen face local rival and powerhouse, Drexel, in a game that may be their toughest of the season. Over the weekend, the team journeys south for two games: the first is tomorrow at Mount St. Mary's, the second on Monday against Randolph Macon. According to Coach Stevens, the team should fare well in both games. The next home game will be against Morgan State on Saturday, April 21 at 1:00

Schoolboy Eyes Villanova For Its Academics

By JEFF CARTY

Central High School's Carlton Young, this country's top schoolboy sprinter, has indicated that he will attend Villanova this September.

The sensational Young, who has dominated every sprinting event from 60 yards to 300 meters over the last two years, chose Villanova over the likes of Penn, Princeton, Cornell and Tennessee.

"I weighed this decision heavily," he said. "Academically, Princeton is better than Villanova to an extent, but I looked at all the pluses and minuses and, in Villanova, I saw a chance to get the best of both worlds, academically and athletically.

Last May, Carlton established state records (:09.4) in the 100 and (:20.9) in the 220. He has just finished an undefeated indoor season in which he equalled the national record of 30.3 seconds for the 300 yard dash "I wanted to go to a school that was established. I didn't want to go to a school that would have to build a program around me. I hope to help Villanova win some more titles."

With the addition of Young, Villanova is receiving one of the finest sprinters ever to come out of the Philadelphia area. "He could be the new Frank Budd," said assistant track coach Jack Pyrah, comparing Young to the former world record holder from Villanova via Asbury Park, N.J. "Carlton's certainly the Number one junior sprinter (19 years or younger) in the country. We're looking at him as a sprinter, but he has the ability to do whatever he wants to do."

Last summer Carlton Young was a member of the AAU Junior National Track Team, which competed in meets in Germany and Russia. This ream is traditionally comprised of college freshmen and graduating high school seniors. It is extremely rare that a junior makes the team. Young won the 100 meters in 10:39 and anchored the 400 meter relay team to a world reoord time of 39.51.

Carlton, an honor student at Central, plans to major in biology, with his eye on a career in medicine.

Softball Begins As Basketball Closes

By JERRY VENTRESCA

In the midst of post-season basketball play and the beginning of the 1979 softball season, the Intramural Department does have a volleyball champion. 2-E-Z, led by captain Carol Boyle, defeated favored Ground Floor West, led by Bobbi Richards, two out of three games in the finals of the championship tournament. Meanwhile the women's basketball championship tournament will probably start next week. In the men's basketball playoffs, 23 teams are in the tournament. Nine teams draw first round byes while the remaining 14 battle to see who advances to the second round. The teams drawing byes are fraternity champs DTD, Saco East, The Express, SPOA (7:30 Alumni league), Express, "Gimmie-The-Ball," the Cougars, the Bang Gang, and the Beasts of Burden. The championship game will be held either Monday or Tuesday in the fieldhouse.

The women's softball league, which starts in two weeks, needs more participants. If you're interested and want to enjoy the beautiful spring weather (other than having to study in it), contact Mary in the Intramural Department Office in Alumni. The season will be a double elimination first round and a single elimination second round. The men's softball season however is a single elimination first round and a double elimination second round. Having recently started the season with 84 teams signed up, 24 have already played games. Among some of the more exciting games were the Whales 9-8 victory over Last Try, DTD's 16-0 clubbing of Scratch n' Sniff, the Fothermuckers 10-3 decision over Galberry, the Longballers 14-7 victory over McHale's Army, a 6-run 7th inning rally by Mr. Bill's Tour Group which led them over the Incredible Naked Men II, 7-6, and Zeta Rho's 21-5 victory over the Vikings and 14-4 victory over TKE.

Students Feel Sports Facilities Are Lacking

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Many students at Villanova consider the athletic facilities here inadequate. The problem not only involves over 180 intramural basketball teams and a lack of courts, but many varsity and club sports also. Since we are amidst the intramural basketball playoffs, the question I asked on campus was "Do you think there are enough basketball courts to satisfy the needs of the intramural leagues and remaining student body?" Having asked 100 students, 94 said "no" and 6 said "yes."

However, among some of the displeased varsity athletes are Villanova runners Amos Korir and John Hunter, who favor an indoor track to the present outdoor "running on the boards." The reasons given were cancellations of practice due to inclement weather and the future revenue Villanova could accumulate from renting the track to high school meets. Nevertheless, Anthony Tufariello said that the "facilities are adequate enough, but it would be great to have better facilities." Similarly, Don Paige stated "there isn't need for an indoor facility." Pole-vaulter Steve Harford complained that "the pits are tearing apart and must be held together by rope and already two pole-vaulters, including myself, were injured by faulty and unstable standards." Mary Ellen Borkowski of the women's track team commented that the women are treated as "second class persons around here." She also complained that the cinder track gets very muddy when it rains and inclement weather cancels outdoor practices on the boards so there is "nowhere to go."

Several runners and other athletes suggested Villanova build an intramural sports complex such as Boston College or Princeton University offer. Both complexes consist of an indoor track, tennis courts, baseball batting cage, lockers, and basketball courts. The Boston College Complex cost approximately $3.5 million and Princeton's Jadwin Gym was completed in 1969 at an estimated cost of $6.5 million. A number of football players, including Tom Sharkey and Bernie Hober, suggested a new fieldhouse be built on campus. Sharkey said "finding gym time for winter workouts is ridiculous."

Football players also frequently use the fieldhouse weightroom. Along with weightlifter Vinny Mattamira, they had similar arguments concerning the constant breaking down of the universal and shortage of dumb-bells. "The student body," said Mattamira, "is into physical fitness and the weights go through a lot of use." Basketball players Alex Bradley, Tom Sienkiewicz, and Reggie Herron were fairly pleased with their facilities but also added that Villanova could use a new and larger fieldhouse to bring in big name teams and draw bigger crowds. However, the women basketball players weren't as satisfied. Mary Beth Gibson, Karen Hiznay, and Kathy Straccia had adjectives such as "small," "terrible," and "hideous to say the least" in describing the locker room facilities.

Intramural Department President Phil Farrell and Vice-President Dean Valenti commented that there are a lot of basketball courts, but not enough for approximately 1,500 students who use them each week. "At least two or possibly four more courts would be greatly needed," said Farrell. Farrell is another supporter of a Jadwin Gym-type facility here at Villanova.

Finally, Sandy Arena, a field hockey player, pointed out outdated cages and a lack of equipment. As a softball player she was displeased with the old uniforms supplied to the team, shortage of balls, and poorly (if done at all) lined field. In the second and final part of this series I'll present comments, suggestions, and some answers from the administration.

Baseball Rally Continues

By JERRY W. VASA

The baseball team further proved that their fast start is no fluke as they extended their season record to 6-2. They did so with wins over three Big Five rivals mixed in with a loss to West Chester State.

The Cats achieved their fourth victory with a 9-4 decision over Penn. They got on the board early as Dave McHugh and Kevin Cooke each provided run scoring doubles. The batsmen put the game away in the seventh on McHugh's three run homer. Steve Skammer worked seven innings in recording his first victory.

The next afternoon the Cats tasted defeat for the second time this year. The powerful West Chester State Rams pounded Wildcat pitching for 19 hits en route to a 17-8 win. Mike Venesia took his first loss of the year, but to his credit, many of the Rams' runs were unearned due to a number of Wildcat fielding lapses. The Cats did manage 15 hits themselves with four of them going to catcher Dave McHugh. After eight games this year, McHugh is hitting an eye popping .552. He also leads the team with four doubles, four home runs and 12 RBI's.

Last Friday the Wildcats avenged an earlier defeat by St. Joseph's with a 12-4 victory. The hitting stars this game were Dom Melillo (4-5), and Chris Nurse (3 run homer). Phil Sartori, the Cats' relief specialist, got his first start of the season and responded well by pitching seven strong innings, yielding just five hits.

This past Sunday the Wildcats lifted their record to 6-2 with an exciting, come-from-behind 9-8 victory over the La Salle Explorers. La Salle started early with a run in the first. The Cats got even in their half, due mostly to the help of three bases on balls. Kevin Cooke walked to force in a run.

The Explorers continued to hit starting pitcher Ed Szymanski in the second as they pushed three more runs across. This was the first time in three starts this year that Ed proved to be ineffective. The Wildcats cut the LaSalle lead to 4-3 in the third with a Bob Loscalzo two run single. They finally got even in the fifth on Dave McHugh's solo home run.

La Salle regained the lead with three runs in the sixth and one in the seventh, this one coming from reliever Steve Skammer. All told on the afternoon, La Salle pounded out 17 hits. However, they also left seventeen men on base, which proved to be too costly because the Cats had plenty of fight left in them.

The Cats began to scratch away at the lead in the seventh, as Bob Sullivan singled home Tom Harrison, who had doubled. In the eighth inning, Tom Hank singled home Jim Abromitis and Chris Nurse to make the score 8-7. After a groundout, Hank scored on Harrison's single to right.

Everyone is a hitter on this year's team.

It looked as though the Wildcats' hard work was for naught as La Salle loaded the bases with none out in the top of the ninth. Enter stage right, Phil Sartori to the rescue. After setting up a double play, then an intentional walk, Sartori struck out pinch hitter Tony Walsh. Sartori has been in six of eight games this year, compiling a 2-0 record and a 1.32 ERA.

The Cats finally won the game in the ninth. After one out, freshman Bob Loscalzo drilled a 1[illegible] pitch far beyond the right center wall for his first collegiate home run and a Wildcat victory.

The Cats' schedule continues tomorrow with a game at Temple, then return home for three consecutive contests. On Sunday the Cats challenge the Princeton Tigers at 1:30, then on Monday Philadelphia Pharmacy, game time 3:15. Finally on Wednesday, the Cats encounter Big Five rival and perennial power, Temple, with a 2:30 contest.

Tennis Gals Open Today

By TONY PANGONAS

The outlook for the women's tennis team is bright as they start their spring campaign. Coming off a 12-9 fall season and their longest and toughest schedule to date, the Wildcats feel confident that they will produce another winning season.

Coach Robert Langran feels that this squad has the experience and depth to come up with a successful season. "I am very optimistic about this spring. The team has worked hard in practice and is continuing to improve every day," said Langran.

Jayne Schreiner will be finishing her career in the number one singles position. The second and third singles positions are held by sophomores Diane Williams and Regina Ayoub, respectively. Co-captins, Kathy Stetler and Colleen Nolan, will both add their experience to the starting lineup. Stetler will play number five singles, while Nolan will pair with senior Mary Jo McWilliams on the number one doubles team.

A pleasant surprise has been the play of the freshmen. Bonnie Stokes battled stiff competition to come away with the number four singles position. The second doubles team will consist of freshmen Jeanne Regnante and Mary-Ellen Lynch.

The Wildcats' schedule includes ten matches, highlighted by an overnight trip to Washington to play Georgetown and Catholic University this weekend. Their first match is today at Lehigh, and Monday is their first home match against Kutztown. Midway through the season, two singles players and two doubles teams will represent the school at the annual Middle States Tournament at Princeton.

Softball Team Lacks Offense In Opening Losses

By ANN WOLFORD

The women's softball team opened their season on a disappointing note as they dropped their first two games against Salisbury and Trenton State.

As the first game opened, the wildness and issued six walks, allowing Patty Nowlan and Sandy Arena to score. The Kittens were troubled by first-game jitters, giving up seven runs in the first two innings.

Villanova then rallied in the third. With the bases loaded, Sue Ward singled, driving in Arena and Judy Kolb. The Wildkittens gave up two more runs, leaving the score at 9-4 after four innings of play.

The Kittens defense settled down and allowed no more runs. The offense threatened in the fifth, loading the bases with a walk and hits by Arena and Nina Wieczorcki. However the rally failed to produce a run and the game closed at 9-4. Pitcher Eileen McEvoy had a disappointing opening game, walking five, giving up ten hits and striking out four.

On Saturday the Wildkittens traveled to Trenton State where they lost their second away game. Trenton scored in the first, then loaded the bases on three walks in the second. A misjudged fly ball allowed all three runners to score. The Kittens continued their miscues in the third as three runs were scored on only one hit, pushing the score to 7-0.

Villanova tried to rally in the fourth inning when shortstop P.J. Beatty led off with a double and advanced to third on an infield out. Villanova failed to score once more, but Trenton added another run in the bottom of the fourth.

Diane Missina relieved starting pitcher McEvoy in the sixth inning and allowed the final run, leaving the final score at 9-0. McEvoy was credited with the loss, allowing only three hits, nine walks and fanning four. The Kittens had trouble generating offense, as they managed only two hits the entire game.

Rugby Team Tops Quakers

By S. WINE

On Saturday the Villanova Rugby "A" side won their first game of the spring season by defeating Penn 14-0. After turning in performances against Navy and Princeton that were very reminiscent of the swim team, the Cat Ruggers turned things completely around. Penn, who always seems to pull the big choke when the money is on the line, never had a chance as they went down to their third defeat in as many tries against Villanova over the past two years.

The Villanova attack was led by Gio "Reg" Regina, who had two sensational tries. When asked after the game as to what inspired his first really exceptional game of his career Gio replied: "I had to prove myself to my teammates. All week long they teased me about the five years I spent in 3rd grade with Angelo." Later that night he was seen exhibiting similar moves on the dance floor at the Sheraton. Also having excellent games were Colin Foster, who incidentally is up for the prestigious Billy Gregory Match Secretary of the Year Award, and Terry "Mono Man" Dansdill, who is still looking for an engineering position in the sanitation field.

Villanova led at half after a slow start by the score of 10-0 on scores by Gio and Colin, and a conversion by Jim "Stone Hands" Murray, who was subbing for "Father" Redmond, who had been searching for a proper bathroom all week. The score might have even been higher if "Hands" hadn't dropped so many passes.

The second half saw Villanova lock up the game as Gio went in for his second score of the game. Other people who deserve some credit for turning in some fine performances are Mike "Guru" Abele, who was deprogrammed before the game, and Tom Rasato, who was last seen at Valley Forge picking flowers and reciting poetry. Joe Wotjkun and Gary Pelkofsky, also turned in excellent games.

The Nova "B" side also won as they overcame Penn by the score of 4-3. Joe "Whitey" scored on a breakaway run in the first half and it was all they needed. "Whitey" had several opportunities to pass, but he claimed he couldn't see his teammates because of all the hair in his eyes. The Ruggers' schedule continues after Easter with games against Delaware and Reading.

Freshmen Spark Women Swimmers

By BETH WHITE

Freshman swimmer Jenni Franks led the Women's Swim Team to a twelfth place finish in the AIAW National Swimming and Diving Championships while setting two national records and becoming a triple national champion herself. Franks' records of 1:00.04 and 2:10.00 were established in the 100 and 200 meter individual medleys, respectively. She also won the 400 meter IM, placed second in the 200 meter freestyle and fourth in the 500 free. Franks outstanding performance earned her the honor of being voted the Most Valuable Swimmer by her teammates and Coach Jane Ackerman.

The women's coach also nails Freshman Tara Baroody for her third place finish in the 200 backstroke. Mary Maier placed fourteenth in the 50 free and anchored the medley relay. Sophomore Alice Maben, also a member of the medley relay team, missed recognition as an All-American swimmer by hundredths of a second after finishing seventeenth in the 50 backstroke. All four women combined efforts for a sixth place finish in the medley relay, the highest Villanova's aquatic stars have ever placed.

Out of the 80 to 100 swimmers competing in each event (representing 120 participating schools), only the top 16 finalists are chosen as All-Americans. Franks, Baroody and Maier each qualified for these honors.

Sophomore diver Marcia Gregory placed twenty-third overall in the one-meter diving competition, completing the team's victories. Gregory, who was voted the team's Outstanding Diver, is the first woman diver from Villanova to qualify for either Eastern or National competition.

Ackerman feels that the team "deserves more recognition," especially after their 11-2 regular season meet record. "There are only 10 people on the entire team and each swimmer can only compete in three events," explains the swimmer's mentor. "We need depth and quality in our swimmers and divers — competitors who carry their event."

"Next year can only be better" states Ackerman, since all of the swimmers and divers are returning for the '79-80 season. She looks forward to an even better finish in next year's regular season and post-season competitions.

AAUP Petitions For Unionization

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Prompted by an Executive Committee poll showing 73 per cent of the faculty would like to see a collective bargaining election, Villanova's chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) authorized the first petitioning step last Thursday.

A poll of all faculty members excepting Naval Science and Law School professors, with a 68 per cent respondent rate, showed only 21 per cent would not favor holding an election. To the second question, "If a vote were held today, would you vote for collective bargaining given an agent of your choice?", 67 per cent voted yes, 21 per cent no, and 12 per cent undecided.

The chapter unanimously voted to petition the faculty for an election by distributing cards which designate the AAUP as a bargaining agent.

According to Dr. Michael Levitan, AAUP president, a faculty member who signs the card does not pledge his vote for collective bargaining or for the AAUP as agent, but merely indicates he or she would like to see a vote.

The signed cards are then returned to the AAUP and counted. A 30 per cent return rate would allow the chapter to decide whether or not to send the petition to the National Labor Relations Board. Levitan said, however, that "even if we have up to 70 per cent return, that doesn't necessarily mean we'll petition the board."

Some individuals at the AAUP meeting said they wanted only to "use the signing of the cards as a show of force," said Levitan.

Student Injured In Center Accident

By STEVE HAGGERTY

Villanova senior Robert Cole[illegible] was injured when he entered [illegible] Connelly Center construction [illegible] on the night of April 5. Cole[illegible] had been attending a concert [illegible] in Kennedy Mall.

Coleman fell from a structure [illegible] the food services ramp of [illegible]. His leg was impaled on [illegible] that used to reinforce the [illegible]. He lost a great deal of [illegible] as the result of a severed ar[illegible] in his leg.

The injured student was rushed [illegible] Mercy Hospital. Presently, [illegible] is in good condition and [illegible] about with the help of a [illegible].

Resident Staff Director Jeff Quinn was at the scene of the accident. He commented on the efficiency of the Bryn Mawr ambulance squad and police.

"It took about 30 minutes to remove him (Coleman) from the site. It was thought that Coleman might have broken his neck and legs which meant he had to be handled very carefully. The ambulance team handled the situation well," Quinn stated.

There has been a problem with students entering the site. Several fraternities and students removing building materials have risked injury by being on the site.

Vice-president for Financial Affairs Rev. Thomas Mahoney, O.S.A. is aware of the problem. He explained that this is why the fence surrounds the area.

"We put the fence around the site to meet the legal safety requirements for a construction area. But if students want to enter the site no fence is going to stop them," Mahoney explained.

There is the possibility of lawsuits over the accident. The issue of who, if anyone, is liable will be decided in court.

"The University is completely insured. But we don't believe we are liable in this case. At any rate, I'm glad to hear that Coleman is doing well," Mahoney stated.

Senate To Study Athletic Financing

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

An ad-hoc committee to study the budgetary aspects of Athletics at Villanova was mandated by the Senate last Friday after nearly a two hour discussion.

The first motion from Student Senator P.J. Winterhalter, was that the Senate request the Board of Trustees "re-examine the amount of money expended for athletics with a view toward easing the financial burden on Villanova students."

Winterhalter withdrew the motion, however, when it was pointed out that the Board of Trustees is in the process of reviewing the finances for Villanova athletics.

After some discussion on charging the Senate's Athletics Committee, the Senate decided to set up a committee with administrators, faculty and students to study the matter and report to the Senate.

The ad-hoc committee will, in their study review Student Body President Joe Cassidy's motion of April 4, that football be moved from class 1 to 2-A.

Without debate, the Senate accepted an addendum to the Protocol for the Selection of Deans, proposed by Student Senator Cathy Pelesky. The paragraph clarified the role of the dean search committee, and stated that the President must communicate with the committee upon reaching his final decision.

The Senate accepted two lengthy reports on rank and tenure, one from the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee, one from the Senate Faculty Affairs Committee. One item, that similar tenure study be made in 1985, was changed to allow for a subsequent study whenever necessary.

The Senate unanimously dis-

University Finances: A History

By TERRY O'TOOLE

In the fall of 1975, a Villanovan reporter named Vernon Ralph wrote a series of articles examining the financial status of the University, focusing on several issues which were receiving considerable attention on campus.

Citing student tuition payments of approximately $20 million out of a total University budget of $25 million during fiscal 1975-1976, Ralph estimated that, when room and board charges were included, student fees accounted for between 90 and 95 percent of Villanova's income during that year.

"Students support the school," Ralph concluded, "and it is to students that Villanova must turn when additional monies are required."

Time has certainly proved that statement true. If proposed budget for fiscal 1979-1980 is approved by the Board of Trustees at their May 12 meeting, tuition would again rise 10 percent. A student who paid $4550 to attend Villanova as a resident freshman during the 1976-1977 academic year would then pay $5620 as a resident senior next year — a $1070 increase in the cost of a Villanova education over the past four years.

Villanova's financial situation and the annual University budget have proven to be volatile issues over the past five years. In the spring of 1976, Villanova's University Senate was embroiled in heated debates over the 1976-1977 budget. At a Senate meeting on January 18, 1976, the administration's representatives to the Senate staged a boycott of the body's meeting, protesting charges of "injustice and corruption in the administration at Villanova" made by the Student Government Organization (SGA). With administrators absent, the Senate voted 2-16-2 to reject the budget, citing the lack of accompanying financial statements, continued tuition increases and insufficient faculty salary increases.

"There was no increase in faculty salaries," said Dr. John D. Caputo, then chairman of the Faculty Assembly, shortly after that meeting, "no adequate explanation of excess income and no provision for controlling that excess money."

At a Senate meeting one week later, however, with administrators present, the budget passed on a 15-11-2 vote.

In the spring of 1977, the Senate passed a budget with a seven percent increase in the student costs by a narrow 3 vote margin, touching off reactions which included a budget rally in the Fieldhouse which attracted an estimated 2000 students.

At the Senate's February 10 meeting last year, the 1978-1979 budget passed by a 13 vote margin, carrying a relatively mild 5 percent increase in tuition charges.

In a precedent-setting vote three weeks ago, however, the Senate voted to reject the proposed budget for 1979-1980 as it now stands, with a five percent increase in faculty salaries and ten percent tuition hike. The Senate instead recommended to the Board of Trustees that faculty salaries be increased by a seven percent increment, and that any tuition increase should be held to seven percent.

Several issues which have marked past budget debates have once again risen for discussion this year. At the April 4 meeting, Edward Murray, chairman of the Administrative Budget Committee, attempted to justify the proposed increase in student fees and the five percent increase in faculty salaries by outlining the marked increase in costs Villanova will face during the upcoming fiscal year. The major point of dispute, however, seems not to center on accusations of wasteful or unwise spending but on questions concerning the generation of income.

Senator Sterling Delano, assistant professor of English, noted at the April 4 meeting that the University has, for the past twelve years, "been operating at a surplus in excess of one million dollars yearly." Delano was referring to the annual excess of revenues over expenses, an income which is not anticipated in the formulation of the budget.

Two years ago, when the Senate was considering the 1977-1978 budget, the question of a surplus was also raised. The group approved a motion to recommend that any surplus funds be used for

An Administrative Balancing Act

By NANCY ROONEY

One of the major sources of Senate contention with the proposed 1979-80 University budget, the small increase in faculty and staff salaries, has been resolved.

According to Mr. Edward Murray, chairman of the Administrative Budget Committee, the budget has been reworked to provide for a 7% faculty and staff salary increase. This new figure represents a 2% increase from the previously announced increment.

The $400,000 in additional income required for this increase was obtained from several sources. Murray explained that a significant portion of the amount was derived from budgeting for 75 additional incoming students. "The Admissions Office came out with a revised estimate of expected students about the time that the budget went to the Senate so we were able to change those numbers," Murray stated. In addition, the amount of income from endowment was increased by $70,000 and money recovered from the Covenant Campaign was upped by $60,000.

Other trouble areas in the controversial budget remain unsolved.

"Unusual conditions, such as inflation, the oil crisis, increases in social security expenses, and a heavy demand for capital equipment made the preparation of this year's budget particularly difficult," Murray remarked.

"The initial draft of the budget was out of balance by six million dollars. From that point, we just had to balance increases in tuition against expenses."

Murray stated that it appeared "highly unlikely" that any further changes would be made in the budget to reduce the proposed approximate 10% increases in tuition and room and board charges.

"I know that most people don't like to link salary increases with tuition increases, but most of our income does come from student tuition and a great deal of our expenses go to faculty and staff salaries," Murray noted.

The Administration has stressed that this year's budget is precariously balanced, allowing for no flexibility. Several sources of revenue, such as the Institutional Assistance Grants — and the recovery of Covenant ex-

Faculty Convey Discontent

By BILL GUERIN

As soon as the proposed 1979-80 was presented before the University Senate on April 4, one of the faculty senators, Sterling Delano, moved to reject it.

"To propose a 10 per cent increase in tuition with only a five per cent increase in faculty salaries, at a university showing for the past 12 years a yearly surplus in excess of one million dollars, is intolerable," stated Delano.

Senator Joseph George had similar objections to the budget, citing the double-figure rate of inflation with which the faculty and staff must contend.

"That proposed budget would be punishing the faculty and staff," said George. "In fact, it would be a wage cut."

Both senators expressed satisfaction with the work done by the Senate Budget Committee, chaired by Dean Alvin Clay.

"With the information available to them, I feel the Budget Committee did an excellent job," stated George. "However, I'm not sure they were given all the information they needed."

> I'd be surprised if the final budget includes a tuition increase less than 9 or 10 per cent.
> Dr. Sterling Delano

The two faculty senators predict that in its final form the budget will include a 7 per cent salary increase for faculty and staff, as was recommended by the Senate Budget Committee.

"When the Trustees rejected the budget two weeks ago, the chairman of the Board instructed Father Driscoll to rework the budget to include a 7 per cent faculty and staff salary increase.

"However, I'd be surprised if the final budget includes a tuition increase less than 9 or 10 per cent," stated Delano.

Student Senators Approve

By WILLIAM ROCK

After the Senate unanimously voted down the suggested budget for the upcoming year, Senator John Backus proposed a recommendation that the tuition increase be reduced from 9.4 to 7 per cent. This motion, which passed by a vote of 13 to 12, was opposed by only two student senators, Susan Lyons and Carol Ann Boris.

"Let's face it," Lyon declared, "We had just voted and approved a proposal to increase faculty salaries from 5 to 7 percent. A 1 percent increase represents $200,000, so that is $400,000.

"John's (Senator Backus) proposal would cut off an additional $500,000 and that money has to be found somewhere. It strikes me as a little ridiculous to try to come up with close to $1,000,000. It took months to balance the budget as it is."

Lyons maintained that she would support a less drastic reduction "Say perhaps to 8 or 8.4 per cent," she stated. "Everyone seems to think that if we ask for the moon, we will get a slice of cheese. I do not see that as our best alternative."

"Also, if funds are cut, I am afraid they will come from Student Life, and this frightens me. I do not want clubs to find out in September that they will not be getting the money they expect."

Senator Carol Ann Boris echoed these sentiments. She maintained that the result would be a cut in services and in the budgets of all of the University's organizations.

"What will happen is that we are all going to end up paying for things that previously we did not pay for, and nobody wants that," she declared.

"I worked on the Budget Committee, so I saw the actual figures more than most people. I could see that they were asking for something they simply could not get. Like any student, I want as low a tuition as is feasible, but the University is not giving us a false budget. This is a private institution, so there are no state funds to rely on."

Boris also expressed the opinion that the Senate's actions will have litle effect on the ultimate decisions of the Board of Trustees.

"I do not expect our recommendations to carry much weight. The Board can pretty much do what it wants."

JOG YOUR MIND AT The American University

The American University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action university.

Are you concerned about your health?

Most people are — and right now the faculty and staff of Villanova University are being given the opportunity to choose among various health care plans. Your options during this open enrollment are to remain in Blue Cross/Blue Shield, or join a Health Maintenance Organization (HMO).

Briefly, HMOs are prepaid medical plans which assume direct responsibility for providing comprehensive health services for enrolled employees and their eligible dependents. Besides 100% coverage of hospitalization and surgery, HMOs also cover: any visit to the doctor's office, physical exams, eye exams, immunizations, prescription drugs, physical therapy, all laboratory and X-ray work, and 24-hour emergency treatment.

One of the most significant benefits provided by an HMO is Preventive Health Care, with the usual high cost factor for such care eliminated.

THE HEALTH PLAN — sponsored by Greater Delaware Valley Health Care, Inc. and HEALTH SERVICE PLAN OF PENNSYLVANIA are two of these options. These are the HMOs which many people chose to be covered by last year — and they found it a highly satisfactory experience. Ask around and see how others feel about these unique plans. Look over the information packets which have been distributed and exercise your option by April 22, 1979 to be effective May 15, 1979.

Theatre Major A Possibility

Dr. James J. Christy, chairman of the theatre department.

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

A proposal to institute theatre arts as an undergraduate major has been unanimously passed by the Academic Policy Committee.

The proposal, which would feature extended cooperation with area Rosemont College, is now on the desk of Dr. James J. Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs and awaits consideration by the University Board of Trustees.

"If the Board acts in favor of the proposal, we could have a graduating class of 1981," explained Dr. James J. Christy, head of the theatre department.

It is uncertain, however, whether the Board will consider such a proposal very soon as budgetary matters are now of primary concern. "If the proposal is not activated this summer," stated Christy, "a graduating class in 1981 would, of course, be delayed."

Presently Villanova undergraduates play a significant role in the theatre department as at least two of Vasey's productions per year are geared to undergraduates. There is also extensive undergraduate involvement in Vasey's musical productions.

"A number of undergraduates are getting significant experience and credits in theatre but simply lack a transcript certifying a major," said Christy.

Christy also noted the feasibility of instituting a major as present staff and facilities would be utilized. There is no question of additional major expenses.

"We have a fully equipped theatre and a qualified staff which would serve as a tremendous benefit for undergraduates," relayed Christy.

Cooperation with Rosemont College will be key to the major. If approved, Villanova would work along with Rosemont theatre director, Dr. John Kuhn in developing a program involving the exchange of facilities and courses much the same way Villanova and Rosemont conduct their cooperative Fine Arts major.

Beside exploiting existing courses offered in classics, theatre, and english, there will be three new upper division courses offered. A course in stage and lighting design will be taught by Leslie Muchmore, assitant professor of theatre, a playwrighting course will be taught by Dr. Kuhn at Rosemont, and a senior seminar course will be offered.

The nature of the theatre major would be small and restricted to ten or so students compared to one hundred and fifty at Temple University. Villanova's theatre department has an advantage in being small, stated Christy, it is more personal."

Christy noted that many of his former students teaching at area high schools have expressed interest in sending their students to Villanova but as a result of no major offered are forced to recommend Temple or Yale.

"Practical majors like those of theatre and communications will be a particular advantage to Villanova's liberal arts curriculum," declared Christy.

Police Brutality Debated

By BILL DOLE

Dr. Ethel Allen, former Philadelphia councilperson and present Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania visited Villanova on Monday, April 23 to discuss the recent Civil Rights Commission investigation of police brutality in Philadelphia.

Dr. Allen, a doctor of osteopathy, has taught at Harvard and Yale universities and presently teaches a course on Urban Politics and Neighborhoods at area Temple University.

In 1971 Allen was elected to City Council (Philadelphia) retaining that position until appointed by former President Richard Nixon to the National Commission to Review Policy Formation on Gambling. Dr. Allen also served as a member of the commission on the International Women's Year under the Ford administration.

The Carter administration also employed her on a national commission on neighborhoods.

Commenting on the topic, "Resolved: This house believes the Civil Rights Commission's investigation on police brutality will diminish the effectiveness of city police departments," Dr. Allen pointed out that no present mechanism exists which can deal with the abuses for which a small minority of police are accountable.

Speaking against the resolution, Dr. Allen demonstrated how the commission has no judicial power serving in fact as simply a fact finding commission. She stated that the commission could only aid police departments by exposing the few bad apples in the police department that give them bad press.

Bill Dole, speaking for the moderates, agreed in part with Dr. Allen but questioned the need for a new bureaucratic machine to do what the present system could do if it were fully implemented.

Jeff Markowitz, speaking for the liberal party, stressed the fact that the commission has no judicial power and as a result can only report the facts of any case before it and nothing else.

Dave Urso, representing the conservative position, reiterated Dr. Allen's views and called for support in defeating the resolution.

Political Union President Bruce Kogh, temporarily relinquishing the chair, questioned the necessity of a new commission.

Citing examples of how police brutality cases are being prosecuted under present political mechanisms, Keogh asked whether another system was necessary.

In the final vote one supported the resolution, one abstained, and sixteen voted against. The resolution was defeated.

Winterhalter Picks New VP

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The first woman Vice-president in the history of the SGA, Vickie Colonna, was appointed by SGA President-elect P.J. Winterhalter. She met student caucus approval last Tuesday night by an eight to one vote.

Colonna sat on both the Senate Rules and Review Committee and the Board of Trustees Academic Affairs Committee this year.

One problem the SGA will try to solve is "communication between students and the Board of Trustees," said Colonna. From her experience with the Board, she said "I found them receptive to students, they made me feel my input was very important."

Another objective is "reorganization of the student assembly," said Colonna. "Apathy is the main problem. We want to get more students involved," she said.

Colonna added the SGA will "watch the CATCH-19 situation closely."

"We'll also wait to see the decision on visitation policy in the fall and then take the necessary action," she said.

Colonna sees her role in the SGA as "being an assistant to P.J. and a liaison between the student senators and P.J."

The junior English major said she is "very confident about the new year. I want to meet as many people as possible and I'm willing to listen to their suggestions."

NATIONAL NEWS

(United Nations Buffer Zone, The Sinai) — The Israeli-Egyptian Peace Treaty was formally ratified yesterday with an exchange of documents at a remote spot in the Sinai Desert. The exchange sets in motion a number of treaty timetables. They include Israeli troop withdrawals from the Sinai, the start of Israeli shipping through the Suez Canal, and negotiations on the Palestinian issue.

(Salisbury) — In Rhodesia's capital city of Salisbury, a black man died today when a bomb went off in a store. The speculation among police officers is that the victim may have just planted the bomb. It detonated as supporters gathered outside the headquarters of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, newly-elected as Rhodesia's first black Prime Minister. Black nationalist guerrillas oppose Muzorewa's election.

(Belfast) — The Irish Republican Army has taken responsibility for two shooting deaths Wednesday. A milkman was killed while making his rounds in County Tyrone. He was a part-time member of the mostly-protestant Ulster Defense Regiment. The other assassination took place in Belfast. Police say the killers played with the victim's children while waiting for him to return home.

(Washington) — The Senate rejected a move to balance the federal budget in 1980, apparently fearing that deep spending cuts would shock the economy into a recession.

By a 67-to-23 vote, the Senate rejected an amendment by Democrat William Proxmire of Wisconsin. His amendment sought to restrict spending to the amount of revenues collected in fiscal 1980, the 12 months beginning October first.

Proxmire said a decision now to balance the budget would have a great psychological effect, sending out what he called "one clear unmistakable signal that this government means business about inflation."

But opponents said that such a spending cut could be irresponsible, coming on the heels of a report that the economy grew during the past quarter at an annual rate of just seven-tenths of one percent.

Financial History

a tuition refund and staff and faculty salary supplement. The recommendation was forwarded to the Board, which "discussed" the idea. No refund was made.

Also at issue has been the proportion of revenue generated by student fees. Tuition, room and board and other student fees account for approximately 92 percent of the proposed $36 million budget for 1979-1980. With relatively little cushion, the brunt of increased costs will come at the expense of higher student fees and lower faculty salaries.

Again, during discussion on the 1977-1978 budget, questions were raised concerning the University's endowment, the portfolio of investments in bonds and preferred and common stock held by the University. At the time, then faculty Senator Dr. James J. Clarke charged that the University was funneling money into the endowment fund through higher tuitions. Father Thomas M. Mahoney, vice president for financial affairs, answered Clarke's remarks by stating that Villanova's endowment was small compared to other schools and that it would last for just three months in the event of a fiscal crisis.

The endowment, whose value varies with fluctuations in the stock and bond markets, is currently estimated in the neighborhood of $8 million.

Questions have been raised concerning the administration's compliance with Senate bylaws in the handling of the 1979-1980 budget. At the December 12, 1977, meeting of the Senate, a motion requiring the distribution of the proposed budget summary to the Senate at least 30 days before consideration received near-unanimous endorsement. Father President John M. Driscoll accepted the motion and pledged an effort to implement the motion for the 1979-1980 budget.

The body did not receive the budget before the 30 day deadline this year.

The Board of Trustees met on April 10, six days after the Senate's rejection, but postponed a vote to approve the proposed budget until a May 12 meeting. The Senate will not meet again after the May 12 Board meeting until the fall of 1979.

Balance

penses, ordinarily received but generally not included in the budget have been included in this year's budget.

Several faculty members and student leaders argue, however, that year-end surpluses have occurred repeatedly in the past at the cost of higher tuition increases and smaller salary increments.

At the Senate budget meeting in March, Dr. Robert Langran voiced this complaint: "I have heard Villanova cry 'wolf' year after year but darn it all, at the end of the year, we come up with a surplus."

Murray acknowledged that there has been "an excess of income over expenses" for the past few years. Calling last year "exceptional," he admitted that "there was sufficient excess to allow offices to purchase some equipment not originally budgeted for." Renovations to a section of St. Mary's for additional office space for the College of Nursing were also funded from the excess.

Murray refused, however, to label the "excess" as a surplus, explaining that the money is used toward needed depreciation expenses, which are not budgeted.

"I can't say that anyone is really satisfied with the budget," Murray summarized at the Senate Budge meeting. "This is the best that the Administration has been able to come up with."

The revised version of the budget is to be presented to the Board of Trustees for their approval at their May meeting.

We have a track team . . .

When Will We Have A Track?

Now that Villanova's track team is certified as the best in the nation, maybe some day the team will run here at Villanova.

Since winning the NCAA Indoor National Championship last month and with the upcoming Penn Relays, talk around campus has been nothing but, "When will Villanova's runners be able to run a victory lap around their own track before a home audience?" Enough talk — we want some action.

According to Dr. Ted Aceto, the University's sports director, a fully equipped indoor track complete with rubber "tartan turf" surface and lighting would cost well over a million dollars. Aceto admits that the University has been "long overdue to enhance track facilities" since the last home meet on the cinder track inside the stadium was in the early 60's.

A new track could turn Villanova track into a money-making venture. Surely the student body as well as local sports fans would gladly support the nation's best runners at a home meet. A competitive track would also allow the University to sponsor an invitational meet, bringing top-name schools and good publicity to the University. The track could be used for intramural competition with access by the entire student body. Local high schools and colleges could lease the track for practices and meets, providing still more revenue.

However, Dr. Aceto "understands the financial obligations of the University" and its tight budget. He suggests that a new track facility could be financed in the next Covenant Campaign. But how soon will that be?

The new Connelly Center and an already overloaded budget force the hopes of a competitive track into the distant future. Will Villanova wait until the calibre of its tracksters deteriorates due to inadequate practice and training facilities before it builds a new track facility for the best track team in the nation?

Wake Up, Sisters

Editor:

I am writing this letter after reading your article on page 3 of your 4/6/79 paper on the pro-life (anti-abortion) seminar held at the University. It amazes me to read the names of speakers and backers of the seminar — Dr. Benedict Paparella, Mr. Edward Knorr, Mr. Dan Regan, Mr. Jack O'Brien, Ed Kosak, Father David Brecht. Wake up ladies, it's the same old oppression — men trying to control our lives again!

Thank you,

Information

To the Editor:

It is a shame that the distribution of student publications can be such a disappointing experience to many. Such was the case this week with the members of two of the University's major organizations and numerous individuals. Both Villanova Baseball and the S.G.A. were omitted from the 1979 edition of the Belle Air. It appears that many other involved groups were not covered sufficiently, while some of the minor organizations, those which do not arouse an abundance of student or community involvement were covered in excess. In addition it seems that the Belle Air did many seniors injustices, by confusing names, majors and the like.

As major means of communication, student publications should express a more representative cross section and sense of objectivity in their content. Several publications, the Villanovan among them, do strive for this objectivity and are successful. Unfortunately, some do not. I can only hope that all student publications place the University first in their minds. They owe it to their reputation and to Villanova.

Respectfully
John McKenna

Students Make Villanova

Dear Editor:

While attending Villanova the past four years, students and faculty have expressed their opinions through letters to the Villanovan. Before my graduation in May, I would like to share a thought with its readers.

It seems that many letters from people were aimed at criticizing or complaining about one thing or another. Students talked about visitation, and how ridiculous the policies are concerning them. This, in turn, led to complaints about the kind of social life that exists here. There has been talk about security and how all they cared about was towing students cars off campus. Students criticized registration, and felt that there has to be a better way, including the present drop/add system. The administration has been blasted for various things, including the rise in tuition that seems to occur every year. And last but not least, there was the constant complaint about the quality (or should I say lack of quality!) of the food that is served in the "pit."

As a student, I personally feel that many of those complaints were more than justified, and that Villanova has plenty of room for improvement. But aside from these things, there was something people failed to see. That although Villanova has its problems, there is one thing that remains a big plus for the school, and that is, the students.

The students surround Villanova with an atmosphere of friendliness and genuine concern. They made the problems like visitation and rising tuition seem insignificant to me. I have met a number of students that have become my friends, and when I think of my college days, those friends and the memories they have supplied me with, will be what I treasure most.

For that I will always be thankful.

Sincerely Yours,
Nick Daddio

Baseball Woes

To the Editor:

Baseball, hotdogs, apple pie and Mom are all considered to be part of what we call the American tradition. But this doesn't seem to be the case at Villanova, at least that is the impression one would get from looking at the 1979 Belle Air Yearbook.

For some unknown reason, the 1978-79 Varsity Baseball team was omitted from the yearbook. What a disgrace! Not only did the yearbook editors do an injustice to the oldest sport at Villanova, but what about the loss of recognition for the players on the team. (Even the Ultimate Frisbee team had a page in the yearbook.)

Baseball is a Division One Varsity sport at Villanova and the way the Athletic Department, Administration and now the yearbook staff treats them you wouldn't know it.

What is the reason? Is it because the baseball team doesn't generate revenue? Is that the reason why the field is never taken care of or at least why it looks like a Little League field? Is that why the team doesn't have an end of the season banquet like the football, basketball, track and swimming teams? Is that why the Varsity senior awards dinner was scheduled the same night the baseball team was away at the Naval Academy? Or is it because the baseball players are lesser athletes?

All these reasons only add up to one conclusion in my book — the administration and athletic administrators don't care, and I really feel sorry for them because they don't know what they are missing.

Did you know that sophomore pitcher Phil Sartori was ranked 7th in pitching in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference and Dave McHugh and Dom Melillo were ranked 5th and 19th respectively in hitting this year? And last year Kevin Cooke led the nation in triples.

The team is having one of its best seasons in seven years beating teams like St. Joe's, Army, Navy, Georgetown and Delaware. What do these players have to do to get the recognition they deserve? Isn't a 11-6 record, seven days of practice and a 30 game schedule in five weeks enough?

It's about time the Athletic Administration and, I mean you Dr. Ted Aceto, stop spending all of your time on the football field and basketball court and start spending time in the baseball stands.

Signed,
Just One Baseball Fan

WHO WANT TO HAVE THEIR OPINIONS HEARD?

Belle Air Oversights

o the Belle Air (heads) Staff:

The 1979 Yearbook (and I use the term osely) is the poorest edition that I have itnessed in four years. Your mistakes are umerous; but, because of the space allotd I will only name a few (and I mean a w).

Let me see . . . Where should I begin? Ah! he beginning!

age

5. Where is the other Assistant Dean of Nursing, Dr. Heller?
7. Could this be the VFL (Villanova for Life) Halloween Party that appears 25 times in the book?
0. What is Phi Gamma Nu? There is no explanation.
08-9. Is this the SGA? Where is Joe Cassidy, Student Body President? Where are our Student Senators?
08-9. Is this the University Senate, the only legislative body on campus? Where is the traditional picture of the chairman? Oh I see . . . This is the VFL again.
?. I can't understand it. Where is the baseball team?
36-7. Why is the 1977-78 track team appearing in the 1979 yearbook (Again I use the term loosely)?
14. I thought Zalpha Hashem was a female. Why is Patrick Hannings picture in place of Zalpha's?
14. This is not the Cynthia Hanson that I know in nursing.
14. The name Maureen P. Hardiman is above Cynthia Hargrove's picture.
14. The name Cynthia R. Hargrove is above Mary Jo Harkins' picture. (214 seems to be your lucky number. You ought to play this number in the Pennsylvania Lottery.)
25. I thought Rosemary Lynch was graduating with a B.S. in Physics and a B.A. in English. (You have Philosophy).
27. Michael Marino is graduating with a Bachelor of Science. A Bachelor of Science in what?
54. The picture representing Allan F. Volmer is not Allan F. Volmer.
58. For your information, Michael Dernoga is not a student at Villanova nor is he graduating.
59. What are the degrees of Charles Johnson, Mark Kilmer, Thomas McConnell and Marilynn McLaurin? You seem to have omitted them (It looks like another lucky number for the lottery).
87. In the Law School Directory the title section T is written with an S.
95. The SGA advertisement has mispelled names. In the corrected form they are David Blechly, Frank Zarrilli, P.J. Winterhalter and Beth Delena.

Lastly, why are some names omitted from the directory in the back of the book (i.e. John McKenna)?

The mistakes mentioned in this letter are only a few. It is unfortunate that I can not mention all of the corrections for the Villanovan does not publish encyclopedia length (A-Z) Letters to the Editor. However, to put aside my frustrations with the negative points about the 1979 Yearbook, I would like to end on a good note (The only good note). The yearbook had a lovely cover.

A Classless Graduation

Dear Editor:

On May 8th of last year Villanova University had a beautiful day planned in their Field House. It was graduation day and I'm sure that the Field House had never looked lovelier with flags and flowers gracing the stage. The key-note speaker, James Mitchner, could have hardly been more renowned and well chosen. The salutatorian addressed the audience with words of rare beauty, letting, especially, the graduates know that college does not make the man or woman but that the heart and mind of a person does. I'm sure that every parent there who had a son or daughter graduating felt "ten feet tall"; their child had made it after four tough years. I'm sure it was almost like having a child born, the pain of child-birth is not even given a thought (the $15,000 or so for college tuition).

Then it happened right in the middle of this very beautiful ceremony. The first emotionally disturbed graduate decided it was time to embarrass everyone there and let fly the first loud cork from a bottle of liquor. This started a chain reaction by the same depressed-area childish mentality. One female removed her beautiful graduation gown to display a dirty pair of blue jeans and a T-shirt down the front of which hung two bottles of liquor held secure by a string about her neck.

About this time I looked back into the faces of the guests. You could almost tell who the parents were; they had a little nervous crimson smile on their faces looking to one side then to the other to see how their guests were taking all of this and then they would look toward the ground; no doubt looking for a hole into which to crawl.

Here I would like to stop and apologize to those in the class who had no part in this "cheap shot."

Why wasn't this letter written last year right after the graduation? It was held up until now so that the present graduating class might have fresh in their minds, the classless class that preceded them.

Sincerely in Christ,
Rev. Charles J. Summers

Looking Back, Some Observations...

Our schools have become vast factories for the manufacture of robots.
Robert Lindner

The college senior came up to the front of the room, wearing her anxiety like a shirt. The woman wasn't surprised to see it. She had been on enough campuses lately to know that anxiety is the class uniform. The students scratch their way to commmencement.

Things do not change; we change.

But this senior had been home for the weekend. Her parents had not understood what she was worried about. You have all these choices, they said, with pale green edges to their voices. You are lucky, they said.

A sadder and a wiser man, he rose the morrow morn.

The senior in anxiety had broken out in hives and she slammed the door between them. Now she stood in front of the woman scratching. You see, she said, if she didn't get into graduate school she didn't know what she would do. It would be, quite simply, The End. She wanted the woman to hand her some kind of prescription, a solution, some calamine lotion of experience.

Just one word, are you listening? Plastics.

Well, the woman had heard so much of this lately. There was the senior who was "desperate" for a job as an accountant and the senior who "had" to go to medical school and the senior whose life depended on getting a job in publishing, or management or government.

What were those four years for, can you tell me Ben?
Ya got me.

The shirts were woven, she was told, out of the threads of the tight professional school market and no-job market. Five years ago, seniors had difficulty deciding just what, if anything, they wanted to do. Now they simply competed for the available slots. They wanted to Get In — as if life were a final club and they had only one chance.

We are the hollow men
We are the stuffed men
Leaning together.

It seemed to the woman that in their effort to be realistic, to be inalterably pragmatic, to be the certified public accountants of studentry, they had become incredibly unrealistic.

The people will come to their own at last — God is not mocked forever.

The students believed, among other things, in one track careers. The senior in front of her had to be accepted for a Ph.D. The Ph.D. ahead of her had to be an assistant professor. The Assistant Professor wanted only to get tenure. Meanwhile, somewhere, another tenured professor had acquired sideburns, a graduate student and a rash that woke him up in the middle of the night wondering what he had missed, and why he now had the 50-year-old itch.

Perfection of means and confusion of goals seem, in my opinion, to characterize our age.

There was a certain bookkeeping attitude among students, and that was understandable. If you paid $20,000 for college, one male student had told her, then surely you should be guaranteed $5,000 more a year than someone who had not gone to college. Relevancy wasn't a matter of social action. It was, he said, what looked good on a resume. Scratch, scratch.

Where apathy is the master, all men are slaves.

The woman knew that colleges were open to that kind of attack. But she hoped that they would not become so practically impractical.

Education is not preparation for life; education is life itself.

The senior was totally confused. She equated the college experience with degrees and credits rather than total life experience, shaped policy by economic thinking, not educational thinking. College should have been the time for the opportunity to grow, to learn, to change, to develop, to associate on an intimate level with fellow students.

Remember the days of the old schoolyard, we used to laugh a lot.

Those four years could have been the greatest years of her life, but they weren't. The senior was totally convinced that her life was a problem to be solved. She believed she absolutely had to solve it by the day after commencement. And, whereever she went, she wore this uncomfortable conviction like a second skin.

Applaud friends, the comedy is over.

Paul F. Viggiano

No Commencement Speaker

Dear Editor:

As graduating seniors, we were upset to learn that the 1979 Commencement ceremony will have no major speakers. Since there will be neither distribution of diplomas nor a roll-call, it is especially painful to see this tradition abandoned. It is also a blemish on Villanova's academic reputation, a blemish which the University can ill afford.

It's a shame that Villanova cannot better mark this momentous event. Parents and friends, many of whom travel long distances at great expense in order to view the culmination of four years' hard work, will be sorely disappointed by the absurd brevity of the ceremony. The seniors have spent four important years here, and have been touched, for good or ill, by their experiences. Yet in typical Villanova fashion, the school disregards the very life-blood of its existence — its students. We sincerely hope that the in-coming freshmen, who have been so rigorously recruited, will be better treated at their graduation.

Sincerely,

Senate Meeting

missed the motion from the Executive Committee that "in all elections for faculty members to Standing Committees of the Senate a plurality of the total votes cast shall be sufficient to win." The major objection was that under this system a faculty member could sit on a committee without a majority vote.

Under New Business, Frank Zarelli made three motions. The motion that the Senate recommend the University's legal counsel petition the appropriate authority for a pedestrian bridge or tunnel across Spring Mill Road between the train station parking lot and St. Mary's Hall was approved.

A motion that the Senate recommend to the Board of Trustees that visitation be continued and that Stanford Hall be used as an experimental coed dorm for one year was tabled.

Zarelli's final motion, that the Senate recommended that "in-house experts," faculty, grad and undergrad students be used for consultation and work required by the University for which the University presently engages outside sourses, was defeated.

Don't leave school without it.

Now that you're going out into the world, you're going to need the American Express® Card. It's indispensable, for vacations or business.

But don't wait, because we've made it easier to get for graduates. All you need is a $10,000 job (or the promise of one). It'll be tougher later, so look for this display in the Student Center and other locations around campus.

Thank You, And Good Luck

To the Villanova Students:

My four years at Villanova are quickly coming to a close. I fear that if I do not utilize my last article in the last Villanovan for the Academic Year 1978-79 that I will miss the opportunity of thanking you all for your continued support in making the SGA work for you.

This year it seemed like we were starting off on the wrong foot. Jack Acardi, who was approved as my first Vice President last May, could not return to Villanova because of personal reasons. A similar incident happened with Jerry Fontanelli, who was also to become a Vice President. And lastly, our outer office was taken away from us to make room for the Villanovans for Life on the second floor of Dougherty. But in the end we managed to survive it all. But to further add to our troubles, in mid year two vacancies were created in the University Senate by the early graduation of John McKenna (A & S Senator), and the resignation of Patricia Wilson (University College Senator). These vacancies were filled respectively by Michael O'Connor, runner-up for A & S Senator and John McKenna, who was then eligible to serve in a University College Senator capacity.

I thank Michael O'Connor for coming in mid year and picking up so well on such short notice.

I would further like to thank my own Student Caucus, especially my Vice-Presidents David Blachly and Tom Platt, for their hard work and dedication. Lastly I would like to thank the entire Villanova student body. It was through your inspiration that we were encouraged to work harder towards the betterment of Villanova University. I thank you.

It is also at this time that I would like to congratulate Student Body President-Elect P.J. Winterhalter and the new Caucus and wish them success in the upcoming year. I hope you, the students, will continue your support of the SGA and help P.J. work for you.

Once again, thank you all for your support, and best of luck in the future.

Respectfully yours,
Joseph T. Cassidy
Student Body President

Publicity Awarded Trophy

A very jubilant Paul Mariani, Publicity Coordinator, accepted the Spring '79 Union Week trophy Saturday afternoon at the Union Picnic, culminating a week of heated competition between Union committees.

The festivities began on Tuesday with Bob Shaeffer and "Simon Sez". Anyone who played along can attest to the fun and silliness brought to the West Lounge by this crazy man. If you ever thought the game of "Simon Sez" was easy, try playing it with Bob Shaeffer! The well-represented University Services Committee swept the first, second, and third places through the talented playing of Sharon Coffin, Joanne Ciaccia and Maryanne Moon. However, in keeping with the nature of Committee competition, second and third place points were given to Visual Arts and Publicity.

Wednesday brought to Villanova the infamous "$1.98 Beauty Show" which had planned to spotlight both males and females. But due to the cowardice of the Union populace, only one girl and five guys entered. By judge's proclamation, the contest became unisex and tallying of points crowned as winners: Mike Healy, Publicity; Joanne Ciaccia, Services; and Mark Sappy, Major Events. In this reviewer's opinion, none deserved the title since the talent acts were so bad; however, the decision of the judges is final.

Thursday's "Hollywood Squares" game ran rather uneventfully despite scintillating celebrities and congenial host, Joe Lallier. Operations, Publicity, and Visual Arts captured the top prizes. Going into the final round, then, Publicity, with 22 points, Services, with 20, and Operations, with 16 had the best chances of winning the coveted trophy.

The teams for "Almost Anything Goes" on a sunny Saturday afternoon slammed into the competition with a vengeance. Most of the contestants, however, forgot about the "Almost" and Anything went; overly intense participants caused the scratching of the first two events. But for the rest of the afternoon, some of the rowdiness wore off and the fun and games continued. By the end of the competitions, a very hot Operations team had captured the "Almost Anything Goes" top prize, beating the combined Major Events/Recreation team and Publicity.

Much to Operation's chagrin, though, the five points for third place put Publicity on top by one point, winning the trophy 27-26. It had been a long, hard week but lots of fun. To Publicity: Congrats; to Operations: there's always next year; and to Services, who put the week together: your time will come. Many thanks to Operations for the picnic and to Charlie Poznek, Beth Lieve, Cheryl Seifert, and Tim Sewning for their contributions in making Union Week, Spring '79 such an adventure.

New Union President: Klehm

by Susanne Lawler

Another chapter of the Villanova Union has come to a close, making way for a new one filled with many fresh and exciting ideas: The end of the school year has brought an important change to the Union — the election of a new President — Henry Klehm.

Henry, a four year member of the Union, began his involvement in his freshman year as a member of the Major Events Committee, and followed this by becoming: chairperson of Major Events and Cat's Eye, co-chairperson of Homecoming and Friday-Nite Live, secretary-treasurer of the Union, and currently . . . Union President.

As the new leader, Henry envisions such measures as 'unusual events', organized tournaments, a BYOB for 21 year olds, and a book exchange, as viable prospects for the '79-'80 school year. According to Henry, the role of the Union within the University is to initiate as much campus programming as possible, and to promote practical leadership experience for its members.

Although Henry feels that the Union accomplished a great deal during the '78-'79 semesters, he believes that as in everything there is always room for improvement. As the President, Henry regards his position as responsible for uniting the entire Union, while providing the necessary direction for the committees in working toward a common goal. That is the goal of extending the spirit of the individual committees to the whole Villanova Union, to give an even greater sense of unity to the 'People Place!'

What Is The RSA?

Since my election as president of the R.S.A., one question which I have had to answer with amazing frequency is "What is the R.S.A.?". At first I thought the people who asked this question were living in a vacuum or perhaps were visitors from Ork. However, when their number grew and grew, I quickly faced the fact that maybe the R.S.A. itself was functioning in a vacuum, outside the realm of its own constituency.

The administration before mine also realized that the structure of the R.S.A. was causing the organization to remain at a good distance from the average resident, which was leaving the group not only in the category of the unknown but that of the inefficient as well. In an effort to solve this problem the Resident Student Association has undergone a restructuring this semester. The major thrust of the R.S.A. has shifted from a centralized intercampus leadership to a greater emphasis on each individual dorm's leadership and programming. I feel that this has been a giant step in the right direction although the development of the new system seems to be progressing at a rather slow rate.

Next year is a pivotal one for the R.S.A. because it'll be a time when either the new system will take off or fall on its face, leaving the R.S.A. in relative obscurity once again. In order for the new structure to work it's going to need student involvement. What we need are people, people willing to get involved with campus life, people with all kinds of ideas and people willing to work to make resident life at Villanova a better and more enjoyable experience.

The goals of our organization, aside from shedding our anonymity, begin with an increase in student participation in the R.S.A. We hope to gain this by listening to the wants and needs of the residents and giving them a voice in our policy making. We would also hope to increase dorm programming (which include such things as pool tournaments, dorm trips, parties, athletic events and anything else that a dorm would want to do). We will also deal with the serious concerns of all residents. Tops on the list are visitation and maintenance/housekeeping as well as any problems pertaining to resident life which should arise next year. Finally, with a little luck and a lot of your support we hope to pull off an R.S.A. week. So, why don't you come join us as we "Do it in the Dorms!"

Don Kraft

Emergency Car Repair

By LEO KOLETAS

One of the most common auto emergencies that can occur is a dead battery. The solution is to jump start the car, but first you must check a few things so you know it is the battery itself.

When you turn the key, does the car grind very slowly, like a record being played at the wrong speed? How about your car lights? Are they very dim; if they are working? If they are not working properly it could be your battery.

First, check the cables running from the battery first to make sure they are tight. If they are not tight, they will not be making good contact with the battery and that may be the solution right there. Make sure that the cables are free of corrosion too. If they are corroded you will not get a good contact either. Take them off the battery and clean them and the posts with a wire brush.

If you have done this and your car still does not start, you can presume that your battery is dead.

Your battery will have two posts — positive (+) and a negative (-). They will be marked with either the plus/minus signs or will have the words printed next to the post on the battery. When you have found this, you are ready to begin.

First, keep the running car running. Make sure the dead battery car is turned off. Then connect the positive from one car to the other. Then connect the negative of one car to a metal surface on the other car to ground it. There may be some sparks, but don't worry. Just make sure the cables are on tight. Now get in the dead car and try to start it as usual. When it starts, unhook the cables making sure the ends don't touch. Keep the car running, and don't shut it off until you get home.

This is basically a simple procedure, but it does have its hazards. As long as you are careful, you should have no problems.

The A.C.S. will hold its last General Meeting of the year Tuesday, May 1. It will be in Bartley 203 at 12:45. We will need help for our coffee and donuts during final week, so come and sign up.

The A.C.S. will be having a T shirt sale in the Campus Information Center in Dougherty Hall, show pride in being a commuter and buy one.

One of the things to be discussed at the General Meeting will be summer meetings to plan the upcoming year. There will be a discussion on a Commuter Workshop for incoming freshman. If you are interested get involved and come to the meeting.

Ultimate Frisbee

By DIANE MISKEL

A new sport has come into its own this year at Villanova, it is called Ultimate Frisbee. Its founders, senior Steve Kloeblen and Sophomore Jim Shuster, started out in the 1977 fall semester with only a handful of people. The club has grown tremendously since then and now boasts of forty members including six women.

Ultimate Frisbee is played utilizing many of the same principles of hockey and soccer. It is played with seven members of each team and a frisbee. The field is shaped like that of football with two 25 yard endzones, each 40 yards in width.

The object of the game is to move the frisbee across the opponent's goal line. This where the dynamics of frisbee-throwing enter into the game. "You're not allowed to run while in possession of the frisbee. The frisbee must be thrown from one player to another in order to move it. The physical exertion is as much as any soccer game," said founder Kloeblen.

There are two forty minute halves in the game and each time the frisbee crosses the opponent's endzone a point is scored. Kloeblen said the average point totals in a match are between 15 and 25.

Ultimate Frisbee is played themselves must call close plays with accuracy and honesty.

This weekend the Villanova Ultimate Frisbee Club will host a Round Robin Tournament for schools statewide, some of which are Bucknell, Lehigh, Swarthmore and Penn State. The games will be played simultaneously on Mendel field and the rugby and soccer fields beginning 10 a.m. on Saturday. The final match-ups will be played on Sunday also at 10 a.m. All are invited to attend.

Thompson Awarded Danforth

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Dr. Joseph E. Thompson, assistant professor of Political Science, has been named recipient of a Danforth Associates Program award designed to encourage effective and humanized teaching and learning in the campus community.

The Danforth's six-year award period extends from June 1, 1979 to May 30, 1985 and supports four areas of teaching improvement, 1) institutional purposes, 2. curriculum changes, 3.) governance configuration, and 4.) interpersonal relationships.

Thompson applied for the Danforth on the encouragement of Political Science Chairperson Dr. Priscilla Hopkirk who later officially nominated him. Required letters of recommendation followed from colleagues both here at Villanova and from Rosemont College, Dr. Hopkirk as department chairperson, a student, and from his wife, Susan. The Danforth Committee feels that a married professional cannot be successful without a good and supportive marriage relationship. The award therefore is granted under the names of both Joseph E. and Susan C. Thompson.

Some of the other interpersonal relationship and humanitarian aspects of his career are reflected through his advisement to many student organizations on campus. such as the International Relations Club, College Republicans, Pi Sigma Alpha, the University College student body, and both the Criminal Justice and Peace and Justice Programs.

"It's a public support that I have been doing a good job," says Thompson, "and this support will help me to continue and improve my teaching and research in a humanitarian fashion."

The Danforth Committee feels that a married professional can't be successful without a supportive marriage

Teaching 10 years at Villanova, Rosemont, Immaculata, and Graterford State Prison, writing four workbooks as aids to course materials, and filming 12-credit hours of dial access lectures serve as examples of Thompson's curriculum changes. He also gave five lectures on "Congress" during Spring Break at the Washington Workshop Foundation, and has taught at the State Department's Foreign Service Institute on Africa.

Gallery Of Fine Artists

By CAROL GOLDFARB

A picture may be worth a thousand words, but to the Fine Arts Majors, it represents a sampling of their best work while attending Villanova.

The senior arts project is two or more media (e.g. writing and painting or graphics and sculpture). A theme is developed in this media throughout the year and presented to the faculty, who assess the professional intent of the student.

Display began early April with the work of Dan Peck, whose interests lie in sculpture and in drawing which displays anatomy. Having studied extensively in biology, his aim is to become a medical illustrator.

Rachel Phillet prepares her senior Art project.

Rachael Phillet's work is with fantasy along science fiction lines.

As part of her senior project she did a series of sculpture, prints and paintings to illustrate a fantasy nouvelette she wrote.

On display now is the work of Mark Pomante. His art displays the use of color and placement of an object in a still life arrangement. Cleverly, he shows how the change in lighting throughout the day affects the change of color on these objects.

His work is on display at Falvey Memorial Library. The majority of the work of these talented artists is for sale.

WINNER

Congratulations to Carol Goldfarb, Villanovan writer, on winning "A Special Award" of free publication in the semiannual anthology, American Collegiate Poets, Spring 1979, for her poem "DREAMING."

The anthology is a collection of the best comtemporary poetry written by college men and women in America.

"DREAMING"

Wandering through the lonely night
Detached from earthly beings
Escaping heart felt fantasies
Drowning in the pain

Rebirth or death they're both the same
A cycle never ending
The Karmic debts I've yet to pay
My soul beckoning for its freedom.

Attention: Unemployed Seniors

Many of the two million students who will graduate from the nation's colleges and universities this year have already begun to search for jobs. Some will wait too long to start the process and some will have their career paths slowed by inadequate preparation for their entry into the job market according to the authors of a new book on the subject.

Two employment professionals, John D. Erdlen and Donald H. Sweet, have pooled their experience to prepare a factual guide to job hunting. Their new handbook, Job Hunting for the College Graduate (D.C. Heath) was published this month.

The book presents a master plan for obtaining the right job: presenting oneself effectively on paper, obtaining interviews, optimizing interviews, evaluating job offers, and settling in on the new job. The book concludes with the answers to a list of job-hunting questions frequently asked by college students.

Some students will benefit from the convenience of on-campus interviews by recruiters from major companies. But the odds for success are long. Citing average exerpience, the authors observe that in order to hire 100 new graduates, a typical employer must conduct 3,300 campus interviews followed by 500 job site interviews. To improve the probability of success and to increase the number of options, the authors urge job prospecting through a number of additional channels.

Sample letters and resumes are presented along with practical advice for each step along the way.

Among their tips for the interview, the authors urge the interviewee to remember four key points: 1.) Ask well-prepared specific questions that call for more than a yes or no answer. Instead of asking, "Do you promote from within?" say, "I assume you promote from within; what is the normal selection procedure?" 2.) Use time to your best advantage and keep the discussion job-related. 3.) Be honest. Never try to answer questions when you don't really know the answers. A simple, "I don't know" is perfectly acceptable. 4.) Conclude the interview to your best advantage. Don't hesitate, when the time is right, to indicate that you have no more questions.

Erdlen and Sweet offer 20 questions that an interviewer can be expected to ask and suggest ten questions that candidate ought to be prepared to ask. Also included are 15 mistakes that trap many job seekers. Among these are specifying narrow geographic restrictions, talking too much — or too little (on average, the candidate should do about 75 percent of the talking), placing too much emphasis on starting salary or benefits, failing to ask pertinent questions about the company, and displaying no sense of humor.

While many assume that the dollars offered to a successful candidate are arrived at capriciously, the authors present examples of typical salary calculations. Using as a starting point an average figure for all graduates with a degree in a particular field, the employer adds a factor for above average grades and a recognition of the quality of the education offered by the particular school, a factor for military service or related business experience during summers or cooperative education programs, and an adder for advanced degrees or other honors.

John D. Erdlen is executive secretary of the Employment Management Association and is president of Management Dimensions, Inc. of Waltham, Mass., a management consulting firm. He is a graduate of Villanova University.

Donald H. Sweet is director of employment for Celanese Corporation. He has served two terms as president of the Employment Management Association. He is a graduate of Gettysburg College.

Both authors have extensive personnel experience with Raytheon Company and with RCA. Mr. Sweet also served with Arthur D. Little, Inc.

Job Hunting for the College Graduate (210 pages) is offered in paperback at $5.95 in college bookstores or directly from the publisher, D.C. Heath & Company, College Division, 125 Spring Street, Lexington, Mass. 02173.

were any doubts, they were wiped out. There could be no question about it. The Patti Smith Group had embraced the spirit, the essence of rock and roll with incredible integrity and commendable flexibility.

Other concert highlights included "Kimberley" and "Free," both from her premiere album, Horses, "Pumping (My Heart)" from the second, Radio Ethiopia, and a moving interpretation of a song co-written by pal Bruce Springsteen, "Because the Night," from Easter, which in itself, made this concert unforgettable.

The Patti Smith Group returned for only one encore, and said goodbye to spellbound audience after a riveting rendition of 'My Generation."

This was what is called a "closed" concert, which means no pre-concert publicity. So if you missed this one, Patti Smith will be appearing at the Tower Theatre in Upper Darby on Sunday, May 13, 1979 — Mother's Day.

China Syndrome

she settles for less because she wants to make it big. So, she cooperates — by smiling coyly, crinkling her nose and always looking pretty.

One day, while filming a tour through the Ventana nuclear power plant — designed to be an educational story — she stumbles across a big story. Something catastrophic is happening, although she's not really sure what it's all about. The engineers, particularly one named Jack Godell (Lemmon) are in a frenzy. This "accident," meanwhile, is being photographed by her cameraman (Michael Douglas).

The footage runs out to be hot stuff, (no pun intended) revealing that the plant is faulty and should be closed down. There is also the possibility of a "meltdown" of the nuclear fuel itself, an incident that has never happened in the history of U.S. commercial nuclear power. In such a meltdown, the molten, radioactive fuel would burn completely through the reactor floor and, at least theoretically, right through the earth to China — hence, "The China Syndrome."

Jack Lemmon turns in an emotionally draining performance as a dedicated professional who cannot settle for the cheap or leave this problem unsolved, but who's also bound by duty. He is the hero. Douglas, in his first role to date, complements Fonda and Lemmon as the independent, freelance cameraman who doesn't have to worry about job security and, thereby, gets the ball rolling.

Director James Bridges ("The Paper Chase") neatly creates a feeling of paranoia by clinging to tightly technical jargon. We are never sure what the problem is, but we know it affects us — and that makes it all the more unnerving.

Scapino!

facilities are severely limited, the imaginations of its actors, stage crews and directors serve to make it one of the few if not the sole bright spot on the Villanova campus. To be sure it would be nice to see a new theatre in that concrete and steel monstrosity currently rising out of the ground between the Mall and Sullivan. But even if those in the appropriate positions of authority at this university prove once again their consistent talent for shortsightedness, both in the fiscal and cultural sense, Vasey Theatre will still be there. Either way let's take advantage of it while it's here.

Vasey concludes with Scapino!

Susan Trimble as Giacinta and David Warner as Scapino.

By MAURICE KELLY

The Graduate Theatre Dept. of Villanova University is now presenting its final show of the spring season, Scapino!, directed by Terri Firiano. The show opened on April 18 and is due to close on the 28th of this month. (By the time this article reaches print, the reader will only have just two more chances to see it).

Based on an adaption of the classic Moliere farce, The Machinations of Scapin, Scapino! involves the adventures of the sly servant (Scapino) who manages to outwit the heads of two different households in order that their respective sons would be free to marry their true loves. The plot line itself can be rather inconsistent at times, though, so Scapino's motives are not really all that clearly defined.

David Warner, who has previously graced the stage of Vasey Theatre as Algernon Moncrieff in The Importance of Being Earnest, is cast in the title role. As Scapino, Warner alternates well between forging a pseudo-nobility persona in the eyes of his masters to a streetwise go-getter when among his cronies he is energetic at all times and his enthusiasm seems to be contagious to the rest of the cast.

Frank Sixt, with his hilarious rubber face expressions and his Chico Marx accents and mannerisms is perfect as Sylvestro, Scapino's side kick. He also lends himself to slapstick situations very well along with Tom Watson as the derelict Carlo. Both actors manage to even steal the show at times with their background antics.

By far the best performance of the show comes in the form of Jeffrey Musmanno as Gironte. This man is worth the price of admission alone. He manages to play the part of an Italian patriarch to the hilt while avoiding cliche pitfalls. His makeup was also a major factor in enhancing the character at hand.

And then there was Tony Belcastro in the part of Argante. Not nearly as decrepit as Mr. Musmanno. He was rather voliferous in his delivery which more than adequately drew the attention of the audience to himself. As for his physical stage presence, well that speaks for itself.

Kudos should also be bestowed upon Tom Park and Mark Nolan (Ottavio and Leandro respectively) and also to Susan Trimble and Janus Stefanowick, all four representing the romantic interest in the play. There are also other cast members in the form of waitresses, nurses, and musicians too numerous to mention individually but who contribute towards a well rounded show.

In conclusion, Vasey Theatre itself is good theatre. While its

Judy Graces Fieldhouse

By JOSEPH DEWEY
and
STEPHEN M. CASTELLANO

For every Arthur Fiedler striding to the podium in his eighties, rock music seems damned to superstars who fade in their thirties, adapting, losing touch with whatever elemental quality first gave them greatness. It was refreshing, even exciting, to witness a grande dame of rock music, Judy Collins, still triumphant and radiant after all these years.

In a much publicized 40th birthday national tour, Judy Collins visited the Fieldhouse, energetic, refusing to rely on her repertoire of established standards from her meteoric rise in the folk music sweep of the mid-Sixties. She avoided doing "Both Sides Now" much to the dismay of parts of the capacity crowd which called for it during multiple encores. Though she does highlight a few of the early songs, her tour concentrates on music from her new album, Hard Times For Lovers.

What quality distinguishes her still sets her apart. That voice. Though muffled in mountains of amplifiers her show did not need, it still rang out, liquid and cozy as warm wine during evocative nostalgic songs of love lost; jagged as tacks during her social message songs. Each song a showpiece, exhibiting something of the essential timber of her silvery voice. Even songs from her new album, particularly "Desperado," an Eagles classic, I thought put to rest by Linda Ronstadt, received the warmth of feeling of her standards like "My Father" and "Secret Gardens."

More than her voice, untainted by the years, is simply the way she carries herself on stage. Cool. Statuesque. The sense of distance with her audience. She does not carry on between songs, she is a professional, keen to the job of putting life into each song, even surviving the momentary shock of a troupe of clowns sent on stage, appropriately after "Send In The Clowns." It was hard to remember she was 40. The chiseled face, the rivetting eyes, the falls of shining hair.

It is difficult to review Judy Collins. To list the songs she sang, the stylish gestures she made during her poignant songs of remembrance, the cool intensity devoted to each song, the deep bow following particularly intense songs, or the smile, radiant and electric would not convey the feeling you get sitting there and soaking it all in. Whatever occasional blurs came from the sound system, whenever the lighting crew missed a bit, whatever, she maintained, her stage presence picking up whatever slack developed.

Judy Collins is a superstar who has not lost touch with her greatness. Through the years the voice and her glowing sensuality on stage have only improved, acknowledging what most of us have known all along, that Judy Collins isn't a part of the Sixties that ended with the Sixties.

★ The Patti Smith Group Returns ★
Why? Because the Night!

Patti Smith at Irvine Auditorium.

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

It was unusually windy that Friday night. The area around 34th and Walnut Sts. was alive with the sounds of a big city about to take on any attractive proposition as it made preparations for the coming weekend. On Friday, April 6, 1979, a select group of people would gather into the worn, awesome splashboards of the University of Pennsylvania's Irvine Auditorium to hear sounds that will reverberate from those walls for many years to come. Yes, this was the night that a charisma-in-her-unpublicized-appearance at Penn, anyone witnessing her act for the first time would hardly come to the conclusion that she was a "punk." Instead, the native South Jersey performer donned a much more subdued presence. All of the guts and polish were very much a part of the show, but Patti Smith was not vulgar or harsh. Charming and captivating a very devoted audience, Miss Smith was the antithesis of all past unadmirable conceptions. From the start of her two and a half hour performance, Patti established a friendly and warm rapport with the not-quite-sold-out crowd.

Patti played the hits, along with a heavy concentration on her soon-to-be released fourth album, Wave, produced by Todd Runddgren. Of course, there were surprises. At one point in the show, Patti stepped off the stage and gracefully made her way around the auditorium with an unquestioned air of victory. Later, without any introduction, the band took the audience back to the hectic 60's with a hit song from that era, "Be My Baby." On another nostalgia trip, it was back even further, to the Golden Days of Rock and Roll- naturally, the 50's. Patti Smith handed the stage over to lead guitarist and right-hand man Lenny Kaye, and for a few minutes Lenny Kaye was Buddy Holly, as he belted out the classic tune, "All of My Love, All of My Kisses." By this time, if there

Ridiculous?

China Syndrome: Will Scare the Hell Out of You

By PAUL VIGGIANO

The film jilted The China Syndrome has no scientific credibility and is in fact ridiculous.

Southern California Edison, before the film was released

Enough already with nuclear plants. After one movie and Three Mile Island, we have all become nuclear physicists. No this isn't another one of those stories commenting on the "uncanny" similarities between TMI and the film, "The China Syndrome." Just keep in mind the following question. How many times have you seen life imitate art?

The film itself is a rare, topical thriller that mixes entertainment with a message, thereby working on a dual level. While it comments harshly on the codes, morality and ethics of our society and on the commitment and courage of a precious few, it does so with an emotional pitch, lively good humor and fine performances.

At first, it looks like a slick, engaging melodrama but then it catapults us into a pounding suspense drama inspired by our machine age paranoia.

The movie is about power — literal and symbolic power, both equally paralyzing and dangerous, and both out of our control. That is the scary part. The film is a savage indictment against those who control, suppress and manipulate our world and our lives. And for what? The green stuff, of course. (That's money for those who have never seen a Rustler's commercial.) It's the root of all rationalization. Destruction, chaos, even death are easy to live with when large figures are involved.

You are going to be hearing and reading a lot about this powerful film, and much of what you hear will be equally powerful and vital, possibly conflicting and most certainly distressing. It brings Orwell's novel ever so close to reality.

We are presented with an electronic personality (Jane Fonda), the electrician who records her (Michael Douglas), and the engineer who supplies the electricity (Jack Lemmon) — all prisoners of technology, who are brought together by an unexpected catastrophe and learn the truth about "power."

They are all controlled by power — the kind that makes it possible for us to watch TV and use our hair dryers at the same time, as well as the kind that controls our income and security. Big-buck consciousness on the part of those in control and the compromises that the working person has to make for career reasons create a climate for power.

Kimberly Wells (Fonda) is one of those perky, shrill TV reporters hired because of her looks and personality, to do "soft" news spots for one of those "happy news" shows that features animal, fish and human interest stories that make up a disproportionate amount of time on local television stations. She can do better, but Elvis performed April 7-8.

His Aim Is True

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Elvis Costello and the Attractions, bombarded the Tower Theatre with . . . New Wave (I refuse to call it Punk) music on Saturday, April 7.

First, I was prepared to write a good review for the Rubinoos, who opened the show. They delivered a lively and highly polished performance, beginning acapella, then sliding in the bass, two guitars, and drumset . . . the same makeup as the Beatles. In fact, the highlight of the show was their rendition of "Please, Please Me."

Lead singer John Rubin peppered the act with Ramones quips, to distinguished his group from the primary and primal punks. I was impressed by the band's fast-paced and rocking show. Imagine my surprise, then, when I later read that the Rubinoos were formerly none other than — the Archies! (yes, sugar, sugar, honey, honey, bang shang a lang) Well, they thankfully did not perform any of those old chestnuts, and I assume that tagged to Elvis' bill, they hope to leave behind their old, top-40, and foolish ways and join the rank and file of progressive rock.

And speaking of Armed Forces, Elvis Costello trooped onstage in a white baggy suit to capture the audience for an hour and a half.

The Attractions back him up well, but the show is all Elvis. He sings all vocals, his guitar slices the rock and roll (Buddy Holly style rock and roll), for almost the entire show he kept his center stage ground. Then the stage blackened and an eery green light seeped into the audience as Costello performed "Lipstick Vogue." On the last writhing note, a drum-beat cut through and the stage lighted again, signaling one of Costello's best tunes, "Watching the Detectives." For this song, Elvis grabbed the mike and paced the stage, pleading with the audience until they followed him, followed him as he fell to his knees, ("It nearly took a miracle to get you to stay") followed him as his head hit the floor ("It only took my little finger to blow you away").

Not at all distant from his audience, Elvis made a few Harrisburg jokes: "This is to all of you in Pennsylvania, I hope you live very long," he introduced "Accidents will Happen." And though notorious for short shows without encores, Costello came back again and again. The first encore, the classic parody "Radio, Radio," ("I want to bite the hand that feeds me"), delighted the audience with the exception maybe of WMMR's host Mark Goodman. The second encore, "Pump it Up" is so full of the tough spirit of old Rock and Roll, that I refuse to even call it New Wave.

Close Main Point ?

By TRISH NABER

Shortly after a fifteenth anniversary celebration the Main Point is threatened with having to close its doors due to that age old problem, no money.

The Main Point located at 874 Lancaster Ave. in Bryn Mawr, is one of the last of its kind, a non-alcohol coffee house where people can relax and listen to a variety of talent, a place where musicians can start on their way to those big record companies in the sky, and most importantly, a good environment enabling inter-personal communication.

Financial trouble is by no means new to the Main Point. It has pulled itself through many problems and changes in past years. In 1976 the club was $40,000 in debt when many friends came to the rescue. Some of these heros included; Gene Shay, radio personality, Tom Rush, Joni Mitchell, Star Spangled Washboard Band, David Sancious, Tom Waits, Melanie, Ellen McIlwain, Doc Watson, David Bromberg and Jackson Browne. These generous people offered their time and some of their money to help the Main Point back on its feet.

The Main Point presently needs thousands of dollars just to pay critical bills. The club is also in dire need of a new sound system, new tables and chairs, soundproofing and major overall improvements.

The Main Point is caught in a whirlpool. To survive it must expand; to expand means money, and if there is no money, there is no growth. A few months ago Mary Lee Ryan, fund raiser for the club was let go because they couldn't afford to pay her. Good management at the Main Point has been lacking; that's obvious, but once again the best people get paid the most money and that's something the Main Point doesn't have.

The club does have some good things going for it. One major benefit is a completely dedicated staff. Many unpaid hours have been put into the Main Point. Jeannette Campbell owner-president, the only remaining founder of the club has the right attitude, "When you're down at the bottom, something always seems to come along and enables you to go on." Joan Lloyd, booking director, has put much time and effort into the club and might be heard saying something like, "What do you mean Gregg Allman is still in Atlanta?'%*" Many other staff members deserve recognition for their loyalty to the club. The staff has a certain love for the Main Point and concern to see it survive.

Many years, bills, people and performances ago four couples shared a certain love for folk music and decided to create a non-alcohol club that would provide a good communicative atmosphere. The Main Point was born and took off to a slow start. On the night it opened the Philadelphia area was in the midst of a blizzard. Many problems followed. The club realized that it would have to offer more money to book bigger acts. Buffy St. Marie started things off and the club did well for the next five years. Then came "psychedelic rock" and much of the Main Point's patrons went into the city to larger concert halls. The club realized it had to bring in rock music to stay alive, which brought some people back. But as the bands got larger there were more musicians to pay, prices went up and the club couldn't pay the money. Just in time the arts supply store next door became available and the club could expand. Along came

Softball Team Third In Tourney

By ANN WOLFORD

The Villanova softball team has lifted its record to 6-4, winning six of their last seven games and the last five in a row. The main reason for this turnaround has been good pitching.

Last weekend the Wildkittens participated in the University of Pennsylvania softball tournament. It was the first tournament ever for the team and they captured third place with a 3-1 record.

The Kittens opened the tournament against Eastern with an exciting ballgame. Sandy Arena, P.J. Beatty and Nancy Lamb all had hits for Villanova but could not score. Eastern managed only two hits from Villanova pitching but in the fourth inning they pushed across four unearned runs and were able to win 4-0.

In the next game Villanova faced Textile. The Kittens jumped to an early lead and held it throughout the game with several hitting rallies. The Wildkittens quickly tallied thirteen runs to only three for Textile and the game was ended with Villanova leading by ten and according to tournament rules the game was over.

In the first game of a doubleheader, Villanova went up against Widener. The Kittens again pulled out to an early lead as they scored three in the first on hits by Nowlan, Kolb and Arena. Nova picked up a run in the second as McEvoy tripled and scored, then scored again in the fourth. Four more runs were scored in the fifth as Beatty, Wieczorek, and Karen Clabbers had hits. Widener scored an unearned run in the sixth and Villanova won 9-1.

In a rematch of the opening tournament game, the Kittens faced Eastern in the game which decided third place. Villanova avenged the first loss and played a great defensive game, shutting out Eastern. Nova scored all the runs they needed in the first inning on errors and Wieczorek's second home run. The game ended with the same 4-0 score, only this time with Villanova on top and taking third place in the tournament.

Coach Debbie McKee congratulated the fine pitching staff composed of Eileen McEvoy and Diane Messina, who allowed only one earned run in the four games. McEvoy started each game, but was relieved by Messina halfway through the game. They each struck out nine opponents. McEvoy picked up all the decisions.

Jody Greenfield (No. 10) of Phila. Textile beats the throw into second as PJ Beatty makes a late tag. Villanova won Monday's game 14-1.

In league games, the Kittens again beat Widener, this time with a score of 16-6. Messina again relieved McEvoy and was credited with the win. Villanova also defeated Penn State (Ogontz), 26-11. Messina pitched the whole game, striking out five. The offense was again led by Arena, tallying five runs, Nowlan scoring four and Beatty driving in six. Messina helped her own cause with three hits and three RBI's.

Textile was once again defeated by the Kittens by a thirteen point margin. Everyone on the team contributed and eleven people scored runs. The hitting game was led with a triple by Wieczorek, a home run by Susie Stroud and two hits by Nerger. Messina was credited with the win after allowing only one unearned run and receiving relief help from McEvoy.

Rugby Team Finishes 17-5

By ANGELO CHARLES BODKIN

After a two week lay-off, the ruggers came back to destroy St. Joe's and overtake a tough Delaware team. Villanova totally dominated the St. Joe's game, beating them 32-0, last Wednesday afternoon. Everybody played well, plus the wing had an outstanding game. The first half was a long battle until Mark "Dreamgirl" Redmond scored the first try. It was a matter of minutes before the struggling St. Joe's squad witnessed a speedy Danny "Swine" Ward gallop twenty yards for the second score. The ruggers, inspired by Swine's run, went on to demoralize St. Joe's in the second half as Tom "Redbeard" Rosato (really only a mustache), Timmy "I want to be Captain" McCarthy, Paul the super freshman and Jim "Phillies Fan" Murray each scored a try. The "B" team didn't fare as well in their endeavor, losing a tough one on a questionable call late in the game.

On Saturday the hungover Rugby Club took on a very fat and vicious Delaware squad. The "A" game became the scene of intense violence and pure excitement. Several courageous ruggers became the victims of Delaware's awesome scrummers. Jim "Tooth" Levine was knocked out of the game early but the nurse at the hospital made him happy. Terry "Blue" Dansdill was hurt but as a true (or stupid) rugger, refused to leave the field. Redbeard also had to leave the game with an injury.

Although the ruggers were being terribly battered, they managed to win on quickness and conditioning. Brian "Givenchy" Heir did a superb job at hooker (Gio would have been proud). The scrum made up for their smaller size by out maneuvering the

Tracksters Ready For Penn Relays

By NATE COOPER

The school year is drawing to an end, but the college track and field season is only coming into full swing as it will reach a mid-season climax this Saturday with the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival at Franklin Field in Philadelphia.

Villanova went to Rutgers to tune up for the Penn Relays last week and although the meet there was considered nothing more than a workout for most of the Wildcats, the team had some exciting performances en route to setting six meet records on the new 400 meter rubaturf track.

Junior Don Paige began the Villanova assault on the stadium's records Friday afternoon with a 1:47.8 clocking in the 800 meter run. He finished a full second ahead of Georgetown's Aubrey McKithen in qualifying for the national championships. Then South African Sydney Maree broke the tape at 13:34.5 in the 5000 meter run, setting another meet record. Kenyan Amos Korir's 13:57.7 effort for third and Canadian Dean Child's fifth place finish in 14:01 also meet national qualifying standards.

In other distance races, Freshman Canadian Kevin Dillon took second with a time of 3:47.2 in the 1500 meter run while Americans Chris Shafer and John Burns ran 3:49.9 and 3:50.1, respectively. The trio all meet the conference qualifying standards. Freshmen Canadian Rob Earl surpassed the conference qualifying mark in the 10,000 meter run with a second place effort of 29:52.4 while Junior Paul Denis finished in 31:32.7

In the sprints, Junior Willie Syndor, a refugee from spring football, ran 10.7 in the 100 meter dash. Senior Tim Dale's 21.2 and Junior Keith Brown's 21.3 was enough for second and fourth place in the 200 meter dash. Syndor, along with Juniors Alfred Graves, Derrek Harbour and Anthony Tufariello, all ran under 22 seconds. Freshman Lenny Jordan was timed at 22.4. Dale ran 47.0 and Brown raced a 47.5 one lapper to earn second and third place while Tufariello's 48.4 and Graves' 47.3 did not place. Harbour was timed in 53.4 in his third attempt at the 400 meter hurdles.

On Saturday afternoon, Villanova's relay teams went to work and four more records fell. Dillon's 4:08.3, Child's 4:13.7, Childs's 4:13.6, and Maree's anchor in 4:07.9 combined for a 16:43.5 time in the 6400 meter relay. They finished ahead of Fairleigh-Dickinson and a horde of protesting students that interrupted the meet for almost an hour.

Another record fell in the sprint medley. Syndor led off in 12.8, Harbour followed in 21.3, Dale added a 46.9 one-lapper and Paige anchored in 1:48.6. In the 400 meter relay, Brown, Graves, Syndor and Dale survived some shakey baton passes and raced to another record with a 41 second effort. The 800 meter relay team could not survive the bad exchanges and finished second in 1:25.5.

The distance medley team finished third in 9:47 and a bad exchange during the 3200 meter relay cost Villanova another victory before the 1600 meter relay concluded the meet in record time. Their 3:09.8 clocking came from Brown's 47.4 lead-off leg, Paige following with 47.5, Harbour adding a 47.6 and Dale anchoring in 47.4.

In the field events, Joe Mitrovich threw the javelin 223' 5" to finish second and Nate Cooper placed third in the triple jump with a 49' effort.

Coach Jumbo Elliott has not revealed how he plans to utilize his runners on the six relay teams that he has entered in the Penn Relays. Dale, Brown, Harbour, Graves, Tufariello, Paige, Maree, Korir, Burns and Childs may be seen in as many as three events depend on the caliber of the competition, which is expected to be as tough as ever. Conference rival Maryland, Tennessee, Auburn, Alabama and Arizona State will all be competing. Freshmen John Hunter, Mike England and Kevin Dillon should help give Elliott more flexibility. In the field events Nate Cooper is expected to compete in the triple jump, Mike Morris in the pole vault, Bob Vizzaro in the javelin throw and Joe Mitrovich in the javelin and discus toss. Willie Sydnor will also run in the college 100 meter dash.

Stampede Downs SPOA In Hoop Finals

By JERRY VENTRESCA

In the Intramural League, the semifinals saw SPOA, led by captain John Caughlin and leading scorer Paul Mocicki, defeat the Beasts of Burden by 12 points and Stampede down Express, 66-52. In the championship game, Stampede was led by captain Rick Bodkin, 6'5" Ray Goetz, 6'4" Duke Reyes, Angelo Lobosco, and Bob Wein's 16 points, including 2 foul shots with 8 seconds remaining, to defeat SPOA, 49-48. Jack Butler and George Joseph also contributed greatly in Stampede's climb to the championship. Both Stampede (6:30 St. Mary's league) and SPOA (7:30 Alumni league) finished the 1978-79 season with excellent 11-1 records.

The Resident League Championship was taken by Bob Ryan's E-Men of St. Mary's, 51-39, over Steve Frey's Sullivan 2-West. Game MVP Joe Nadzak pumped in 21 points and Derek Powell added 15 in the stunning win, which capped a remarkable 17-1 season. In the semis, E-Men defeated Delurey, 49-48, and Sullivan 2-West defeated Stanford 3-C. During the season the E-Men scored an average 73 points per game while allowing an average 47. Much credit must also be given to leading scorer John "Zip" Czipo, Steve Lomaka, Jack Daley, Dan Nicholson, and Brian Scott.

In the women's league, 6:00 league winner Double Dribblers, winning by forfeit in the semifinals over the Vipers, still has to face 7:00 winner Pot Luck, which also won by forfeit over the Weighouts, in the final championship game. The Women's softball tournament is scheduled for April 29 with Patty Graff squaring off against the Marauders, Flame facing the Golden Girls, and Foul Play playing the Softballers. Other scheduled events include a two-on-two basketball tournament (1 guy, 1 girl) in Alumni Gym today at 4:00 and a foul shooting contest tomorrow at noon also in Alumni. Prizes will be given away in each tournament so apply now in the intramural office in Alumni.

Over 40 runners competed April 1 in the Ambassador/South Natural Light Run. Mark Worthington won the five mile race and O'Dwyer Hall took team honors.

Sports Memories

By PATRICK FLYNN

There are a lot of different reasons why sports are so popular in the United States today. Sociologists tell us it's our way of occupying ourselves during our copious American free time (of which I have none — next reason, please). Psychiatrists tell us it's our way of releasing our anxieties (but nothing makes me more anxious than a good pennant race — wrong again, experts.) I'd like to offer my own conclusion — memories.

It all started last September. A touchdown orgy ended in a Villanova victory over Bowling Green in football. I don't remember the score, and to tell you the truth, I don't care. Numbers can't convey the feeling of that first victory, capping off that crazy up-and-down week called Orientation. What I remember is an offense that couldn't be stopped.

I remember the glory that accompanied Chuck Bushbeck's last-ditch field goal slithering between the uprights for the winning margin over Richmond.

I can still see Dana Shelton on Parents' Weekend racing untouched through the Boston College secondary for six points and at the same time racking up dollars for WKVU's Muscular Dystrophy Marathon. And how many times did we see Vince Thompson, hampered by injuries and defenses that ganged up against him, pounding away at solid walls of defenders and squirming for three more yards and another first down.

Roundball season opened with a bang. The goosebumps hadn't even disappeared from my first glimpse of Rory Sparrow leading the 'Cats onto the court to the tune of 'V for Villanova'' by the time Coach Massimino's crew had already buried Merrimack.

There were disappointments. Games against Temple, St. John's and on regional television against Notre Dame, immediately come to mind as testimony to the Wildcats' bad luck at the Palestra. But I prefer to remember the Field House An ice storm couldn't even cool off one of the year's barnburners, as Villanova staged a thrilling win over George Washington. And last but not least, who can ever forget Pittsburgh's visit to Villanova. Fresh off of an upset victory at Duke, it was curtains for the Panthers on the Main Line.

Finally, there's one set of memories that was provided on a personal level by somebody else who has made a great contribution to Villanova sports. Those of us who are so familiar with Phil Skender, the former Sports Director at WKVU, find ourselves grudgingly accepting the fact of his graduation.

Those are the memories, encompassing the highs and lows of achievement and disappointment as well as the background emotion that surrounds athletics at Villanova. College sports, the experts tell me again, is turning into big business, into machinery. But if you'll accept an amateur opinion, it is not like that at all. It's people. It's emotion. It's memories.

Lacrosse Gals This Improve Year

By MARY GRACE MURRAY

The Villanova women's lacrosse team ended its season last Friday with a much improved 3-3 record. The '79 season was a rebuilding year after an unsuccessful 0-5-1 '78 season.

The girls ended the year with two disappointing losses at home against Drexel, 10-14, and Cedar Crest, 3-4. Earlier in the season they had soundly defeated Gwynedd Mercy, 19-5, and the Academy of the New Church, 15-3. In a much closer game the girls defeated Bryn Mawr, 7-4.

Coach Kathy Miller credited the team's success to past experiences of her players. "It was a total team effort where all starters except the goalie had played previously in high school," commented Miller.

Another important factor which contributed to this year's success was making the schedule more competitive by dropping the bigger schools, according to Miller.

The team played with confidence throughout the season and this shows in the scoring statistics. Last year the girls scored only 10 goals in six games. In the six games this season they increased their output to 46 goals. Barbara Walsh scored 20 of those goals, which is an individual school record.

Defensively they allowed only 42 goals, a decrease of 17 from last year's total of 59.

With their continued experience and new found confidence the women's lacrosse team will look for a winning season next year.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Re: Villanova University's track team.

On the weekend of April 6, we at William and Mary hosted the Colonial Relays track and field meet in Williamsburg, Va., and over 1,800 entrants competed. Villanova's fine squad became the talk of the town, not just because of its accomplishments on the track but also the manner in which the team members conducted themselves off the track during the two day meet. The latter is the reason for my writing.

The university and the city of Philadelphia should be very proud of these outstanding young men who represent them.

We had a sizeable media contingent on hand for the meet, and understandably they all focused on Villanova. Without exception, the response of the press, radio and TV people was praise for each and every member of the Villanova team and staff.

As press steward for the meet, I was constantly hearing the media feedback. The athletes representing Villanova were lauded for being "well spoken," "real gentlemen," and the most frequent comment was, "the Villanova team is pure class."

It carried well beyond the media, though. Fans young and old wanted to get a little closer to Villanova's athletes, and they would make their way (as fans will do) to the area in the stands where the team was gathered.

The sentiments of the spectators echoed the media's response. "Joe Fan" was warmly received by the Villanova squad. Talk about ambassadors! It seems all of the people around here over the weekend have suddenly become Wildcat track fans.

I have been directly involved with college athletics for nearly a decade, and I have rarely witnessed a visiting group leaving such an indelible impression on so many people.

I just wanted to take this time to pay tribute to Coach Elliott and the Villanova track program. Not for their success on the track; everyone knows about those accomplishments. Rather, their person-to-person accomplishments and the dignity with which they represent Villanova University and the City of Brotherly love.

Dear "Jumbo,"

Just a note to acknowledge the fine press coverage you and your team are receiving. (Inquirer April 20, 1979 — New York Times April 23, 1979)

As I mentioned to you on several occasions, it is a tribute that is justly deserved. Your dedication to Villanova and to our fine track stars can never be properly acknowledged.

However, on behalf of all Villanova students, past, present and future, I would like to say once again "thank you" and may God's choicest blessings be always with you and your family.

Please convey my warmest congratulations to each member of our Track Team. Sincerely,

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.

Delaware monsters. Excellent kicking was supplied by Mark "I'm Cute" Civil and Tom Rosato, as the ruggers after a 6-6 first half, went on to beat Delaware 14-6. Mark Redmond had his second try of the week and Sweet Al scored as well. The "B" side again lost to Delaware, as their team was overpowering and well experienced.

As the season comes to a close next week, it's only fitting that the seniors mentioned who contributed to the successful year, besides it's probably the last time they'll get their names printed in a newspaper. Starting with the scrum, those graduating are: Jim "The Accountant" Rathz, Brian "Taxman" Heir (who was complaining all year about not having exposure), Gary Pelkofsky and Joe Wojtkun the dualing Polocks, Gio "Fat Lip" Regina, Fred "Bucket" DePaola, Danny Ward and Brian Schliep. Leaving this year in the wing are: Jim "Keep Your Pants On" Murray, Mike "The Engineer" Lyons, Tom "Bocci Club" Rosato, Mark Redmond, Mike "Broken Nose" Bianco, Maurice "In The Navy" Furlong, and Billy "Animal Doctor" Bathon. The captains this year were Terry Dansdille (for two years) and Mike Abele but now they are both lame ducks.

Hitting and Pitchin[illegible] Diamond Record To [illegible]-7

By JOAN C. BARNISH

The baseball team further improved their season record to 11-7 by beating Army, Navy and Georgetown, on the road, but suffered losses to Fordham and Delaware.

The Wildcats traveled to Army on Tuesday, April 17, where they picked up their ninth win behind the pitching of junior Ed Szymanski (3-1). Villanova took the lead in the 4th inning after Chris Nurse's homerun and never relinquished it making the score 3-4. Third baseman, Kevin Cooke also homered, driving in Tom McHugh in the 5th which proved out to be the winning run.

On Thursday, April 19 the Cats beat Navy 2-1 in an impressive win behind the pitching of Mike Venezia. Venezia only let up four hits and struck out ten Midshipmen. Dom Melillo, started the game off with a single, stole second and moved over to third on an infield out and then scored on an infield error.

The pace continued as Stan Luongo doubled to send home Jim Abromitis from first with the game winning run in the 7th inning.

Improving their record to 11-5, the Cats continued their traveling to Georgetown on April 20, and with a combined shutout by sophomores, Steve Skammer and Phil Sartori, won the game 6-0. It was the first shutout by a Villanova pitching staff since 1975.

On the offensive side, Melillo again led off the game with a double and moved to the third on an infield out and then scored on a double steal with Kevin Cooke going to 2nd. In the 5th inning, Bob Sullivan's single thru the infield drove home Melillo and Nurse and in the 7th Melillo again scored making his total runs scored 21 to pace the team.

On Sunday, the team suffered its ninth loss to Fordham to Jeff Tom Harrison's solo homerun. The team lost the game 9-3, but only after completing a 500-mile road trip.

Tom Hank is one of the baseball tri-captains.

Baseball Captains

By JOAN BARNISH

Tri-Captain TOM HANK has been a Wildcat starter since his freshman year after coming to Villanova from Phillipsburg Catholic, where he earned 10 letters in football, basketball and baseball.

Hank, the infield stabilizer, is a low-keyed, consistent defensive secondbaseman. With quick hands and good reflexes, he knows how to play the hitters. He is fearless as the middle man on the double play, giving no ground to sliding runners.

Offensively, Hank has developed the ability to make good contact at the plate, upping his batting average from .179 freshman year to .283 as a sophomore and .261 last year as a junior. He has good bat control and has only struck out 21 times in 208 official plate appearances.

"I think we have as much talent as we've had in the past three years and the attitude which is so important is very good this year," said Hank.

A powerful right-handed hitter, Tri-Captain Kevin Cooke is looking forward to a very successful season.

"What is really important is that the five guys who came with us freshman year — are all starting this season," said Cooke, the 6'2" 190 pound third baseman. "Everyone's very experienced at all the positions."

Cooke, who has started the past three seasons in a reserve role emerged in 1977 as the clubs leading designated hitter? He led the team in triples (5), base on balls and tied for team leadership in runs scored (19). Mid-way thru last season he moved to third base and only committed four errors in 16 games.

Cooke, thru his recent performance over the week of April 15 thru the 22 won Player of the Week accolades in the E.C.A.C. Southern region. Cooke belted .538 for the four games (7-13) and among those hits was the game winning homerun over Army. He is now batting .327 for the year.

A walk-on his freshman year, Tri-Captain DOM MELILLO says being a part of the baseball team is one of his most rewarding memories of Villanova.

Melillo, the Wildcat's left fielder, has played in every game the past two seasons which included substituting for both the injured shortstop and secondbaseman.

"This year," said Melillo, "We're an easier team to coach and with an assistant coach like Phil Fidalgo, it's easier on Head Coach Shane."

"There is a lot of talent on the team this year, the most I've seen in four years," added Melillo. "We have a person to take over any position if anyone gets hurt and we have good depth."

Netcats Win Four

By TONY PANGONAS

The men's tennis team is putting it all together now. After a slow start the Wildcats have compiled a 8-6 record. The young players have gained the experience to turn the season around. They have put together a four match winning streak.

Since the Easter break, the Wildcats have beaten Big Five rival St. Joseph's 5-4, Rutgers-Camden 7-2, and Cheyney St. 9-0. They also finished tied for second in the Rider Invitational Tournament last weekend.

The Cats are being led by top seeded Tom Fieger, who is 10-3 overall. He has won eight out of his last nine matches. Against St. Joseph's, Fieger not only won his singles match but combined with Bill Sullivan to win the match deciding number one doubles sets.

After Fieger the Wildcats have a lot of depth. Second seeded Pete Desmond, 6-5, third seeded Bill Sullivan, 7-4, fourth seeded John Mulliken, 8-6, and fifth seeded Sean Friel, 9-5, are all having fine winning seasons.

At the Rider Invitational Tournament, Villanova was represented by Fieger at number one singles, Desmond at number two singles and Mulliken and Friel as their doubles team. All three got by the first round. Fieger was the only one to get by the second round and advance to the finals.

The Wildcats finish their schedule this week on the road at C.W. Post tomorrow, at Drexel on Monday

A short course in Bonded Bourbon.

History lesson: in 1897, Congress passed the Bottled-in-Bond Act which established the standards for Old Grand-Dad and other Bonded whiskeys. Old Grand-Dad is still bottled in Bond under U.S. government supervision.

100 is perfect. Bonded Bourbon must be 100 proof. No more. No less.

Final exam. You need only one sip to recognize the clearly superior quality and taste of Old Grand-Dad. Cheers!

Old Grand-Dad Bonded is authentic Kentucky sour-mash Bourbon, made with clear limestone water, the finest grains, and aged in new charred-oak barrels.

Only Bonded whiskeys have a green tax stamp. It's your guarantee that the whiskey is at least four years old. Old Grand-Dad Bonded is always aged longer.

Freshmen Enroll in Record Numbers

[illegible] had some [illegible] pleasant [illegible]

[illegible] 4,000 applications for places in the freshman class. Fuller said. Approximately 2,700 of those applicants submitted residence hall applications.

"Because applications have already been ahead of commitments," Fuller said, "We just don't have the housing facilities here.

"The registrar's office has done a good job in handling class assignments," Fuller said. "There may be some overcrowding (of the number of students in a class). That is inevitable."

Geographically, 43% of the freshmen class comes from Pennsylvania, 20% from New Jersey and 12% from New York. The remainder of the class is composed of students from 22 other states.

Fuller cited the increasing reputation of Villanova as a major factor behind the size of this year's freshman class.

"We should be glad people are choosing Villanova University," Fuller said, "Especially in view of the economy."

The admissions director said that the university has several assets that make it appealing to prospective students. "We're relatively small in comparison to some other universities, and we're a private school.

"We have a lot of children of alumni, who are coming this year," Fuller said. "The people who graduated in the 1960s are at the age now where their children are entering college. In this year's freshman class, 18% of the students had either a parent or sibling that attended Villanova."

Visitation Hours Extended

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

For the first time in Villanova history, dorm visitation will be permitted during the week.

Mondays through Thursdays from 9:00 to 11:00 p.m., visitors of the opposite sex may enter rooms with escorts. Weekend visitation hours in effect last year, Friday and Saturday from noon to 1:00 a.m., and Sunday from noon to 11:00 p.m., will continue this year.

[illegible] have been allowed.

The visitation policy states, "Visitors of the opposite sex are not permitted in the resident halls except in areas officially designated as public lounges. Exceptions are made by special permission obtained by the Vice-President for Student Life."

"Extended hours are a reward of the students [illegible] so far," said Deegan.

Before September 1978, visitation was permitted only on Saturdays of home football games between.

Visitation was introduced in fall 1976 by Deegan, along with a general student developmental program.

This student life package included constitutions and budgets for student activities, student counselling, and leadership training, along with visitation.

The package is due for evaluation by the Board of [illegible]

The decision for extending visitation hours was arrived at "after discussion with the deans of men and women, the RSA, and Father President John Driscoll," said Deegan.

Deegan stressed that visitation is part of the developmental policy of student life. "Students are learn to be self-reliable, self-accountable. Visitation will be supervised by the students themselves," he said.

Dean of Men Allan B. Wechsler said "we're very optimistic about the visitation policy this year. That's one of the reasons we have extended the hours. We're depending on the maturity of the students that live in residence," he said.

Helen Haney, vice-president of the Resident Student Association, said "We had talked about visitation last year, and I was kind of surprised when we got back and found they [illegible] was really good [illegible] and we've been responsible."

Dean of Women Rebecca Drury said that RSA representatives will not have to apply for visitation every month this year, but they will have to make evaluations periodically.

Father President John Driscoll said he would make no comment on the visitation policy until after the matter is brought before the Board of Trustees.

Frosh Enroll in Record Numbers

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Approximately 1,700 freshmen were on hand for the first day of classes yesterday, making the Class of 1983 the largest in Villanova's history, the Rev. Harry H. Erdlen, O.S.A., director of admissions, said.

Last year's freshman class began the academic year with 1,463 students, while 1,628 freshmen enrolled in the university in the fall of 1977.

"We had over 500 more applications than last year," Erdlen said, "and a lot of people opted for off-campus housing this year." He said that "in the neighborhood" of 300 freshmen will be living off-campus, away from their home in housing unaffiliated with Villanova.

The remainder of the class is comprised of some 900 residents and 500 commuters.

"It is hard for us to know exactly how many people will show up," Erdlen said. "We won't know what the numbers are until we see how many are here."

The admissions office received 6,600 applications for spaces in the freshman class, Erdlen said. Approximately 5,300 of those applicants requested residence on campus.

"Resident applications have always been ahead of commuters," Erdlen said. "We just don't have the housing facilities here.

"The registrar's office has done a good job in handling class assignments," Erdlen said. "There may be some overloading (of the number of students in a class). That is inevitable."

Geographically, 43% of the freshman class comes from Pennsylvania, 26% from New Jersey and 15% from New York. The remainder of the class is composed of students from 22 other states.

Erdlen cited the increasing reputation of Villanova as a major factor behind the size of this year's freshman class.

"We should be glad people are choosing Villanova University," Erdlen said. "Especially in view of the economy."

The admissions director said that the university has several assets that make it appealing to prospective students. "We're relatively small in comparison to some other universities, and we're a private school.

"We have a lot of children of alumni, who are coming this year," Erdlen said. "The people who graduated in the 1950s are at the age now where their children are entering college. In this year's freshman class, 18% of the students had either a parent or sibling that attended Villanova."

This is the first issue of the VILLANOVAN, the university's student newspaper, for the 1979-80 academic year. Although the size of this edition is well below our average of 16 pages, the staff has put this paper together in an attempt to reach our readers as soon as possible. In future issues, we will expand our examination of some of the topics covered this week and will investigate other areas of concern and interest to the Villanova community. The VILLANOVAN will be published every Friday morning until midterm examinations. Any campus organization with news or announcements of interest to the community should drop the information off in the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty before 5:00 p.m. on the Tuesday before publication for inclusion in the calendar or information sections. Students interested in joining the paper's staff should leave their name and phone number in the office. A meeting for new staff members will be announced.

Visitation Hours Extended

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

For the first time in Villanova history, dorm visitation will be permitted during the week.

Mondays through Thursdays from 3:00 to 11:00 p.m., visitors of the opposite sex may enter dorms with escorts. Weekend visitation hours in effect last year, Friday and Saturday from noon to 1:00 a.m., and Sunday from noon to 11:00 p.m., will continue this year.

Father John Deegan, vice-president for student life, emphasized that the visitation policy has not changed, only the hours have been extended.

The visitation policy states, "Visitors of the opposite sex are not permitted in the resident halls except in areas officially designated as public lounges. Exceptions are made for special times as announced by the Vice-President for Student Life."

"The extended hours are a logical outgrowth of the visitation program so far," said Deegan.

Before September 1976, visitation was permitted only on Saturdays of home football games between.

Visitation was introduced in fall 1976 by Deegan, along with a general student developmental program.

This student life package included constitutions and budgets for student activities, student counselling, and leadership training, along with visitation.

The package is due for evaluation by the Board of Trustees, "probably in December" said Deegan.

The decision for extending visitation hours was arrived at "after discussions with the deans of men and women, the RSA, and Father President John Driscoll," said Deegan.

Deegan stressed that visitation is part of the developmental policy of student life. "Students can learn to be self-reliable, self-accountable. Visitation will be supervised by the students themselves," he said.

Dean of Men Allan B. Wechsler said "we're very optimistic about the visitation policy this year. That's one of the reasons we have extended the hours. We're depending on the maturity of the students that live in residence," he said.

Helen Haney, vice-president of the Resident Student Association, said "We had talked about visitation last year, and I was kind of surprised when we got back and found they extended the hours. I was really glad that the resident students will be treated as adults and given this responsibility.

Dean of Women Rebecca Drury said that RSA representatives will not have to apply for visitation every month this year, but they will have to make evaluations periodically.

Father President John Driscoll said he would make no comment on the visitation policy until after the matter is brought before the Board of Trustees.

Kelly's Renovated

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Kelly's bar in Bryn Mawr, the traditional Villanova watering hole, has been bought by two former Villanova students.

Ex-Villanova student Jim Kenny, and 1977 graduate Lou Costar, along with realtors Bob and Dave Biggins, now own the building which contains a house, store, and Kelly's bar.

The new owners are now renovating Kelly's, which will be opening "hopefully this week," said Kenny.

"We're re-doing the whole inside," said Kenny. "We've made it a little more efficient. We've added another bar, so people won't be waiting five minutes for a beer. We're not changing it too much, we don't want to make it too nice.

"The price of the beer will be the same, that's about the most important thing," he said.

Kenny, formerly manager of Kelly's, said the decision to buy the bar "was one of those ideas." I was sitting at the end of the bar there, and we decided to go buy a bar. We found out this was for sale, and started negotiating.

Costar said that Kelly's was "the kind of bar we wanted. The clientel are young, and out for a good time. It's a fun place, and we always have a blast when we're here."

Burnell Named To Financial Post

The Reverend George F. Burnell, O.S.A., has been named acting Vice-President for Financial Affairs. Burnell, whose appointment was made effective August 1, replaces the Reverend Thomas Mahoney, O.S.A., who has taken a leave of absence to accept another assignment.

No stranger to Villanova, Burnell served as Director of Admissions from 1969 to 1976, when he was appointed principal at nearby Monsignor Bonner High School in Drexel Hill, Pa.

A native Philadelphian, Burnell received his bachelor's degree from Villanova in 1942, and later his master's degree from Catholic University.

Before coming to Villanova, Burnell spent many years in two Augustinian conducted high schools — Archbishop Carroll in Washington, D.C. (1951-1961), and Austin Preparatory School in Reading, Mass. (1961-1968).

Orientation Revised, Extended

By RON TRIOLO

Over 1,900 freshmen and transfer students, the largest first year class in the history of the university, took part in the four day New Student Orientation Program this week. Organized under the auspices of professional staff member, Stephen J. Steckler, director of orientation. It is also the first time that Orientation has enjoyed University wide organizational status and recognition as a priority program.

"The addition of a professional staff member has only improved the program," Oesterle stated. "He's taught us so much, and given so much responsibility to the students. We've had more input this year than ever before."

Changes initiated this year also include the extension of the training periods of all Orientation Counselors (O.C.'s), the addition of an unprecedented fourth day of the New Student program, and the alteration of the basic roles of the O.C's and the 17 student Steering Committee members (S.C.'s).

The O.C.'s returned to campus on August 26, to begin a full week of leadership training workshops presented by the Steering Committee which had returned the previous week.

"The O.C.'s had much more programming responsibilities this year and their training reflected their expanded roles," stated Steckler.

dents involved in a more personal way, since the O.C. would be responsible for running small group workshops in such areas as special freshmen concerns, reading and study skills, and the Blue Book, which the Steering Committee developed themselves."

The counselors and committee members were joined the Wednesday before Labor Day by 18 Administrative Assistants (A.A.'s). Under the leadership of James Keale, student administrative coordinator, the A.A.'s provided the necessary support behind the scenes to free the S.C.'s and O.C.'s from many administrative chores.

"Jim and Barb did excellent jobs in working with the professional staff, providing input and developing the content of much of the program," said Steckler.

The 1979 Orientation program also marked the first time that Student Chairpeople and S.C.'s received monetary compensation for the time spent over the summer. When asked about the possible ill will that such remuneration might cause since leadership positions in other student organizations merit no such payment, Steckler replied:

"I don't see the issue . . . the money did not detract from the effectiveness of the program.

Asking them to leave summer jobs and give up vacations justified their compensation. Their actual hourly wage is minimal. They worked far beyond the hours expected."

Perhaps the most salient characteristic which differentiates this year's Orientation from those of the past is the size of each orientation group. A typical group this September consisted of approximately 26 new students, up from about 18 last year.

"The size of the groups was accidental," commented Oesterle, "The model was developed and most of our planning done based on a figure of about 1500 students or about 18 per group.

"The sheer size of the Freshman class was our one big problem and getting the groups set. Nobody was sure who was coming and who was going."

Oesterle saw the effect of the inflated group size as minimal. "When we saw the size of the class we increased the number of O.C.'s from 72 to 80. The groups might be a little awkward for a single O.C. to handle, but with the rigorous training and selection process which the counselors had to go through, I'm sure we got the top 80 people, and that they're able to handle the groups. I'm confident that they'll be able to show the same concern and caring for each individual freshman, which is what this is all about."

Soccer Travels To Germany

Coach Howard Graff and his soccer team will have the benefit of four exhibition games when they go into their home opener next Tuesday with West Virginia Wesleyan. The booters played four games during a ten day trip in Germany during August.

The Main Liners beat Division III club Mockeldendorf 4-1 and Goettingen University 3-1 and stalemated against Division II team Vogelbeck and Division IV team Dassel. Villanova's play abroad was highlighted by the performance of last year's leading scorer Dave McHugh and freshman goalie Pete Jirak. McHugh had two goals and two assists while Jirak posted two shutouts.

Graff, in his fifteenth year at the helm for the booters, is looking forward to a winning season with an army of returning veterans, including Steve Frey, John Leitner, Brian Purcell and Don Swete. The team will remain on two-a-day workouts until the home opener Tuesday against West Virginia Wesleyan.

Villanova will also be a member of the newly created Philadelphia Soccer Seven League. Members include all of the Big Five teams with the addition of Textile and Drexel.

Cats To Challenge Terps

Wildcat Opener Hopeful

By BETH WHITE

The Villanova Wildcat football team faces the University of Maryland Terrapins in it's season opener Saturday at Byrd Stadium in College Park, Maryland. Villanova hopes to upset the Terps and avenge it's 13-19 loss two years ago. The Wildcat attack looks strong behind 22 returning lettermen, including 13 of last year's starters, the additional threat of Northwestern transfer Willie Sydnor and a brigade of other receivers and running backs as well.

Several years of good recruiting have not only added depth to the Wildcat bench but also several promising freshman to this year's squad. Frosh Joe Lucas set the football team's bench press record at 430 pounds on his first try and will start in the Maryland game as a defensive end. Rookie Steve Sugden turned down an offer from the University of Notre Dame and is fighting with junior Steve Lomaka for the center slot.

Juniors hold 13 of the 22 starting positions and leading the wishbone offense will be third year quarterback Pat O'Brien. He will be guiding running backs Dana Shelton, Shawn Passman and Mike Gold, also juniors. O'Brien's aerial attack is fortified by Sydnor and Senior tight end Paul Columbia, who was Villanova's leading receiver last season with 15 catches.

The defensive line also looks strong under Juniors Howie Long and Paul Philippy at tackle and nose guard Joseph Makoid.

The sophomore kicking duo of Joe Borajkiewicz and Chuck Bushbech complete the Wildcat stars.

Maryland may be Villanova's toughest opponent, according to Wildcat Coach Dick Bedesem, but few returning starters and an inexperienced squad may cripple the Terps. Coach Jerry Claiborne will rely on the Terp's strongside offensive line and the Wide Tackle Six defensive front to stall the Cats.

The game will be broadcast on the Entertainment and Sports Program Network (ESPN) as part of their inaugural day of operation. Also, sportscaster Don Tollefson and Mizlou Productions have compiled an Eastern College Football Preview to be aired on WPHL-TV (Channel 17) on September 8 from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The segment of Villanova's gridiron program features video clips from the field as well as player interviews conducted in the Stanford Hall cafeteria lunch line during football camp.

Chapin Opens Concert Season

In the past two years, there has been a complete turn about in the concerts at Villanova. We have gone from such rock and roll leftovers as Blood, Sweat and Tears and Don McClean to Superstars as Carly Simon, Dave Mason, Charlie Daniels and David Brenner. Most of these shows were the only Philadelphia performances for the entertainers and most were complete sell-outs. This year, the Villanova Union's first affair is another biggie, Harry Chapin.

Harry Chapin is a singer, songwriter, and, most of all, a story teller. His songs, "Cat's in the Cradle," "Circle," and "Taxi," are well known and contain a bit of truth for us all to live by. His performances have been known to extend over three hours and each one is a masterpiece in entertainment.

The Field House, which is not known for its acoustics, is an excellent place for this type show. Chapin's mellow sound will carry well in the Field House and a 'good time is guaranteed for all.'

The concert is schedule for Monday, September 10. Tickets for the show went on sale Thursday night but tickets will be available up until show time. Price of admission is $6.50 with a V.U. Id.

"Jericho Mile" Takes Three Awards

English Professor Wins Emmy

Dr. Patrick J. Nolan, Villanova's Emmy award-winning associate professor of English, is interviewed by a local newscaster on his return to campus Wednesday.

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Dr. Patrick J. Nolan, associate professor of English at Villanova, carried home one of three Emmys won by his screenplay, "The Jericho Mile," at the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences award program Sunday night.

"This is almost as exciting as marking freshman English papers at Villanova University," said Nolan as he accepted his Emmy for best screenplay of a limited series or special.

Nolan shared the best screenplay award with director of the production, Michael Mann, who made changes in the script.

The academy also awarded "The Jericho Mile" for technical excellence. Peter Strauss received the best actor award for his performance in the leading role of the screenplay.

"The Jericho Mile" is the story of a prison inmate who takes up running to occupy his time and mind.

He becomes an outstanding athlete, but cannot run in the Olympics because of his past.

In an interview with The Villanovan, March 23, 1979, Nolan said that " running is just a framework" for the story. "The story is of the inter-relationships between man and groups in prison, and the way in which his potential causes the prison to organize and redefine its potential," he said.

Nolan travelled to Folsom prison in California during the shooting of the film. He told the Villanovan "there were many problems attached to filming on location inside the penitentiary. The warden was my harshest critic about the content and spirit of the script."

The film included both actors and actual inmates.

The show was broadcast on ABC-TV on March 18, 1979. Nolan sold the screenplay to ABC in 1973.

Nolan has taught at Villanova since 1962. He received his undergraduate degree from Villanova in 1955, his master's degree from the University of Detroit in 1961, and his doctorate from Bryn Mawr College in 1973. He is a member of the Writer's Guild of America, West.

This semester Nolan will teach Modern American Drama, Survey of American Literature I, and Literature and Composition I.

Nolan, his wife, the former Karen Ursula O'Connor of Bryn Mawr, and their three sons, Pat, 7, Christian, 4, and Mark, 1, live in Radnor.

Union Petitions Tallied; 45% of Faculty Respond

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

More than the mandated number of faculty members have signed cards which would allow the Villanova chapter of the American Association of University Professors to petition the National Labor Relations Board for a vote on faculty unionization.

Forty-five percent of the faculty have returned the petitioning cards which were distributed last spring before graduation, according to Dr. James M. Bergquist, Villanova AAUP president.

A 30 percent respondant rate is necessary before the AAUP may petition theNLR board.

"We've received a fair amount of support," said Bergquist. "What will be done is still up in the air. We'll make a campaign for more cards, to get as strong a response as possible, so the chapter can make an enlightened decision.

"We'd like to have somewhat over 50 percent of the faculty respond. It would encourage the national AAUP, and show them that the strength is there. If we can get well over 50 percent, it could mean that the election itself will be successful."

Prompted by an AAUP executive committee poll last spring showing that 73 percent of the faculty would like to see a collective bargaining election, the chapter voted to distribute the petitioning cards at its April 19 meeting.

In the poll of all faculty members except naval science and law school professors, with a 68 percent respondant rate, only 21 percent opposed holding an election.

To the question "if a vote were held today, would you vote for collective bargaining, given the agent of your choice," 67 percent voted yes, 21 percent no, and 12 percent were undecided.

After receiving these results, the chapter unanimously voted to distribute cards designating the AAUP as faculty bargaining agent.

Then president of theAAUP, Dr. Michael Levitan said that a faculty member who signs the card does not pledge a vote for collective bargaining, or for the AAUP as agent, but merely indicates he or she would like to see the issue brought to a vote.

Levitan added, "even if we have up to a 70 percent response doesn't mean we'll petition the board.

"Some individuals just wanted to use the signing of the cards as a show of force," he said.

Bergquist said the decision of whether to petition the NLR board will come at the October AAUP meeting.

The average faculty salary increase last year was 7 percent, while the cost of living increase was about 9 percent.

"The salary increase was far below the cost of living," said Bergquist, "but the problem is a great deal more than that."

Bergquist commented on this year's large freshman class "It is more classes for the faculty to shoulder. It means a much larger tuition income, yet it does nothing for the faculty.

"The liberal arts and sciences element is the most strongly in favor of collective bargaining," said Bergquist.

"The engineering school is fairly evenly divided, though since five years ago, many have come around to the idea. Because many in the nursing school were away for the summer, we don't know how many are in favor of unionization.

"The commerce and finance school, as we expected, is in a majority against it," he said.

On November 15 and 16 of 1973, the Villanova faculty voted against collective bargaining. The issue was brought to a vote after Father President Edward McCarthy, sent a 9-page letter to all faculty members at the end of May. Because of a projected "stagnant student population for at least a generation to come," coupled with an anticipated high inflation rate, McCarthy announced a program of altered expenditures for the University. In effect, the letter said "the University would spend less money on academics and more on buildings and athletics," said Reilly.

Out of 400 eligible voters, 356 went to the polls. 134 elected the AAUP as bargaining agent, and 23 elected the American Federation of Teachers; 199 voted no agent, against unionization. Collective bargaining was defeated by 40 votes.

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Center Opening Set for March

By BILL GUERIN

The long-awaited opening of the Connelly Center has been scheduled for early March, announced Marc Tuchman, director of the university center.

"We had a super summer for construction," stated Tuchman. "The roof has been completed, 99% of the block work is done, the glass is being installed, the food preparation areas have been begun, the dry walls are in, and the electricity has been hooked up to the building."

The Connelly Center 10 months ago . . .

Tuchman stated that despite the difficulty encountered last summer when the workers struck bedrock, and the additional delay caused by last year's extremely cold winter, the construction of the center is now back on schedule.

All of the exterior work on the building is expected to be finished before winter to prevent the forthcoming cold weather from hindering the center's scheduled completion.

"We are hoping that the plaza area will be completed by early November," said Tuchman, "so that the students can walk straight through from Bartley to Tolentine without having to use the detour." Also, Tuchman is hopeful that some of the landscaping will be started before winter.

In addition to being on schedule for construction completion, the center is on schedule with regard to construction costs, as well.

"The Board of Trustees set forth guidelines directing that the entire cost of construction, including architectural fees, should not exceed $6,510,000," said Tuchman. "We will be within that limit."

Once open, the center will generate revenue through food concessions, game rooms, and from the rental of various rooms to outside organizations. This income, however, is not expected to cover the operational costs of the center.

"The Connelly Center will be primarily a service center and can not be expected to be self-sufficient since many services, such as the art gallery, go beyond areas of revenue," said Tuchman. "We are here to provide service at least cost, not at no cost."

. . . today, the outer structure is near completion.

The operational costs for the center have not been estimated.

"Once we've been in the center for a couple of months and get some actual operational experience, then we'll be able to judge our operational expenses," said Tuchman.

Tuchman stated that the extra money needed to run the center will come from student tuitions, as well as outside agencies, such as government grants and work/study programs.

"I think the students will be surprised to see what they get for their money's worth," said Tuchman.

Student Loans Approved

Anyone can now get an interest free student loan.

There are no longer any restrictions such as high earnings.

The federal government will pay the interest during the time the student is in school and for a nine-month period thereafter at which time the student must begin repaying.

Passage last year of the Middle Income Student Assistance Act assured students that no income test would be used in obtaining a student loan free of interest while the student is enrolled.

Then, just recently, additional legislation at the federal level insured availability of funds from private lenders by lifting a restrictive 5% maximum cap that had been placed on a "special allowance" paid for participation.

According to the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency, which administers the student loan program for the Commonwealth, the special allowance rate now will "float" with the 91-day Treasury Bill rate, and this will guarantee lenders a fair return on their investment in the student loan market. Lenders receive the special allowance in addition to the flat 7% they are paid by the federal government for money loaned to students.

In recent years, the borrowing activity by students has soared, increasing from $107,371,059 in 1975-76 to an all-time high of $258,352,691 in 1978-79. Last year lenders indicated to PHEAA that the possibility loomed that student loan funds could dry up unless a more favorable return on extended monies was made possible.

Efforts by PHEAA and the American Bankers Association resulted in the "floating rate" legislation being passed.

PHEAA Executive Director Kenneth R. Reeher said he views the removal of the special allowance cap as being of paramount importance in keeping alive the flow of funds from private lenders to student borrowers especially now that many middle and upper middle income families will qualify for federal payment of interest charges for the first time.

"Removal of the cap," said Reeher, "enables the lender to cope with all market conditions over an extended investment period and is an approach that will effectively encourage continued lender program involvement." He also said that it ensures lenders a competitive return on student loan accounts as compared with other types of investments.

Fellowships Available

The University Fellowship Committee is now receiving nominations of members of the Class of 1980 for Danforth, Fulbright, Marshall, and Rhodes Fellowships, and members of the Class of 1982 for the Harry S. Truman Scholarship.

THE DANFORTH offers financial support to select college seniors, recent graduates who are not enrolled in a graduate program, and Ph.D. candidates who seek to become college teachers. Some criteria include: motivation and discipline; personal characteristics contributing to effective teaching; academic accomplishments; concern for ethical and moral values. The Danforth Foundation requires GRE's. They may be taken on October 20 or December 8.

THE FULBRIGHT is open to seniors, graduate students, and recent graduates who are citizens of the U.S. and who plan a program of continued academic studies abroad. The proposed country must be an integral part of the planned study program. Adequate language proficiency is required.

THE MARSHALL offers 30 college graduates the opportunity to study for two years at a British university. The selectors will look for distinction of intellect and character as evidenced by the candidates' scholastic accomplishments and by their other activities and achievements.

THE RHODES offers 32 Americans the opportunity to study for two years at Oxford. The bases of selection: literary and scholastic achievements; physical vigor; moral force of character and of instincts to lead; truthfulness, courage, and unselfishness.

THE HARRY S. TRUMAN provides opportunities for outstanding students to prepare for careers in public service. Some requirements: the student must be a college sophomore at the time of nomination; have a "B" average or better and be in the upper fourth of his/her class; be in an undergraduate field of study that will permit admission to a graduate program leading to a career in government.

All interested students must be nominated by a faculty member (nomination forms have been mailed to all faculty members). NOMINATIONS MUST BE RECEIVED IN THE HONORS OFFICE BY FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1979! All students nominated for these fellowships will be interviewed by the Fellowship Committee early in October. Nominees must submit credentials required for these fellowships to the Honors Office by September 28.

Additional information, nomination forms, and nominees' credentials forms are available in the Honors Office, Corr Hall 101.

Winterhalter Proposes SGA Reorganization

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Student Body President P.J. Winterhalter cited major reorganization of the SGA as his top priority of the year. The new structure will allow the SGA to focus on student rights and activities, confining the majority of the policy making to the Senate and student caucus. "The SGA is going to become a stronger organization on campus," Winterhalter remarked.

Student Government Association President P.J. Winterhalter.

Five new subcommittees will form the body of the SGA, headed by an executive committee consisting of the SGA president, two vice presidents, the subcommittee chairmen and five appointed members.

Two of the subcommittees, Communications and Publications, and Activities and Services will organize and publicize various events on campus. Another committee, Lobbying and Opinion Polls, will discover, express and promote opinions of the student body on relevant issues.

Catch-19 will be expanded into a fourth committee dealing with Pennsylvania's liquor laws and all other facets of student rights, such as off-campus students' problems with landlords. The Preparedness committee will organize rallies and "any short notice needs that require large organization."

Three members each from the SGA, RSA and ACS will then form an executive committee to work with the Senate, representing all three organizations. The Student Body President and Vice President, separate from the SGA president, will head the committee, although these two offices would not take effect until at least next month.

The goal of this reorganization is to heighten student involvement in Villanova activities. "If students don't want to come to us, we'll go and get them," Winterhalter said. "The SGA would allow every student to get involved in the governance of Villanova. The student will have no excuse to say nothing gets done in the University."

The student will have no excuse to say nothing gets done in the University.

P.J. Winterhalter, SGA President

Winterhalter will also bring a motion to the Senate to have graduation delayed for seven days after finals, despite criticism that this will lead to an increase in vandalism and possibly hurt the job prospects of some seniors. He feels, however, that one week wouldn't affect job chances of the majority, and that vandalism wouldn't create a problem as many of the seniors live off campus. "A week set aside to just socialize is by no means an outrage," he commented.

Other areas in which Winterhalter plans to work include a review and revision of the exam policy which currently states that teachers are required to give exams, and reopening of the stacks in the library.

Student Activities Outlook

People Place Comes Alive

By CAROL BARRALE and BETTY RUTKOWSKI

Valuable experiences, lasting friendships, good times and chances to become an involved and well rounded individual are all goals of three major organizations — the Union, RSA and ACS — for the upcoming academic a year, '79-'80.

Henry Klehm, president of the Villanova Union, the prime University programming organization, is optimistic and enthusiastic about the Union's efforts this year. Each of the Union's eight committees is hard at work implementing projects.

This semester, the Film Committee has scheduled 22 films, some of which are box-office hits — Grease, Magic, High Anxiety and Heaven Can Wait. According to Visual Arts Chairman John Mullin, each movie will be shown five times a week, including a two o'clock showing for commuters. The cost is $1 per film. Videotaped concerts and television shows will be available for viewing during the day.

The Social Committee, according to Klehm, is attempting to "institute a lot more 21-year-old BYOB (Bring Your Own Bottle) activities; for Villanova is definitely in need of a programming that includes alcohol within the law and within University policy."

Assistant Program Director, Jack O'Brien reports that trips being planned by the Recreation Commiteee are "unbelievable." Low price ski weekends will be featured along with a spring expedition to the Bahamas and a summer trip to Europe. Info concerning the trip to Ft. Lauderdale during Spring break will be available by the end of October.

A series of coffeehouses, beginning with an Irish Coffeehouse on Monday, September 17 in the Day Hop, is being sponsored by the Cultural Committee. A noontime, small talk lecture series will also be initiated this fall. Subjects ranging from nuclear energy, and women's rights to abortion will be debated by experts in each field. The first in the series on nuclear energy will be held Thursday, September 20 in the West Lounge.

Also under the management of the Union for the first time is University II (formerly the Free University). University II offers short courses free of charge on a variety of subjects ranging from Wine tasting to Outdoor Survival. Courses will begin in mid-October and can be taught by anyone who feels he is expert in a particular field.

Anyone interested in becoming part of the coordination of the above programs, contact the Union on the second floor of Dougherty.

New Horizons for RSA...

By CAROL BARRALE

"Positive" is the outlook for the upcoming year which summarizes the RSA under new Resident Director Matt Christianson, according to Helen Haney, a vice president of the organization.

Centering activities within the dorms themselves as opposed to scheduling campus-wide events is a primary goal of the RSA. Dorms are encouraged to formulate their own ideas for social activities and seek assistance from the RSA vice-president that has been assigned to their dorm.

The RSA includes three standing committees each of which will be coordinating a myriad of activities to boost resident involvement in campus life. Once again, the Standing Committee will hold a Mr. Villanova contest, while the Organization and Development Committee will again sponsor its leadership workshop. The RSA Publicity Committee will handle all RSA publicity including newsletters and press releases. Anyone interested in joining any of the above committees are asked to stop by the RSA office.

For those with higher aspirations, elections for Area Representatives, Area Chairpeople and Hall Presidents will take place within each residence hall beginning Monday, September 17. Duties, procedures, nomination sheets and other pertinent information will be distributed by the RA's.

Enthusiastic and hard working people are encouraged to help residents "Do It In The Dorms." Anyone who can help "Do It," stop by anytime in the RSA office on the second floor of Dougherty.

And ACS

By VICKY PARENTE

This year, under the leadership of President Laura Stecklair, the ACS — Association of Commuter Students is looking forward to one of its most active years ever. Services and activities sponsored by ACS in the past will be continued this year such as coffee and donuts during exams and intramural volleyball and basketball games. Some new ideas that the

A Guide to Conscientious Bar Hopping

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

Part of the fun of turning 21 is being able to legally hit the bars and not have to worry about being asked for an ID. Don't ask what the other part is. Unless you have a valid ID stating you are 21 or older, do the bars a favor and don't even bother going. All bars usually check ID's because they get into a lot more trouble than you do for underaged drinking in their establishment. The following is some of the bars in our area that can be easily reached by car or the Paoli local for those of you who shouldn't or don't drive.

If you've been waiting for the opening of the newly refurbished Kelly's, you shouldn't have to wait too much longer. It should be opening very soon. In case you haven't the faintest idea where Kelly's is, it's on the Lancaster Pike in Bryn Mawr. The Erin Pub (a little farther up the street) will make all the Irish hearts and beer lovers glow — they have Guiness Stout on tap at a reasonable price.

"You Bet Your Life" is located on Lancaster Ave. in Bryn Mawr. They have an upstairs and a downstairs bar. There's a cover charge of $1 for the upstairs bar with live entertainment offered Wednesdays and Saturdays included in the $2 cover. Karen Farr is the featured singer in the upstairs bar on Wednesdays. On Fridays, the happy hour is from 3 to 6. Other specials and trips are in the planning. The more than friendly bartenders offering their talents for your enjoyment are Bill, Bob (Chunky Judge), Tony, Pete, and Bob. The Life offers excellent drinks at a very fair price in a friendly atmosphere.

Farther up the pike is the Gray Fox in Bryn Mawr featuring a kegathon on Thursdays. For those of you who hate standing (or reach a point where you can't) this bar has many tables to park yourself at. Ardmore is the last stop east on Lancaster Ave. with the Sly Fox and the Red Eye too. At that point last Friday, I was in such a position that I had to decide which of the two to go to. So I flipped a coin — you'll have to find out what the Sly Fox is like yourself.

The Red Eye Too is one of the hardest bars to find. It's on Lancaster just past the Viking Inn Restaurant. There is live entertainment Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday with bands ranging from rock to disco. A dress code of shirts with collars for guys and no jeans that look like they spent the weekend working at the Philadelphia Zoo is strictly enforced. The Red Eye Too runs specials, and a $1 to $2 cover prevails on nights with live entertainment. A large rectangular bar plus a game room in a dark pub-type atmosphere add to the character of this bar. The game room has a football table, and if you decide to go, say hello to Butch, Donna, and Chris.

In Wayne on Lancaster Ave. is Central Park, just past Denny's. They have excellent live entertainment but are usually very crowded, so get there early.

How To Eat More For Less

By SUZANNE TAVANI

While back-to-school for college students might herald long-awaited freedom from Mom and Dad it also marks the end of three square meals of home cooked food and the leisure time you spent while Mom shopped for and prepared them. So if you're possibly one of the many students sharing an apartment with a few others who neither cook nor look forward to death by starvation don't run to the nearest WaWa at Pete Rose's suggestion. Remember his budget exceeds yours by a few hundred thousand dollars. Food can be good, fun to cook, a great way to stay alive, but deadly to the budget. In these days of inflation Caveat Emptor has never had more meaning.

Comparison shopping, a relatively new science constitutes a break from the traditional one store food shopping approach. Keeping in mind the little time you have to comparison shop and save a few pennies (no dollars, sorry.) the following do's and don'ts should be of help.

DO shop with a few others who live in their own apartments; this way you can buy in quantities and share.

DO cut out coupons; in the Philadelphia area three metropolitan dailies, the Inquirer, Bulletin, and Daily News all feature special coupon sections in their Wednesday and Sunday editions. Many supermarkets now offer double coupon savings in addition to food company coupons.

DO seek out supermarkets which don't provide usual services such as bagging; a savings can be found in such stores.

DO seek out food distribution centers where the middle man cost is cut out at a big savings for you.

DO purchase only what you will need and use.

DON'T purchase a lot of non-nutritional junk food.

DON'T purchase a large "economy" sized item if it'll spoil before you use it — that's no bargain.

Meals you prepare should be inexpensive, nutritious, and easy to make, so Enjoy.

Should We Be Satisfied?

Evaluating Changes: Concern or Concession?

Torn drop and add slips lay discarded on the ground, useless today, a reminder that this is it, classes have begun, and there's no longer any room to run. We are back.

We are confronted by a melange of the dynamic and the static, of some rather dramatic and benevolent changes and some rather disappointing stagnation. We have returned to see unexpected and encouraging advancements in campus policies, and unanticipated problems.

The Connelly Center may provide the most physical and recognizable alteration in the campus landscape, the near-complete shell of the building that will become the center for student life at Villanova in the very near future. Its final form can be seen with a little imagination. It is certain, concrete and steel.

Other changes at the university have taken more abstract forms, however. The tragic decay of on-campus activity and the exile of most weekend social functions to the hinterlands of Wayne and Bryn Mawr drew attention from the administration last year, and their response was encouraging — the university's new visitation policy advances Villanova into the modern age, and the formulation of new policies in other areas is cause for cautious optimism.

Utilized properly, the new policies offered by the administration could spark a renaissance of social life on campus. Students must now call upon their peers, their organizations and their student leaders to implement the means at their disposal and to see that these new "liberalizations" are not abused.

We may look at these advancements in campus regulations from two perspectives. Perhaps all the student rhetoric, the Senate discussions and the editorials have in fact made an impression, have alerted the administration to the very real concerns and fears of students at this university. And perhaps, in view of this realization, our administrators have responded with genuine compassion and have attempted to meet student needs. On the other hand, perhaps it is simply a fear of student discontent, of the desire for a complacent student body at Villanova which has prompted these "concessions."

We prefer to believe that the first alternative is the case. We believe that students at this university can band together to bring about change. Perhaps in this case, the change has come slowly, and in a small increment. And we are far from complacent. We still see a myriad of problems, a wide range of areas crying out for attention. But something has happened, and some things may happen in the future — if we want them to happen.

And so, do not lose hope. Be patient within reason, but do not lose sight of the fact that you are here for a limited time. Seek change, make your views heard. We have returned to see changes around us, but we see even greater changes in the future.

To Be Fair, Equitable, Accurate, Relevant...

Ed. note — The following editorial appeared in the January 26, 1979, issue of The Villanovan, the first edition published by the present staff. We reprint it here as testimony to our purpose and philosophy as we begin another semester.

Thirteen years ago, a Villanova student named Ron Javers sat down at his typewriter and wrote editorials as the editor-in-chief of the first Villanovan published without prior censorship. Unencumbered by restrictive controls, Javers and his staff proceeded to publish prose that proponents of the "new journalism" would, if not applaud, at least notice.

Both Javers and The Villanovan have come a long way since 1967. The former editor-in-chief survived one of the most bizarre incidents in American history in Guyana, vaulting overnight to national attention. And The Villanovan no longer preaches anti-war rhetroic or editorializes on professors and LSD.

The impact of Javers and his "radical" newspaper is not lost on the new Villanovan staff, however. As we begin another semester, we begin an undertaking in which we will seek to represent the views of the Villanova community both accurately and actively. We pledge to be journalists first and foremost, examining the issues which require a closer inspection, seeking to clarify and enlighten. Our commentary and suggestions will, we trust, be relevant and constructive, and will be delegated to the editorial pages where opinionated writing belongs. We welcome letters on any subject, and will seek to print as many as possible. We will make every attempt to be fair and equitable in the scope of our coverage.

Our most valuable lesson from the days of Javers and his contemporaries is a recognition of the mortal sin of collegiate journalism — dormancy. It would be nice to be content with life at Villanova, but we cannot, and we will not. We will try as hard as we can to work for constructive change in areas ranging from the drinking age and the budget to problems of smaller scope. Surely controversy will arise somewhere down the line but we will make every attempt to insure an evenhanded treatment of all issues.

Dan Rather once said that journalists must be prepared to be received with dislike, but never with disrespect. We think that's a pretty good philosophy. If we can combine the eagerness and concern of those old radicals while earning the respect of our peers, we will have accomplished a great deal.

Victims

Dear Sir,

During our three years of residency in Villanova, we have only read stories about Villanova students furnishing their rooms and apartments with their resident neighbors porch furniture and plants.

Over the weekend, we became victims for someone else to read about, and it distresses me that these petty thieves are our country's hope for tomorrow.

Why do we think that the culprits are University students? Primarily because of the items that are missing:

1 brand new white glass topped coffee table which matches the rest of the porch furniture.
2 white metal plant tables
1 glass kerosene lamp
1 large Staghorn fern hanging plant (once a source of great pleasure to us having nurtured it from a seedling for 7 years.)

None of these things have any resale value to a person who is in the business of selling stolen goods, but only to one who is living on a shoestring and who needs to furnish living quarters.

I absolutely see red when I think of someone simply relieving us of the things we worked so hard to acquire, and I think I speak for other of our neighbors.

If anyone knows the whereabouts of any of the listed items, there is a reward for information leading to the recovery of same. Please contact the editor for more information.

Regretfully,

association has come up with and would like to put into action this year include a car-pool service. Interested students can sign up in the ACS office and each will be mailed a list of other students in their zip-code area who would like to form a car pool; an emergency repair kit which will be available in the ACS office in case your car breaks down on campus; and a bingo night. The Association is also trying to get a newsletter off the ground which would inform commuters about upcoming events — if you'd like to help stop by the office. Stecklair commented that ACS hopes to branch out this year and provide services for off-campus residents (OCR's) as well as commuters, noting that if both groups work together many common goals can be accomplished. If you'd like to get involved the Association will be holding a meeting on Tues., Sept. 18 at 12:45 in Mendel 158. Everyone is welcome to stop by the office, 213 Dougherty and just say hi.

Chapin's Taxi

Arrives at Villanova

By STEVEN CASTELLANO

Although Harry Chapin arrived thirty minutes late to Villanova's Fieldhouse because he "got lost going over the bridge" he played a show that will long be remembered by those who saw it.

Upon first seeing Mr. Chapin on stage he seems like the type of man who will just go on stage and play his music. Chapin is much more than a performer, he is a performer with a personality. A very dynamic personality.

Chapin delivered a smooth, effortless performance at the fieldhouse. His style of music is very casual, he does not seem to be the planned type of individual. He explained that he enjoys performing his music very informally.

In concert, Chapin is a people person. However when you meet him he is a very intimate, serious individual. While on stage he would talk to his audience and joke with them. He even encouraged them to participate in some songs, like "Bananas."

Chapin explained that he likes to create a temporary escape from reality during his show. His reason for the "escape" is that our world moves so rapidly that we all need a little rest and fun.

Although Chapin is famous for his music today, his early years were difficult. Born and raised in New York City, next to the Tombs, a maximum security prison, Chapin had to be a tough kid to survive on the streets.

His music career began at an early age playing the classical trumpet. However he soon learned that girls did not go for trumpet players so he took up the guitar.

Before he began playing his music professionally he was a movie producer and director who has several Emmys and Academy awards to his credit.

"Chapin is a people person."

When we spoke of education I detected a sad note in his voice. Chapin said "Imagine where I would be today if I finished school." Chapin attended Cornell University and as he put it "Busted out twice". However as recently as last year he was awarded an honorary degree from Adelphi College in New York.

As mentioned before, Chapin is a people person, he shows a true caring for people and is very aware about what is going on in the real world. He is well aware of hunger, poverty and disease. At this point in time Chapin is doing more than his share to help conquer these problems.

For the past three years he has raised $700,000 toward World Hunger Awareness, an organization he founded several years ago.

Chapin is a true human being, a man who cares about the next guy and he should be given credit for trying to fight a never ending battle.

Portrait of a Politician

By BETTY RUTKOWSKI

The Seduction of Joe Tynan is a film that realistically portrays the trials and tribulations in the life of a politician. The politician, Joe Tynan, is portrayed by Alan Alda, who also wrote the screenplay.

Alda delivers his usual superb performance as the "fiery liberal from New York." The film covers his political career at its height, through an involved Senate hearing, to the announcement of his Presidential nomination. Meanwhile, we view concurrently the decline of his marriage and family life.

The film clearly portrays the hardships of political life where one gives so much of himself to his constituents, and how having aspirations to higher offices can lead you to giving so much more than realistically you can afford to give. Not only is Joe Tynan a politician — "one of the most exciting political figures in the United States today," — but he is also a family man with a home life he attempts to keep separate from Washington, D.C.

His wife, played by Barbara Harris, is an attractive, intelligent woman who tries to hold the family together and also play the role of Senator's wife giving speeches and interviews even though she is not totally in love with politics. But she is in love with Joe. I felt her acting was excellent. One look from her at the end of the movie pulls the entire story together.

His children are typical undisciplined, confused adolescents who definitely feel the distance from Washington to Long Island where they live. There are scenes that show their resentment toward his career, and poignant moments when Alda tries to reach out and bridge the gap created by his frequent absences. They all aid to illustrate the conflicts of his family life.

As to the portrait of Joe Tynan, the politician, there are scenes that reflect what most of us believe political life is — the cocktail parties, the tests of one-upmanship among senators, the threats, the cover-ups, even the affairs.

Tynan's affair with his lawyer, Meryl Streep, is handled in a very realistic manner. It starts casually as a working relationship and peaks with some very funny moments.

On the whole, The Seduction of Joe Tynan is a good representation of the life of a typical politician with aspirations of the Presidency, presenting both the benefits and the problems he encounters. It does show the glamour and the excitement of political life — but mainly, it shows just how much you can lose when you think you're winning.

The Fall Season with

Vasey Theatre

Villanova University's graduate theatre will open its fall season with a production of Harold Pinter's modern classic The Caretaker. The Vasey Theatre production of Pinter's powerful work will run from September 26 thru 29, and October 3 thru 6.

After The Caretaker, Vasey Theatre will come to life with the frenetic era of flappers, speakeasies, top hats and tails, with a production of Cole — A Musical Revue. The music of America's greatest songwriter — Cole Porter — will dazzle you with an evening of pure entertainment. The show will run from October 17 thru 21, and 24 thru 28.

Finally, Vasey will follow up these two productions with a gripping tale concerning the forces of good against evil. Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus brings to the stage the eerie world of demons and "deadly sins" which haunt the human soul. Dr. Faustus will run from November 14 thru 17, 28 thru 30, and December 1.

Vasey theatre offers group rates and a subscription plan which patrons can use to save up to 50 percent. For information or tickets call the theatre department at 527-2100 ext. 340, or at the box office at 525-6288.

Bradley Leads Attack In ECAC Tour

By JOHN CHOTT

While most of the Villanova upperclassmen were enjoying their last days of the summer on the sunny beaches of Long Island or the Jersey shore, one Wildcat was spending those days far from home. Villanova basketball star Alex Bradley, along with the rest of an 11-man ECAC all star squad, were in Yugoslavia, leading an attack against amateur teams from Italy and Yugoslavia.

Bradley, who is the only returning veteran to the team was the second highest scorer and rebounder, averaging 17.5 points per game. This comes as no surprise since he has led the Wildcats for the past two years in both scoring and rebounding. Alex started all the games, averaging 30-35 minutes playing time throughout the series. During the same series last year, which toured both Yugoslavia and Poland, he averaged only 8.2 points per game.

The team did very well in competition, finishing with a 5-1 record. It won two out of the three tournaments entered, winning the trophy for most outstanding team.

Two Big Five coaches directed the play. Bob Weinhauer, the head coach from the University of Pennsylvania, called the plays from the bench while Don Casey, head coach at Temple, served as Assistant Coach. Weinhauer commended Bradley's play, saying he "played exceptionally well throughout the tournament."

Junior Alex Bradley, was one of 11 ECAC All-Stars to play in a series of three round robin tournaments in Yugoslavia this summer.

Soccer Suffers Setbacks

By DAVE DEAR

What can a reporter say about a soccer team that returns 10 of its 11 starters, arrives home undefeated from a swing through Germany and then manages to lose its home opener against West Virginia Wesleyan, 4-1?

It's baffling.

For years Villanova soccer has been respectable but never really great. Finally, when logic suggests a winning season for a team that looks like a contender, an imposter shows up and plays with little aggressiveness, confidence, and intelligence.

Several excuses can be offered for the outcome of that Wednesday afternoon. Head Coach Howard Graff is hospitalized. Assistant Coach Karl Muhlmann, team motivator, was unable to attend. So there wasn't a coach; a good excuse, but not good enough. The heat was stifling, but the opponent shared the same conditions. It could have been the visiting team's foreign contingent, which did speak a variety of languages. Maybe the lack of a supportive audience had a role in the loss. Despite these excuses, the real answers lie in the statistics. West Virginia Wesleyan, fielding mostly freshmen and sophomores, forced 27 shots on goal, 24 fouls and, most significantly, 4 goals. The Wildcat booters could only muster 9 shots, 13 fouls and a single goal.

Wesleyan started the attack early, weaving through the Cat defense and tallied in 3 minutes. Villanova players had barely broken a sweat. Action continued to hang around the Cats' goal till Dave McHugh penetrated the Wesleyan defense to be fouled. McHugh scored on the ensuing penalty shot for the equalizer. Wesleyan controlled play for the remainder of the half and scored twice more.

The second half was uneventful. Poor passing and dribbling marred the Cats performance, and made any attempt at a comeback farfetched. Late in the half Martin Woodstock scored his second goal of the day for the visitors and put the game out of reach for Villanova.

Future matches against Widener (11 a.m. Saturday) and at Textile (Wednesday) could prove vital in establishing the identity of this team. A good fan turnout Saturday could provide the spark needed to start a winning season.

A Terrific Year In Sports

By PATRICK FLYNN

Please excuse the unbridled optimism of an incorrigible fan, but this is going to be one terrific year in Villanova sports. This year's crop of freshmen arrived just in time to enjoy all the fun. So just sit back, relax, and wait for a veritable smorgasbord of excitement.

First of all, this football team could be dynamite. Anyone who witnessed the near-upset of Maryland last week has to be confident that the winning season which has eluded the grasp of the Wildcats for six of the past seven years might just turn up in a big way in 1979. Beyond that, the electrifying addition of Willie Sydnor, combined with an offensive backfield that is experienced and potentially blazing in itself and a defense that looks to be as strict as the visitation policy used to be, all add up to some very interesting pigskin action in store for Main Line fans.

OK, after the football brouhaha dies down, it'll be time for championship roundball. After a rebuilding year that still produced a better than .500 slate, Coach Rollie Massimino's basketballers appear to be gearing up for a banner year. Three prize recruits and the return of the majority of last year's cast make me itchy to get my reservations for the NCAA Tournament. How is Indianapolis in March, anyway? The only other question that remains to be answered is whether or not the huge beige curtain will be re-installed at the south end of the Field House. If you freshmen are confused about the significance of draperies at a basketball game, just ask anyone who attended last February's Pittsburgh miracle and he'll explain it to you — as soon as his laryngitis clears up.

After that title is sewn up, Villanova takes on the world. In case you've lost count, next year is leap year and that spells the Olympics. In the tradition of Ron Delany (check out the picture on the Field House stairway if you haven't already seen it), Charlie Jenkins, Marty Liquori, Eamonn Coghlan and the rest, this year's program may feature the names of Don Paige, Anthony Tufariello, Amos Kip Korir and, politics notwithstanding, Sydney Maree. A pot of gold may be waiting in Moscow.

Through it all, we'll be celebrating the 50th year at Villanova of trainer Jake Nevin, a true classic if there ever lived one. More about Jake in future issues.

So even if you don't share my overwhelming, if not nauseating, certainty, you'll have to admit that things are looking up at Villanova. Be a part of it. (And here's the pitch). Get off to a good start by heading over to the stadium at about 1:30 or so for tomorrow's grid clash with Massachusetts. You'll be doing yourself a favor.

Ruggers Host Hoyas In Opener

By PANCHO VILLA And SCHLEPROCK

After a very successful training camp at the shore, the Rugby team returns to Villanova with very high hopes. This Saturday the preps from Georgetown U. invade the V.U. campus. The ruggers will be out to avenge last year's ripoff by the Hoyas. The games should begin at 1:00 and the beer will be flowing into the wee hours of the morning. Everyone is invited to the field to watch the game and tap into a few tailgates.

Although the ruggers lost many outstanding players to graduation, the team will remain strong. New captains, Mark "jailbird" Civil and Bob "How did I get elected captain" Lynch, have a wide range of players to pick from in building this year's squad. Some of the returnees that will contribute this fall are Mike "Bizz Buzz" Abele, "Gypsy Rose" Murray, Tim McCarthy, Joe White, Colin Foster, and John Baier. The srum will be led by Bill "Haircut" Zisek, Dell Dembosky, Paul the freshman, Ernie Falcone, and Jim "I'm going to D.C." Bongs. It also mourns the loss of a good friend and outstanding rugger in Tim "I'd rather make pizza" Guinnessey.

Radio Info

Wildcat fans unable to make it to the Villanova football games can still hear the action this Fall on either WKVU 640 AM (student station on campus) or WHAT 1340 AM. The commercial station, WHAT 1340, agreed to carry the Wildcats only two days before the season opener with Maryland last Saturday.

Vince Rand will call the action while Steve Gordon supplies the color for the WHAT broadcast, which will go live all six to 6:15 pm, starting just after Gene Hart the Voice of Villanova finishes with the Cats' game. Cats Host U. Mass Tommorrow

Terps Top Cats In Last Minute

By BETH WHITE

The Villanova Wildcats came 54 seconds from upsetting the Maryland Terrapins last Saturday at Byrd Stadium. The Cats led through most of the game, thanks to a solid defense which set up most of the Wildcat scores and a new aerial attack from quarterback Pat O'Brien to wide receiver Willie Sydnor.

O'Brien completed 60% of his tosses, Sydnor nabbing six of them for 64 yards, including one TD. Paul Columbia, Don Ziesel and MikeGold pulled in one pass each to complete the aerial offense.

The running game was supplemented by fullbacks Spencer Prescott and Don Ziesel, who carried for 37 and 23 yards, respectively. Prescott vaulted over the goal line in the second period to put the Cats ahead 13-7.

Running back Shawn Passman contributed 16 and Senior Dana Shelton ran only nine yards due to a knee injury early in the second quarter. He is expected to be playing again in a couple of weeks.

The Wildcat's kicking squad proved strong: punter Borajkiewicz averaged 38 yards in six kicks for a total of 228 yards, while placekicker Chuck Bushbeck tallied eight points for the Wildcats (two field goals and two extra points).

Sports Illustrated (Sept. 10, 79) accurately pegged the Wildcat defense as their stronghold.

Anthony Griggs gave the momentum to the Wildcats with an interception so smooth and accurate it looked like Griggs was Terrapir quarterback Mike Tice's intended receiver. Griggs intercepted on the Maryland 36 yard line and ran it five yards short of the goal line, setting up Prescott's score.

Junior Dan Burke led the Villanova defense with 15 tackles, followed by Griggs with nine and Steve Duda with seven and one QB sack. Duda's younger brother Mark played for the Terrapin squad.

Junior Tom Jensen recovered two Terrapin fumbles and running back Shelton pulled in another loose ball.

The Terrapin offense depended on one man, Charlie Wysocki, and he didn't let the 31,684 fans at College Park down. Wysocki ran for three touchdowns and an individual total of 161 yards, just six yards short of the Wildcat rushing and passing yardage combined.

Maryland's strong offensive line allowed QB Mike Tice plenty of time to complete 15 out of 9 passes (with one interception) for 137 yards. Tice's leading receivers were split end Jan Carinci (3 for 50 yards), tight end Eric Seivers (3 for 36) and Wysocki and wingback Mike Lewis with one reception each (Seven and 25 yards, respectively).

The strong Maryland defensive secondary aborted several Wildcat scoring drives, especially behind the outstanding performance of tackle Ed Gall who deflected two of quarterback O'Brien's passes.

This week Coach Dick Bedesem hopes to "improve in every area in order not to let that outstanding effort die at Byrd Stadium."

The Wildcats are tuning up for a defensive showdown when they take on the University of Massachusetts in the Villanova Stadium tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

Villanova's passing threat of QB O'Brien and receiver Sydnor will be challenged by Kevin Sullivan and Steve LeMay, two of the Minutemen defensive secondary who combined for 12 interceptions last year.

The Wildcat defense hopes to likewise challenge the arm of left-handed QB Mike McEvilly for the Massachusetts offense.

Minutemen placekicker Sandro Vitiello also poses a threat to the Wildcat scoreboard for Saturday's gridiron match.

Sophomore Tony Griggs (58) had the first interception of the year in last Saturday's 24-20 loss at Maryland. Griggs ran the ball back for 31 yards.

Hober Rises To Co-Captain

By JERRY VENTRESCA

"We used to hate him as an offensive receiver," said defensive secondary Coach Joey Clark, "but now, as his coach I admire him." Clark was referring to Villanova's 1979 Co-Captain Bernie Hober, a senior defensive back, who Clark says is "definitely a pro prospect."

"He's a great inspiration to the younger players," continued Clark, saying the younger defensive backs "look up to him." Hober, however, was modest and gave credit to the rest of the team, which is in a "rebuilding year."

"Hopefully a good season will build up Villanova's recognition and improve the football program," said Hober. He also hopes that the loss to Maryland in the season opener will be the only defeat of the year. "I'd like us to go 10-1," said the Bishop Kenrick grad.

Bernie Hober

Specifically, Hober credited the "good freshmen" and the offensive backfield with experienced starters such as Pat O'Brien, Dana Shelton, Mike Gold, and Shawn Passman. The acquisition of former Father Judge Assistant Coach Bob Kaupp to replace Coach Baker (who went to Syracuse) has been beneficial. Hober, a 1977 walk-on, thinks this year's team is better than last year's because of the depth on both the offense and defense.

Since Hober violently injured his left shoulder in the first half of the Maryland game Saturday, Coach Clark was forced to sit him out for the second half. However Hober will be starting and playing aggressively vs. Massachusetts tomorrow.

"The scouts are always talking about him," said Clark," . . . he's a mean, nasty, s.o.b. on the field."

"Bernie too is looking for the opportunity" to play pro football — he deserves it.

Shane Rebuilds Infield

By PETER J. RYAN

Head baseball coach Larry Shane will have his hands full this fall as he attempts to rebuild an infield leveled by graduation.

Familiar names absent from the Wildcat roster will be Kevin Cooke, Tommy Hank and Chris Nurse; all infielders. Pitcher Mike Venezia will also be lost since he signed with the California Angels organization.

Coach Shane is pleased, however, with returning outfielders Tom Harrison, Stan Luongo, Bob Loscalzo and George Kroculick. On the mound will be returning starters Phil Sartori and Steve Skammer, both juniors; and senior hurler Ed Syzmanski.

Reflecting on the fall campaign Coach Shane commented that " . . . this is an exhibition season where we are looking to win and at the same time get a chance to see some of the younger players in preparation for the spring." New faces for the Wildcats include Mike Craig, Charlie McDermott and Bob Whiteman.

The season began on Wednesday Sept. 12 against St. Joe's and will conclude on October 14 with West Chester. The Cats will compete in the Haverford College Tournament next month with host Haverford, Textile and St. Josephs. Other foes include Rider, Temple, Lafaette and Philadelphia Community, rounding out the fall schedule.

Area Officials Meet With Administration

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Villanova student life representatives were to meet last night with Radnor township residents and officials about thefts of plants and porch furniture from residents along Ithan Avenue and Aldwyn Lane.

Father John Deegan, vice president for student life, said he suggested a Villanova meeting with Radnor, after he was informed of a previous township meeting, at which some residents accused Villanova students of the thefts.

"I hope that the accusations are not true. If they can prove anything, we'll cooperate, and try to bring the people involved to justice.

"Because plants are missing doesn't mean our people are involved. This could be an answer, but you have to be careful. You have to have proof.

"We're not going to go on any witch hunts. We can't just walk into residents' rooms. We wouldn't do any indiscriminate search," he said.

Deegan described the relationship between Villanova and Radnor township as "mixed."

"There is the usual town-gown image of Villanova. We need better communications, and more meetings with these people. It's not true that we don't care about the township," said Deegan.

Deegan said that Villanova was not invited to the Sept. 5 township meeting.

Student Government President P.J. Winterhalter said that "all presidents of student activities will be at the Villanova-Radnor meeting.

"The SGA has made public statements refuting the accusations of the community. They improperly accused Villanova students, and this is a shame," said Winterhalter.

"This is a golden opportunity for Villanova to further develop the relationship between the Villanova community and the surrounding neighborhood. We're not looking for trouble," he said.

Radnor Fourth Ward Commissioner Jack Cleek said that Villanova was "purposely not invited to the Sept. 5 meeting.

"I wanted to arrange a meeting between the police and residents to find the depth of the problem, and to give them instructions to follow to lessen the chances of theft. I hoped it would not be an accusatory meeting.

"No one is pointing the finger at Villanova. One or two residents have voiced that opinion, but others have decided to discuss this.

"The police have identified a pattern going on for the past two years. The thefts of plants and porch furniture seem coincident with the time college students are coming to school. We have other colleges in the area besides Villanova. It could be people who aren't students at all, or people trading in on the fact that Villanova could be accused.

"We haven't caught anybody," said Cleek.

In 1978, there were 18 complaints of minor thefts, said Cleek. This year there were three.

"I've been on the receiving end of the complaints and I decided to have a meeting at the beginning of the third year of this pattern of thefts."

Cleek said the relationship be-

Union Posts Concert Loss

By BILL ROCK

The Villanova Union lost nearly $7000 on last week's Harry Chapin concert, and a similar amount on The Charlie Daniels Band show last spring.

Lucy Gorski, program director of the Union, claimed that such losses could be absorbed by her organization's budget and should not radically affect future programming.

"The Union is allotted a certain block of money each year," explained Gorski. "Each of the eight committees, including Major Events, proposes what activities it plans and how much money it feels will be needed. Generally these requests are met.

If a particular committee ends up losing more money than it is allotted, it can turn to the other committees for support.

"I think the most important thing for people to realize is that the Union is not a profit-making organization. We do not even expect to break even. The block of money which we are given and which is divided among the committees is expected to be lost. We hope to make a little money in some areas in order to cover losses in other areas."

Gorski pointed to the Union's inability to promote the Charlie Daniels and Harry Chapin concerts as much as it would have liked as the major reason for their failures.

In both cases the performers had other appearances scheduled in the Philadelphia area within a few months of their Villanova dates, and therefore insisted that publicity be restricted to the local college campuses. She also blamed bad timing, claiming that the concerts were held at times when students traditionally are low on money.

"I also believe that the figures can be somewhat misleading," continued Gorski. "Seven thousand dollars is a lot of money, but you must keep in perspective how much it costs to put on a concert. It can be as much as $30,000. I do not think that most people realize that.

"Last year we ended up losing a little bit beyond our budget, but not very much. That was due largely to the Charlie Daniels concert coming near the end of the school year. I do not foresee that happening again."

Gorski also affirmed that the Union has no plans to cut back on its programs in any way. She cited a performance of the Nutcracker ballet and a Kenny Loggins concert as upcoming events sponsored by the Union.

"Perhaps we will not be able to take as many chances," she concluded, "but programming in Major Events and all other committees will go on as planned."

Campus Housing Increased

By STEVE HAGGERTY

Recently, changes in the status of several buildings on or around the Villanova campus have provided additional housing for residents and better utilization of available office space.

Changes have occurred in O'Dwyer and St. Mary's halls, both located on campus, Moriarity Hall and Alumni House, situated across Lancaster Pike, have also undergone changes.

O'Dwyer was converted from a male to a women's residence hall. The move was made because of the declining need for rooms and office space by the secretarians.

The move provided housing for about 30 more females and 40 women for Moriarity Hall. In addition to these rooms; office space in St. Mary's was made available to the school. The Provincial's offices are now located in Alumni House. The house was formerly used for receptions and student activities.

Martin explained that the rooms and office space were greatly appreciated.

"The additional housing was a big help, especially since the Morris Estates have not been resoned. We were happy to provide the house on the estates and Alumni House in return for rooms in St. Mary's and Moriarity," Martin stated.

"We decided to convert O'Dwyer to a women's residence hall in order to bring our housing in line with the sex ratios of the students," explained Martin.

The changes in St. Mary's, Moriarity and Alumni were the result of a decision by the newly elected Augustinian Provincial.

Seminarians were moved from Moriarity and a wing in St. Mary's to a house on the Morris Estate. The move was made because of O'Dwyer, one of the dormitories now allotted for women.

Counseling Center Fall Program

The Villanova University Counseling Center announces the formation of its small group program for the Fall semester.

The following is a brief description of this year's offerings. Group size is limited, therefore to ensure your participation, sign up early. These opportunities are free: interested students should inquire at 106 Corr Hall, (Ext. 548) during the week of the 24th.

Growing and Becoming

Members of this experience are encouraged and helped to explore their private thoughts and feelings in a warm, supportive atmosphere so that they will gain a more in-depth understanding of themselves. By the end of the semester it is the goal of this experience that each member will begin to become more and more of what he/she is capable of becoming.

Dr. Joan Greenhouse and Dr. Jeff Pollard of the University Counseling Center will meet with this group on Mondays from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Creative Dreaming

Individuals who would be interested in looking closely at the meaning of their dreams will be meeting on a weekly basis for 1-1/2 hours for the semester. Members learn to remember, change and understand the fascinating world of their dreams. Held in a supportive, non-threatening and highly confidential atmosphere, the meetings always prove to be an exciting and growthful experience. Merchant Sues Ad Company

By LEE-ANN FROST

Unable to receive a response from Villanova on the matter, a local merchant has sued an advertising agency for a mistake in an ad printed on bookcovers and folders distributed by the Student Government Association.

Last December Villanova's SGA signed a contract with Campus Enterprises, an advertising agency based in Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey. The contract required that Campus Enterprises supply bookcovers and folders with various ads of local merchants printed on them.

Source of dispute between Campus Enterprises and Richard and Co.

One merchant who bought space from Campus Enterprises was Richard & Company, a unisex hair salon in Villanova. Richard Cascarino, owner of the salon, said that since the SGA endorsed the program, he felt it would be beneficial for his salon to run the ad because a good portion of his customers are Villanova students.

The contract was for one year, and a total of 7,000 folders and bookcovers were distributed free of charge to Villanova students. Richard & Company was also to receive eight copies of each item.

The bookcovers and folders were to be distributed in January, in time for the opening of the Spring semester. By the time the items were received it was February, and there was a printing mistake in Cascarino's ad.

Cascarino's ad read that his shop was "open everyday except Sunday." Instead, he wanted to emphasize that his store was opened on Sundays and closed on Mondays.

Cascarino said he immediately contacted SGA President P.J. Winterhalter and asked him to notify Campus Enterprises of the mistake, but there was no reply after repeated letters and telephone calls. Cascarino called Campus Enterprises himself.

Campus Enterprises agreed to correct the mistake, but was only able to send 750 copies to Villanova. Villanova received the items in the summer.

It was after this that Cascarino decided to solve the matter in small claims court. He sued Campus Enterprises on the grounds that the ad was printed incorrectly, it was not distributed as promised and he didn't get the eight copies. Cascarino said that he was also led to believe that the contract was for two years with unlimited distribution of folders and bookcovers.

Richard Taylor, owner of Campus Enterprises, said that, "it would be impossible to run the ad for two years with unlimited distribution for only $399, which was the cost of the ad."

A week before Cascarino was to go to court, he said that he tried on many occasions to contact Winterhalter and the Rev. Robert Martin, dean of student activities. He said he requested a letter stating that the SGA tried to notify Campus Enterprises of the problems, and that Campus Enterprises neglected to handle them properly. The letter was to be more evidence for Cascarino's case in court.

Cascarino never received a letter. Winterhalter declined to com-

Kelly's Owners Disbarred

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Six years ago, Dr. Barry Young and six associates took control of a bar on Lancaster Avenue in Rosemont. Although they incorporated the bar as the Wildcat Inn, it was traditionally frequented by Villanova students, and was usually referred to as Kelly's.

Today, the bar is closed.

"They sold the property out from under us," said Young, an assistant professor of sociology at Villanova.

A group of four individuals purchased the property which contains the bar building, a house and a shoemaker's shop, and the operators of the Wildcat Inn lost their lease, Young said. The bar is currently being renovated by its new owners, and will be reopened when renovations are complete.

While the operators of the Wildcat Inn no longer have a building for their bar, they still own the liquor license they used to operate their bar and are currently "shopping."

"We don't know quite what we're shopping for," Young said. "Our asset is our liquor license, and it can only be placed in Lower Merion."

"We were fortunate during our six years, and I really enjoyed the experience."

Young said that Wildcat Inn's troubles began when Dan Kelly, owner of the property and the name behind the bar, died several years ago. At that time, Young said, the property went into Kelly's estate, and "was tied up for years."

Kelly's widow put the property on the market "about eighteen months or two years ago," Young said, "and didn't have any takers."

Young said that he and two other associates, the only remaining partners from the original seven, made an attempt to purchase the property about six months ago. But the property was sold to two former employees of the Wildcat Inn and two others, Young said.

Former Villanova student Jim Kenny, 1977 graduate Lou Costar, and realtors Bob and Dave Biggins now own the property.

Young and his associates are evaluating various alternatives for placing their liquor license, but have not yet found anything suitable, he said. When they left the building, the operators of the Wildcat Inn took much of the bar's interior fixtures with them.

Young said that he believed that Dan Kelly opened the establishment as a restaurant and bar, during the Depression but gradually phased out the restaurant.

Senate to Meet

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Villanova's University Senate will hold its first meeting of the year today at 4 p.m. in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The agenda will include letters from Father President Driscoll in response to past Senate legislation, and a report from the Senate Budget Committee.

A new faculty senator will be elected to sit on the Senate's executive committee, and an addition to the Senate by-laws concerning standing committees will be discussed.

New business is expected to include two motions. First, a student senator will propose that graduation be delayed for at least seven days after final exams. Second, a motion for alternative meal plans will be brought up for discussion.

SGA on the Upswing

The organizational meeting of the S.G.A. was held last week and received its largest response from the student body in recent years. A substantial amount of work has been done over the summer months to ensure that the S.G.A. will once again become a viable and successful organization within the Villanova community.

The S.G.A. is presently undergoing a reorganizational process in which the leaders of the S.G.A. hope to recruit active students to assist in University decision making and policy. The reorganization has thus far been successful. With close to one hundred students responding to the challenge of committee work, the S.G.A. feels extremely optimistic about student governance and involvement this year.

The reorganization has, as its base, five committees whose function is to determine how the Villanova community feels about different aspects of University life while investigating viable solutions to these problems.

The committee structure can be delineated in the following manner:

ACTIVITIES AND SERVICES COMMITTEE. This committee organizes and runs the social, cultural, and service events in S.G.A. This will include S.G.A. parties, lectures, benefit functions for the underprivileged children, a voter registration in October, and much more.

LOBBYING AND OPINION POLL COMMITTEE. The primary responsibility of this committee is to conduct surveys and polls in order to assess student attitudes and opinions on a wide range of issues. The findings of this committee will be used as supporting rationale for student motions on the Senate floor. Polls and surveys are also a device which can be used to create more student awareness in S.G.A. projects.

PUBLICITY AND COMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE. The main function of this body is, to an extent, aiding with the publication of the Villanovan. Volunteers are needed for all aspects of newspaper publishing such as: advertising, reporting, lay-out, copy-editing, and so on. This committee will also be the public relations arm of the S.G.A.

CATCH-19. This committee deals with the investigation and interpretation of various student rights and responsibilities. The committee will assist in the formulation of a Student Bill of Rights.

PREPAREDNESS COMMITTEE. The Preparedness Committee deals with the organization of various major events such as rallies and demonstrations.

Committee Meetings

Any student who feels that his or her assistance to the S.G.A. can help to further achieve the proposed goals of the organization is asked to attend the scheduled committee meetings next week. The proposed meeting times are:

Activities and Services: Monday, Sept. 24, 6:30, S.G.A. office
Lobbying & Opinion: Monday, Sept. 24, 7:30, S.G.A. office
Publicity & Communications: Monday, Sept. 24, 8:30, S.G.A. office
Preparedness: Tuesday, Sept. 25, 6:30, S.G.A. office
Catch-19: Tuesday, Sept. 25, 7:30, S.G.A. office

BGT — A New Kind of Fraternity

By VICKY PARENTE

For many people, an integral part of their college experience centers around fraternity and sorority life. This semester, Villanova students will have the opportunity to pledge Beta Gamma Tau, a different kind of fraternity — a coed fraternity. The founders of BGT, Michael Patti, Michael Panariello, Rosanne O'Hare, Margie Urban and Debbie Phillips, felt that there was a need on campus for an organization which served the community and also fostered a feeling of brotherhood and sisterhood among its members.

"The term 'coed fraternity' is not as contradictory as it appears," explained BGT's executive coordinator Michael Patti. "While the definition of sorority is a group of girls, the word fraternity simply means a group that comes together for a specific purpose." Fraternity member Patty Kosinski added, "We want the kind of loyalty and closeness that comes from a fraternity to happen between men and women working together."

Villanova's chapter of Beta Gamma Tau is the first chapter to be organized anywhere; however, the idea of a coed fraternity is not new. Patti stated that there are several such fraternities in existence at other area colleges including the University of Delaware.

Beta Gamma Tau is the first fraternity to ever hold an observational status in the Inter-Fraternity Council which entitles it to many of the rights of a fraternity. BGT will be able to participate in Greek Week, have a pledge program and attend IFC meetings, however it will have no vote at these meetings. Its observational status will last anywhere from six months to a year, after which time it will hopefully go on to probational status which is where the induction procedure for fraternities and sororities usually begins. When the probational period ends BGT should gain full status as a fraternity.

At the present time BGT has twelve members and its organizational structure is comprised of an executive coordinator, three committee chairpersons to handle the areas of service, social life and pledging, and a secretary-treasurer. Their plans for community service work this fall include helping the Villanovans for Life with its Special Olympics program and visiting area children's homes, nursing homes and hospitals. They also hope to visit St. Rita's Parish in Philadelphia where Father Ray Jackson, former head of Campus Ministry, has been stationed this year.

Patti stated that BGT will be represented in the All-Greek Rush to be held in the Day Hop on Monday, September 24 and the fraternity will have its own rush meetings on Tuesday, September 25 and Tuesday, October 2 at 7 o'clock in Bartley 115. BGT's pledging period will last from six to seven weeks which is relatively short as pledging goes. There will be no hazing of pledges. Pledge requirements will include wearing a pledge pin, getting signatures from the fraternity moderator, Father Eigo, and BGT brothers and sisters, and putting in twenty hours on service projects by the end of the pledge period.

As a final note Patti commented, "BGT is still in a formative period and is looking for pledges who are willing to work hard, are interested in both the service and social aspects of the fraternity and have new ideas to share with its members."

A Precedent Setting Woman

By SUZANNE TAVANI
And BRIAN BUINEWICZ

While many people believe that Villanova is behind the times, especially in the area of women, look around! Over the years women students have been inching into positions of leadership and importance with a "first" being made last spring — the appointment of Vickie Colonna as vice president of the Student Government Association — the first woman to hold that position.

But Colonna, a senior English major, doesn't view her role as being a woman vice president but as being a person qualified to do an important job. "A woman's role is one of free choice; she can choose her roles, whether they be wife or career women, with the knowledge that she will have an equal opportunity to do a good job," comments Colonna. She feels that the male senators view her as one doing a job and not as a "woman in that position." Therefore she is treated both equally and fairly.

"The ratio of women at Villanova is increasing every year," cites Colonna, "and they should voice their opinions and become involved in the community." Recruitment of students, both male and female, is just one of Colonna's many jobs. "We had a meeting where at least 50% of those in attendance were women,

Collegiate High Fashion At A Bargain

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Collegiate clothing styles, for the most part, tend not only to differ from New York's latest designer fashions but keep their own unique, fashionable, and recognizable style. While some might call this style "preppy" many stores call it "profitable."

We are still listening...

The Silence Is Deafening

The Villanova Board of Trustees, the highest governing body of the university, met last week for the first of its yearly meetings. Since Board meetings are closed to everyone except Board members, the Villanovan anxiously waited to be handed the latest decision etched in stone from a Board notorious for its unexplained pronouncements.

The story never ran since Father President John Driscoll, the Board's campus liaison, could not remember the agenda. He did confide, however, that "the meeting was basically a routine reporting session, probably not interesting to the student body."

We disagree with Father President's assessment of the situation. An important legacy from the campus turmoils of the late Sixties was the birth of a consciousness of ourselves, the student body, as the primary purpose and consumers of higher education. While we do not subscribe to the extreme concept that students as consumers are kings, we believe that it is imperative that students be recognized as more than "products" to be manufactured by the university in a mold dictated by the majority of Board members' personal beliefs.

Assuming a partnership role, students have responsibly undertaken the tasks of voicing their needs and researching possible remedies. We have been active. We have worked within the system.

The system, however, has failed to adjust adequately to student input. An outdated, coercive power, grounded in secrecy and best applicable to a passive student body, remains the primary mode of university governance. Decisions continue to be rendered without any attempt to elaborate the developmental process of the policy.

The crisis lies in the failure of meaningful exchange on the important issues of university life between students and administrators. Student recognition of their responsibility to contribute input was only the first step. A dialogue on this input between all segments of the university must now be established. Student involvement in university affairs imposes a responsibility of openness and accountability upon our university leadership.

The message of the administrative silence — student input is unimportant and unwanted — is not inaudible to the student body. Perhaps, this message helps to account for increased student apathy, vandalism, and general negativism.

Many of us are still listening but the silence is fast becoming deafening. It colors our willingness to listen to university pronouncements and it impedes our ability to continue to heed our mission of involvement.

Continued silence can only prove destructive to progress already gained.

Athletic Apathy

Dear Editor:

Last Saturday morning the Villanova football team departed VU for their game with Maryland at College Park. How many Villanova students went a few yards out of their way on campus to see the team off? How many bothered to welcome the team home after the young Cats played Maryland tough right down to the wire?

Perhaps you many wonder why an old Grad would even ask such impertinent questions. Well it seems that we very well recall a much different VU era when a fine Wildcat team riding a 22-game unbeaten streak rode out to Texas for an early season game with a very rough (and later unbeaten Sugar Bowl team) Texas Aggie eleven which trounced VU by a score of 33-7. About 1,000 Villanova students saw that Cat team off to what was a crushing defeat, but even more importantly some 2,000 VU students and alumni were on hand to welcome a battered squad back to the campus after their long train ride home from Texas.

So what's the moral of that story? Obviously there seems to be several . . . one being that Villanova students of that bygone era strongly supported their football and other athletic teams "win or lose," and that very well may be the difference between winning and losing then and now. We might add, as a point of interest, that the same Villanova football team mentioned as having been badly whipped by the Texas Aggies went on to win every one of their remaining games that same season, if we recall correctly.

In any event we feel that today's VU students would do well to emulate those of an earlier era. Some do, we know, but far too many do not. Being anti-jock, per se, is a reflection of stupidity more than an expression of sophistication, and insouciance a poor excuse for the absence of school spirit.

Too many Villanova students, it appears, seem convinced that it's the "in thing" not to attend VU home football games, and/or a much better idea to drink beer and watch the weekly "big-game" on TV, or more exciting to throw frisbies around at a picnic, etc.

The situation on campus as regards indifferent undergraduates, however, is not irreversible and may yet be remedied. The Villanovan's editorials could be of considerable assistance, the sports editor could help change the current picture, the VU cheerleaders, the students who do support the football team, etc. could do a great deal to improve what is obviously a long lasting and lamentable condition as regards VU football. The alumni try to improve matters via the Wildcat Club and Varsity Club, loyal fans continue to support the Wildcats, and many students do turn out regularly, so there's no really good reason why more undergraduates cannot get involved and "with it," so to speak.

The idea among certain numbers of Villanova students that undergradsates at "sophisticated schools" tend not to support their football teams is, we feel, absolute nonsense.

In fact the Ivy League schools do much better than Villanova in terms of student support, as do most of the independent private college in the East, and where I happen to reside (Florida) such schools as UF, FSU, and Miami turn out in droves. Granted that they have larger student bodies, better facilities, more money, more numerous alumni and fans . . . and of course they have bigger reputations because they win more regularly.

However, as we see it, the key to winning is overall support, students, alumni, fans, press, etc., which few will deny. Thus, and since we don't wish to beat the subject to death, we would simply suggest that much more be done in terms of VU student support. If that occurs we're confident that more victories will result and more alumni and outside support will follow.

Sincerely,
E.J.B. O'Neill '36

Parking

Dear Sir,

I am presently a Junior and have had a car at Villanova for the past three years. The first two years I lived off campus. Currently, I live in St. Mary's. This year I bought my parking sticker only to find out that I cannot park in St. Mary's lot. This only begs the question, why did I buy a twenty-five dollar parking sticker? Apparently the only place I can park my car, without being towed, is the huge Lancaster lot across from the school. What good does that do me living in St. Mary's? I believe there is a solution to this problem. Why not let St. Mary's staffers park in the lot from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and St. Mary's residents from 5 p.m. to 10 a.m. The present situation is ludicrous and should be rectified.

Sincerely,
Louis Fritz '1981

Thanks

Dear Sir,

I am the "Discouraged Victim" who wrote to you last week about several items which were "borrowed" from our porch one night.

I can't imagine there was enough time to have my letter printed, or if in fact that it was. However, this weekend some of the items taken made a re-appearance in the night, and I am writing to thank whoever it was who returned them. I would also like to thank you at the Villanovan in case you did have a hand in the recovery.

I would like to mention, however, that our coffee table (of some value) has not been returned. As you can understand, we would dearly like to have that back too. It has been suggested that I trade a spider plant for the table.

If you did play a part in my behalf, I thank you again.

Sincerely,
An "Encouraged Neighbor"

Special Olympics

By MARY FOTI

"Let me win, but if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt" are words which can be heard coming from the mouths of a Special Olympian. Special Olympics was founded by the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation to train and provide athletic competition for the mentally handicapped.

This year the Villanovans for Life will present the State Soccer Championships Sunday October 7 at the soccer field. The winners here will go to the International games next year.

The soccer skills will consist of individual athletes competing against one another by dribbling, passing, shooting and juggling the soccer balls. There will be 120 special athletes from all over Pennsylvania who need a volunteer to cheer them on and to teach them the necessary skills.

One does not have to know the game of soccer nor be an athlete, rather the Special Olympians are looking for dedicated, devoted and loving people who are patient and understanding and willing to share themselves with one who is not as gifted as they are.

tween Villanova and Radnor is "frankly, a bit testy right now. There have been complaints of noise and speeding, general raucousness. It's not uncommon with an area that borders a college campus."

Radnor police Chief Maurice Hennessy said that there have been no reports of thefts since the Sept. 5 meeting. He said there have been extra patrols in the area.

Charles Guernsey said that "the neighborhood people had experienced a number of small thefts and vandalism, and wanted more protection. We don't imply that it's Villanova students, we don't imply anything until we catch someone.

"We don't know anything but that we get a rash of these thefts every September, shortly after school starts. The meeting with Villanova representatives will be good because we will talk to school authorities we can work with," he said.

and definitely women at Villanova don't feel or act inferior and the men on campus have the same opinion of the situation." Many women hold leadership positions at Villanova without acting and professing to be bra-burning women's libbers. "I don't want to be pegged as a full-fledged women's libber, but I am setting a precedent in the SGA; however my position as a "first" at Villanova isn't a unique phenomena," states Colonna.

"Virginia Woolf" Theme: Truth And Illusion

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

As barriers between truth and illusion shattered one by one, the climax of Edward Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? was catharsis for both the characters and the audience of the People's Light and Theatre Company, Malvern, Saturday night.

Joan Stanley, who played Martha, wept as she took her bows.

Albee's two couples, George and Martha, and Nick and Honey, meet for a nightcap early in the morning. Through a series of games led by George, truths about each character are revealed.

George, the history professor, is the link with the past. "I regret everything," he tells us. Louis Lippa plays the brooding and brilliant George with sad sensitivity.

Lippa is a playwright and director, as well as an actor. He directed two Albee plays, The American Dream at the Cheltenham Playhouse, and A Delicate Balance, in Chicago.

As Martha, Joan Stanley's best scene was, near the end of the play, when she was alone on stage. "I cry all the time, inside," she says. "George cries all the time too . . . We take all our tears and put them in the freezer to make ice cubes." Martha has a habit of chewing on ice cubes.

When George comes back on stage, the performances of Lippa and Stanley prove to the audience that George and Martha do love each other. It is not until the last game is over, until their imagined son is dead, that the two can learn to communicate this to each other.

Nick, the ambitious biology professor, is the least understanding character. He sits on one end of the couch, his legs crossed, while his ultra-sensitive wife Honey lies in a fetal position on the other end of the couch, as George and Martha quarrel.

Directed by Ken Marini, the entire action of the play takes place in George and Martha's living room. The setting is especially effective when light pours through the window at the end of the play, signifying a new beginning for George and Martha.

The timing in some scenes, however, was not right.

Overall, the company performed well, and all were aware of the importance and intricacy of Albee's dialogue and language.

Curtain Call

The Caretaker

The Caretaker, by Harold Pinter, will open the fall season at Vasey Theatre of Villanova University. The Caretaker brings the biting sophisticated wit of England's most celebrated living playwright to the Vasey stage on September 26-29 and October 3-6. All performances are at 8 p.m.

Clearly Pinter's most powerful work, The Caretaker brings together a dirty, tattered, old, tramp; a smooth, cold-blooded, business man; and a kind-hearted, ex-mental patient. All three are cornered in an abandoned room. Forced to deal with themselves and each other, they experience a range of emotional responses that stretch from joviality to brutal savagery. Pinter creates a subtle, menacing environment, in which his characters become willing to turn to dangerously psychotic behavior for the sake of position, survival, and love.

The show is directed by Leslie Muchmore, a veteran director of Pinter's works. His production of The Birthday Party several seasons ago set a new standard of success for Vasey Theatre. Muchmore, like Pinter, is a man who conceives theatre as a total process; from set design, to directing, to acting. For this production he has designed a set to suit the specific needs of eerieness and wit for a Pinter script, and his own directorial ideas and talents.

The Theatre is located in Villanova at Lancaster and Ithan Avenues. Group rates are available, along with various subscription plans which can save the theatre-goer up to 50%. For additional information or tickets call the box office at 525-6288 or the theatre office at 527-2100 ext. 340.

The Kids Are Alright

By MICHAEL BRODE

In this musical age, one which emphasizes the establishment of new trends often resulting in short-lived success stories, it is both remarkable and refreshing to observe the achievements of The Who, a band which has stood at the forefront of modern music for well over a decade. These achievements are chronicled in high-powered fashion in the documentary The Kids Are Alright — currently playing at the Tower Theater. The movie depicts the evolution of The Who through interviews, sketches, and most importantly, concert footage.

The Who are as much an assemblage of unique and interesting personalities as they are a group of musicians, a fact which is supported by the interviews (taken mostly from British television) and sketches (mostly humorous, featuring the zany Keith Moon) placed intermittently throughout the film. These clips add insight into the personality of the band, as well as provide a few laughs as the band members take part in some unusual antics. (Moon demolishing a hotel room; John Entwistle skeet-shooting his collection of gold records, . . .).

But the film is dominated by footage of The Who in performance, an experience in sight and sound that any avid music lover can't help but admire. It's all here; Peter Townshend, a true virtuoso guitarist, executing his amazing windmill rhythm strokes and his legendary guitar fractures; Roger Daltrey, whipping the microphone about in lasso-like fashion while delivering his unique brand of searing, energetic vocals; Keith Moon, unparalleled percussionist, consistently pounding out his battering yet rhythmic drum solos and eventually destroying his entire drum set; John Entwistle, expressionless as usual, laying down the bass patterns with power and feel. This is The Who live, a super-charged exhibition of energy, feeling, and intensity which leaves their audiences breathless.

The featured tracks in the film include many of the band's finest songs. From the landmark rock opera Tommy come the songs "Pinball Wizard" and "See Me, Feel Me." Early hits such as "My Generation" and "Anyway, Anyhow, Anywhere" are also included in the documentary as is the legendary anthem "Won't Get Fooled Again" and the recent hit "Who Are You." The film closes with "Long Live Rock," a very appropriate finale for a group whose history is testament to that effort.

"Henry's Daughter" — Queen Elizabeth I, England's Virgin Queen, was not a woman of few words. She spoke her mind freely, which led Cavada Humphrey to cull the quotes and come up with a one-act, 90-minute Elizabethan dramatic collage called "Henry's Daughter," in which all the lines are those of Elizabeth, as recorded by historians, friends, and possibly foes. Stealing a phone call isn't a game.
Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.
A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.
Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

Columbia Earns Respect From Gridmates

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

The 1979 edition of Wildcat football is optimistic for a winning season. The first step in their quest for success was naming offensive and defensive captains. Choosing Paul Columbia as offensive captain probably was one of the best moves the team could have made to insure a good year.

"It was a great honor to be chosen," explained Paul, "especially to know that I have the respect of my teammates."

The best-known type of captains are the guys who can be heard a mile away from the stadium. Columbia's performances have been almost completely opposite. "I'm not a rah-rah type of player. I like to set example by my actions."

Looking back on his career at Villanova University, the Kentucky native noted that if he had to do it again, the Cats would be his choice. "I like it here and I had optimism about my abilities. I knew I would start some day, though I never thought about being captain."

Only one regret weighs heavy on Columbia's mind and that's having winning seasons. "This year, we set as a goal to develop a winning attitude and bring to Villanova a winning tradition," noted Columbia.

Having been red-shirted his freshman year, the fifth-year Wildcat sees the 1979 Cats as one of the best teams he has been on. "We have the potential to be the best team in my career," boasted the 6'5" tight end. Earlier in the year Coach Bedesem said, "Team speed is important. This year we have that with Willie Sydnor and Tim Robinson on offensive and our defense is one of the quickest I can remember."

After a heartbreaking loss to Maryland, the Cats came back and trounced the University of Massachusetts. "We were doing things right. Our offense moved the ball and our defense created the turnovers which led to scores," said Columbia.

Looking toward the Boston College game, Columbia feels the team needs the same type of performance as their first two weeks. B.C. is coming off a tough loss but "hopefully we'll (Villanova) come home with a victory."

The future for Paul Columbia looks very bright. Professional teams and scouts have been keeping in touch with him for over a year. According to Paul, "I guess they know I'm around." If not drafted by a pro club, Columbia will take the free agent route. "I want to play pro ball I'll play somewhere."

Anyone knowing the ability and confidence of this quiet giant will agree with Paul: "He'll make it."

Soccer Downs Widener

By DAVE DEAR

Villanova soccer, long considered bastion of mediocrity, is beginning to live up to its New Year's resolutions.

They won a game.

Last Saturday's contest with visiting Widener College could have been mistaken for a high school match. As the opponents were being lulled to sleep by the Cats lackadaisical play, Coach Mulhmann noted, "You can't compare this team with the one in Germany ... three classes difference." Almost as if they heard him, the offense rallied, the defense tightened up, and Villanova was in the game.

The spirit carried over into the second half. Frosh Ramon Garcia proved himself as he sent one past the Widener keeper in the ninth minute. He again scored 12 minutes later in traffic.

It looked like a new game.

With only six minutes remaining, the Cats unleashed Jeff Antoon from the bench. He wasted no time and tapped one in for the third score. The last tally came off a Cammilo Guitierrez dart into the net.

The final, Cats win 4-0.

Then came Philadelphia Textile. The Rams, ranked number 14 in the nation (down from fourth last year), have a reputation that by itself could win a game. However, Villanova wasn't spooked and took the ball and controlled it for most of the first half. Shots were hard to come by for both teams. Midway through the half Textile managed to break past the Villanova defense and score.

The rest of the game was played without either team giving ground. Though the Textile Rams did slip a goal by, the Cats played tenaciously at both ends of the field.

Despite the 2-0 loss, the Cats displayed their talents and desire. And holding Number 14 to only two goals and nine shots is a feat that a few teams will muster. Possibly Villanova could be developing a reputation that can win games. And hopefully it'll show itself Saturday at Haverford (2 p.m.) and again on Wednesday at Stockton State (3:30 p.m.).

Men's

Fiegler won the consolation singles bracket after losing in the second round to Rutgers' Tom Chacko, 6-3, 7-5. Sullivan and Fiegler finished second, overall, losing to a pair from George Washington, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Villanova ends its fall men's tennis tournament schedule this weekend at the ECAC tournament at Rider College.

Women's

For the first time in its history, women's cross country will consist of more than one or two individuals at Villanova. Senior Brigid Leddy, the national collegiate runner-up at 1,500 meters, will be joined by teammates sophomores Sue Shea and Jennifer Whitfield to form the base of a competitive squad.

Shea, Whitfield, and Leddy made up three-fourths of the 4 X 800-meter relay which finished third at the outdoor nationals last spring.

Maureen Sullivan, Katie Thompson and Carol Gilsinger are three sophomores who hope to make an impact on the team.

There are 10 freshmen from which to choose the rest of the varsity squad.

This season's first invitational meet will take place this Saturday at Penn State University at 11:00 a.m.

With a tradition to uphold, Villanova's women's tennis team will be going for an unprecedented 16th consecutive .500 or better record by starting with six straight matches on the road. Freshman Carol Harrison, Villanova's first scholarship player, should bolster the squad.

Away contests today with Seton Hall, St. Peter's (Saturday), St. John's (Sunday) and Philadelphia Textile (Wednesday, September 26) may put Villanova in a hole before the Cats begin its home schedule by hosting Philadelphia Pharmacy, next Thursday, at St. Mary's tennis courts, at 4:00 p.m.

Last year's 12-9 record has holdovers Colleen Nolan (Potomac, Md.) and Diane Williams (Syosset, N.Y.) among its top players. Nolan contributed 10 victories in doubles and singles play last fall. Williams had an 11-9 record as number two singles.

Gridders Maul U. Mass

By TONY ONOFRIETTI

For the second year in a row, the Villanova Wildcats won their home opener last Saturday by routing the Minutemen of the University of Massachusetts 35-7 before a delighted crowd of 8,500. The win evened the Wildcat's season record at 1-1 while taking much of the sting out of the previous loss to Maryland.

The Cats established a lead midway through the second period when Pat O'Brien hit freshman wide receiver Tim Robinson with a 41 yard pass. "That play turned the game around," remarked O'Brien, who completed eight of 11 passes for 110 yards and ran for 82 more. "We moved the ball well up to then but kept stopping ourselves with turnovers. That play got us rolling."

Two minutes later, transfer sensation Willie Sydnor returned a punt 64 yards for a touchdown which gave Villanova a 14 point lead at the intermission. "I was going to fair-catch it," recalled Sydnor," but I decided not to at the last moment. The lane just opened up for me."

Things kept opening up for the Cats when on the first play of the second half Tom Leonard recovered a U. Mass fumble of the kick-off. Four plays later Mike Gold took the ball over the goal line.

The embarrassment continued in the fourth period when Pat O'Brien completed a 59 yard scoring drive with an eight yard sprint to the goal line. A 41 yard pass from second string quarterback Bob Loscalso to Sydnor set up a seven-yard scramble by Shawn Passman making it 35-0 late in the fourth quarter.

The lone Minuteman touchdown was set up by a 22 yard pass from quarterback Mike McEvilly to receiver Mark Paglione. With just under seven minutes to play, McEvilly hit Bob Barbiasz with a two yard pass to ruin the Wildcats bid for a shutout.

The defensive effort was a team one led by Steve Duda, who had seven tackles. Howie Long also contributed five key tackles, a tipped pass and a QB sack. Dan Burke and Bernie Hober contributed 14 additional hits to round off the Cat's defense.

Chuck Bushbeck completed all five of his extra point attempts. The Wildcats will visit the Eagles of Boston College tomorrow. "We have to play with intensity for 60 minutes if we want to have a shot of winning. We have to be error-free, and that includes penalties," stated Offensive Coordinator Dick Bedesem Jr., "We must be patient in looking for opportunities."

Willie Sydnor (21) had a 64 yard punt return for a touchdown against the U. Mass Minutemen.

Boston College is both experienced and talented. They have two potential All-East linebackers in Jeff Driama and Jim Budness. The duo, combined with a big line, make defense the Eagles strong point. Quarterback Jay Palazola had an outstanding game last week as Boston College lost to Tennessee 28-16. Defensive Coordinator Lou Ferry remarks," He seems to have taken leadership on the team. He can throw the ball, sprint out and run. They're certainly going to be high for the game, because they played well against Tennessee. We want to continue our winning ways. The team that's going to win will be the one which wants it the most."

Harriers Have Potential To Win All

By RAY ENGLER

Potential. That's the key word describing the Wildcat Cross-Country Team this season. The 1979 team has the potential to win it all in their fall campaign. Although they lost Captain John Burns to graduation, most of their top performers from last year will return.

Coach Jumbo Elliott says Sydney Maree "should be stronger than last season," a season in which he won all but one meet.

Maree and Amos Korir, the NCAA Regional Cross-Country Champion, will lead a strong and balanced Villanova team. Returning seniors Dean Childs, Chris Shafer and Don Paige (the 1500 meter champion at the Pan-American Games this summer) will contribute to the overall picture this season. Backed by such returnees as junior Frank Stanton and sophomores Kevin Dillon, Brad Gair, Mike England, John Hunter and Pete Carroll — the depth of the team is obvious.

Incoming freshmen Dermot Anderson, Terry Delaney, Mike Henneberry, Jim McNichol, Scott Paris and Mark Schroeder raise interesting possibilities for the Wildcat team this year.

On the course to lend their experience to theCat harriers will be Mike Lacey, a transfer student from Saddleback Junior College of California and Carey Pinkowski, an All-American Cross-Country runner his sophomore year. He is returning following a year's absence from competition. There are others who, although their exploits are unsung, could lend a hand this season. They include Paul Denis, Pete DeStefano, John Farina -recovered from last year's leg injuries, Scott McCorry (a transfer student who became eligible last January) and Mark Worthington.

The harriers have only seven meets this season. They open up with the Eastern Athletic Association meet held Saturday, Sept. 29, at the Belmont Plateau cross-country course. The race begins at 10:30. One week later, Oct. 6, the first of three meets that Villanova will attend at Lehigh University gets under way: the Lehigh Invitational. Oct. 13 is the only tri-meet of the season vs. St. Jose's and Delaware at Belmont Plateau.

An annual event on the cross-country scene, the "Big 5" meet, goes off at 11:00 at Belmont on Oct. 19.

The Cats will defend their IC4A title the following week when they travel to Van Cortlandt Park in New York City. A two week break greets the harriers, after which they will engage in the NCAA Regional Finals and Championship Finals. The regionals will be held Sat. Nov. 10 and the finals are Mon. Nov. 19.

Field Hockey Has Veterans Along With Talent

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

Experience will be Coach Cathy Miller's greatest asset as the women's field hockey season opens up this week.

Having just two seniors graduate last year, Miller has a strong nucleus along with "talent we don't usually get" as stated by Cathy. Having to cut the team for the first time in the seven years of its existence, only 30 of the 50 girls trying out are able to stay with the varsity and junior varsity teams.

Another asset for the team this year is the addition of an assistant coach, Karen Pflug-Felder. But, of course, the actual talent must come from the players themselves. Juniors Lisa "Bird" Alderfer and Debby Smith, both offensive players, are on partial scholarships. Suzie Comley, at halfback, is another standout but is on a track scholarship.

Last year, Alderfer and Smith represented the first team and Comley played for the third team for the Philadelphia region of the U.S. Field Hockey Association Tournament. These 3 players with their particular teams went on to win first and third place respectively in Pennsylvania. The entire team entered and won first place in Philadelphia Area Field Hockey Tournament. Carolyn Murphy at the sweeper position, Barb Kink at another halfback position and the remainder of the team should, together, build a strong unit.

The coach and the players felt that their specific goals were to beat, or at least make a good showing against La Salle, Glassboro, Lafayette, Lehigh, St. Joseph's and Trenton State in hopes of receiving a bid to a post-season tournament.

The field hockey team will face Bryn Mawr today and Lehigh on Tuesday, both at 4:00. Both are home games behind St. Mary's Hall.

Lifters Hope For National Championships Again

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The expected success of this year's Villanova powerlifting team is equally dependent on a talented coach, experienced co-captains, a senior powerhouse, a freshman recruit who could have starred in "Pumping Iron," and the usual gang of strongmen which have associated Villanova with one of the best powerlifting teams in the country.

Joe Slabinski, who has coached the team since 1972 and is a former national champion, will lead a team which finished 4th in the State Championships, and for the first time out of the top 10 in the National Championships last year, into the Senior Mid-Atlantic Championships, an open meet on September 29th.

Returning co-captain Nick Stagliano, the only remaining member of the state championship squads of 1976 and 1977, and first year co-captain Vince Sferra, a sophomore who weighs 181 pounds, will hope to rectify last year's record. Stagliano said the team will look to senior Joe Jocano to "spark us." Jocano, a 242 pounder, bench-pressed 420 pounds and finished 7th in the National Championships last year.

Among the numerous freshmen, probably the most promising is Dan Capece, a 128 pounder. According to Stagliano, "I found him in the weightroom . . . and recruited him." Capece at that time was benching 265 — just 10 pounds shy of the national record for a 123 pounder. Other notable weightlifters include sophomores Ron Kidd and Steve Topazio, juniors Vinny Mattamira, Brian McKenna, Carl Carcaci, and senior Willy DeMaio.

Although the weightroom is usually overcrowded and doesn't contain adequate facilities, Villanova's powerlifting team is one of the most successful in collegiate history, boasting, among other accomplishments, a 45-0 dual meet record over a span of 11 years. The only home meet scheduled this year will be on December 2, vs. Temple and Kutztown, in the Fieldhouse. There is also a joint effort by the team to have the State Championships held here in February. As of now, it will be held at Kutztown for the second year in a row.

Graduation Delay Approved

Use Of Surplus Tuition Debated

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

A proposal that would postpone graduation ceremonies "for a period of at least seven days after the last scheduled day of examinations" was overwhelmingly passed (28 in favor, 4 opposed, 2 abstentions) by the University Senate at their first regularly scheduled meeting of the Fall term, on Friday, September 21.

The motion, presented by P.J. Winterhalter, student body president, will now go to Father President Driscoll and the Board of Trustees for final consideration.

"This is certainly a victory for the Senate's first meeting," declared Winterhalter. "I did expect some dissension but the proposal was passed in relatively little time and with no major difficulty."

Winterhalter's rationale behind the proposal was based largely on student consensus that ceremonies be delayed in an effort to allow them time to enjoy graduation with friends and family.

Academic and post graduate pressures were also cited as reasons for extending graduation.

The Senate then turned its attention to two motions centering on faculty salaries and supplements — an initial proposal by Dr. Charles Zech, and a second, substitute motion by Dr. Jeff Hahn.

The initial proposal by Dr. Zech called for a supplement of 4% of salaries to be given to faculty and staff of the University. The proposal, intended to combat inflation, would also call for physical improvements in residents halls (Sheehan and Sullivan) and landscaping work. Funds for these improvements would come from excess revenue derived from an increased enrollment.

Funds for the proposal (an estimated $770,000) would come from the 220 additional students (an unofficial figure) accepted to the University.

Father John Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life, described the motion as "atrociously written" and called for the tabling of the motion and further development of a proposal. The Zech motion never came to a vote and a substitute motion by Senator Hahn was offered. The Hahn motion recommended that any surplus funds arising out of unexpected increases in enrollment, an adjustment in faculty and staff salaries either as supplement or increment, be given

Local Thefts Discussed

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

"A mutual problem of communication" troubles relations between Villanova and Radnor township, said Father John Deegan, vice-president for student life, at a meeting of student life representatives and township officials and residents last Thursday night. Accusations that Villanova students were responsible for plant and porch furniture thefts from residences along Ithan Avenue and Aldwyn Lane prompted the meeting.

"We don't know who took the plants or furniture," said Deegan. "We all agree that it is wrong, and it should stop. We will cooperate with the township.

"We are concerned that you even think it's Villanova students who are responsible," said Deegan to the residents.

Three thefts of plants and porch furniture in this area were reported to Radnor police after Labor Day. At a township meeting held Sept. 5, some residents accused Villanova students of the thefts.

"My first reaction when I heard about the meeting was that's too bad that there was a meeting and we weren't there," said Deegan. "This meeting is a good opportunity to talk together and discuss the concerns you have.

"Part of my concern these past three years has been awareness of the community. It's expected that there will be tension between the town and gown. You're dealing with a lot of young dynamic energy.

"When dealing with young adults, you take risks. To not allow them a certain freedom is not education," said Deegan.

Student Government President P.J. Winterhalter said "There's no proof that the persons or people involved were students. If they were, to blame Villanova University is wrong. The individuals involved do not represent the whole University. Students are people who in 20 years will be sitting in your seats complaining about Villanova students."

Winterhalter suggested "forming a committee to discuss concerns between the school and the township. We can get along."

Capt. Joseph Cunnane, head of Campus Security, said "I have been here for 14 years and in all those years I never felt any animosity between the town and gown. The bottom line is that we've maintained a mutual helpfulness between the Radnor police and our department."

Deegan said "We're talking about a mutual problem of communication. We have lost lights on the walkway between Good Counsel and campus. We've spent $1000 on them. They were not taken down by our students."

Captain Cunnane explained an incident which happened on the Morris Estates in August. "There were altercations on the Morris estates for which neighborhood juveniles were responsible. It resulted in the assault of a Villanova security officer, and the eventual arrest of the juveniles. The juveniles were tried, and $100 was received for damages.

One Radnor resident said "I'm impressed by the number of plants in the girls dorms, and am disappointed at this circumstantial evidence."

"We have just had a plant sale at school," said Deegan.

"When do you sell the plants?" asked one resident.

"As soon as we get them," answered Deegan in one of the lighter moments of the meeting.

One Radnor resident asked, "Are students told before they start school to respect community persons and property, and are they

Pontiff's Visit Cancels Classes

By BILL GUERIN

On Wednesday, October 3, all afternoon and evening classes will be cancelled in honor of Pope John Paul II's historic visit to Philadelphia.

In a memo to all University vice-presidents, Father Driscoll stated that on October 3 classes will end at the termination of the 11:30 class so that all University members who wish to attend the Pontiff's 4:00 Mass on Benjamin Franklin Parkway may be free to do so.

Pope John Paul will be arriving in Philadelphia early Wednesday afternoon after addressing the United Nations in New York. He will be greeted at Philadelphia International Airport by Pennsylvania Governor Richard Thornburgh, Mayor Frank Rizzo, and Archbishop John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia.

His Holiness will then travel north on Broad Street in a motorcade at an approximate speed of three to eight miles per hour. The motorcade will end at Logan Circle, where the Pope will celebrate Mass for an estimated one million people.

On Wednesday, the Student Activities Office announced that P.J. Winterhalter, president of the Student Government Association, and Laura Stecklair, president of the Association of Commuting Students, have been selected to receive communion from Pope John Paul.

After spending the night at Cardinal Krol's residence on City Line Avenue, the Pope will offer a 9:00 Mass on Thursday morning at the Civic Center for priests, nuns, seminarians, and all religious.

During his stay in Philadelphia, the Pontiff will visit St. Charles Borromeo Seminary in Overbrook. He is also expected to visit the new Ukrainian Basilica, as well as the shrine of Philadelphia's first saint, John Neumann, at 5th and Girard Avenue.

Although the former Cardinal Wojtyla of Warsaw has visited Philadelphia before, this is his first visit here since his election to the papacy last fall. His last visit to Philadelphia was three years ago during the 41st International Eucharistic Congress.

The remainder of Pope John Paul's United States itinerary includes a stop in Washington, D.C. where he will meet with President Jimmy Carter and receive an honorary doctorate degree from Catholic University. From there the Pontiff will make pastoral visits to Iowa and to the heavily Polish city of Chicago.

Herod Presentation

King Herod's millenias-old palace and the city in which it was situated will be the subject of a special presentation in Falvey Library on Thursday, October 4, at 3 p.m.

Dr. Joseph Ringel, chief curator of the Israel National Maritime Museum in Haifa, will present the program "Caesarea: Herod's Showplace in Palestine."

Caesarea is the ancient Palestinian city in which Herod lived during his reign approximately 2,000 years ago. The notorious Judean king beautified the city and built his palace there, making it one of the most attractive sites in the ancient biblical land. These sites and the extensive excavation now being performed there will be illustrated in a captivating photographic presentation to be shown by Dr. Ringel during his discussion.

The department of art and art history is sponsoring the program, under the direction of Department Chairman George T. Radan.

Diabetic's Kit Found

A diabetic's kit was found on the main parking lot last week. The owner may pick it up at the Villanova Security office, 2nd floor, Dougherty.

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Financial Affairs Explained

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Fr. George Burnell has been named acting Vice-President for Financial Affairs, replacing Fr. Thomas Mahoney who left over the summer.

A graduate of Villanova and Catholic University, Fr. Burnell has served as principal of Archbishop Carroll in Washington, headmaster of Austin Prep in Massachusetts, and most recently as principal of Monsignor Bonner High School. Fr. Burnell also worked as Director of Admissions for ten years.

Rev. George Burnell, O.S.A., acting vice-president for Financial Affairs

As Vice-President for Financial Affairs, Fr. Burnell's main concern is the University budget, a job which he breaks down into three areas. First, an analysis is made of last year's budget to determine its accuracy.

"This office is also involved in the administration and control of this year's budget," Fr. Burnell stated. "We try to keep expenditures in line."

Permission for exceeding the budget does not come from the Financial Affairs office, however. "If, for example, Commerce and Finance needs more faculty, they see Dr. Cleary," Burnell said. "Our function is administration, not policy making."

Third, Fr. Burnell is involved in preparing next year's budget. "We construct a budget to be brought to the Board of Trustees in March for '80-'81," he said.

Information and proposals come in from the departments, and Fr. Burnell's office brings them in line with expected revenues, sending back over proposals to departments to have them cut back.

Commenting on the efficiency of the budget process, Fr. Burnell said, "It's about as efficient as it can be when the enrollment is not in a steady state. Villanova is on an upward trend, which strains facilities and hinders efficient planning. Unpredictable elements come in each year."

Fr. Burnell also stated that due to the large number of freshmen and a general increase in total enrollment, there will be "income in excess" this year. Proposals for the use of this money include an increase in faculty salaries and deferring maintenance costs.

"These determinations are made by the Board of Trustees and Fr. Driscoll," Burnell said.

Commenting on his return to Villanova after several years, Fr. Burnell remarked, "I'm delighted to be back. It feels like coming home."

Dorm Raids Result in Injury

By LEE-ANN FROST

Dorm raids of Sheehan, Moriarty and Alumni halls resulted in the injury of a freshman Stanford resident Monday night.

Tony Borrelli received a head injury when he tried to open a door on the second floor of Sullivan. Borrelli was one of approximately 150 Stanford residents who ran through Sullivan to get support to raid Sheehan, according to Peter Emmanuel and Stephen Frost, two witnesses.

"They were all in masks running in two packs about 20 seconds apart," said Frost. "Borrelli, leader of the second group, jumped up and kicked the door open, but his momentum caused him to keep going up, which caused him to hit his head on the metal-frame," he said.

Emmanuel said that "Borrelli hit the door flat on his back and said 'I think I've had it!' He was run over by about fifteen of his dorm friends who didn't notice he was hurt." Emmanuel added that "One friend helped him up and encouraged him to keep running because 'it was only a little blood.' "

"Borrelli then ran about fifty feet then fell in front of a room and was helped by his friends," said Emmanuel. "When Borrelli took off his mask, his face was white and blood was gushing out of his head," stated Emmanuel.

"It was a good ten minutes before he was helped out to the security car and taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital," said Frost.

Captain Joseph Cunnane, head of campus security said, "This is the direct result from all the panty raids on campus."

The new hours for the Student Activities Office are Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., effective as of Wednesday, September 26.

Internships Announced

With continued emphasis on the trend toward relevance in higher education, it was announced today that the Villanova University has arranged internship opportunities for students in Washington, D.C.

According to Dr. Dorley, Coordinator of the Internship Program, internships are available during the Spring Semester 1980 in Congressional offices, Executive and Judicial agencies, private organizations and businesses, public interest groups and national associations.

The internships focus on many areas of interest such as international affairs, the environment, energy, consumer affairs, journalism, legal services, communications, health, the arts, urban affairs and business, to mention only a few.

Internships have become an increasingly popular component of students' curricula as they provide students with the opportunity to integrate academic theory with practice in an applied situation.

In addition, internships have helped enable students to develop professional skills, explore career options, participate in the professional work "experience," and to discover strengths and weaknesses in their academic background so that they may better prepare for a career. Internships also provide students with an extraordinary opportunity for personal development with the wealth of political, historical and cultural attractions available in the nation's capital.

The internships are being coordinated by Dr. Dorley and have been developed in conjunction with the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives of Washington, D.C., a non-profit educational agency which develops the individual placements and provides internship placement, supervision, evaluation, academic courses, seminars, housing and other support services for students from colleges and universities throughout the country. While on an internship for a full term, students remain enrolled at, and receive academic credit from Villanova based on evaluations performed by the WCLA staff and faculty in Washington and facilitated by Villanova's liaison with WCLA.

Most interns are juniors, seniors or graduate students but some sophomores have participated in the WCLA program to date. Placements are available in a wide range of interests and are appropriate for majors in any discipline. According to Dr. Dorley, students interested in pursuing the possibility of an internship in Washington, D.C. should contact him at 106 Vasey for more information. The deadline for the return of applications is (Institutional deadline) November 1, 1979 for the Spring '80 (or Winter Quarter '80) program.

Residents Assaulted

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

A male Villanova graduate student was arrested for allegedly assaulting two femals resident students on campus last week, said Capt. Joseph Cunnane, head of Villanova Security.

Surenda Das, a 26 year old Villanova graduate student, of the Overbrook section of Philadelphia, was arrested for allegedly assaulting the students, according to Radnor police chief Maurice Hennessy.

He is suspect under the Pennsylvania Crime Code for simple assault and indecent assault, said Hennessy.

The two assaults occurred within a half hour of each other, one near Dougherty Hall, and one on the way to campus from St. Mary's Hall, on the evening of Sept. 14, according to Cunnane. Villanova Security received the complaints at approximately 7:45 p.m.

One of the two women who were assaulted spotted the suspect the morning of Sept. 18, in the University bookstore. He was then picked up "in that vicinity" by Villanova security, who handed him over to the Radnor police.

A preliminary hearing was to be held yesterday before District Justice Nicholas Sellers of Radnor, said Cunnane.

If Das was not acquitted in Radnor court yesterday, his case may be sent to Common Pleas Court in Delaware County, said Hennessy.

The women sustained no significant injuries, said Hennessy.

Cherry Named Alabama Dean

By NANCY ROONEY

Dr. Charles L. Cherry, assistant vice-president for academic affairs and associate professor of English, will be leaving the University in December to accept the positions of Dean of the School of Humanities and professor of English at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

He explained the delay in assuming his new duties as "the need to honor obligations at Villanova, primarily my responsibilities as Chairman of the Middle States Evaluation Steering Committee."

My wife and I leave with some regret since we have made a number of friends in this area. However, I'm looking forward to the move with cautious optimism," Cherry stated.

"The University of Alabama with its urban setting is a very dynamic environment and I'm impressed with the quality of the institution. It will be a pleasure to be involved with a school oriented toward growth."

"They are in the process of building a new Humanities Center," Cherry continued, "which in addition to other uses, will serve as a center for the fine arts, so I'm excited about becoming involved in the cultural life of the community."

Cherry joined the Villanova faculty in 1966 in the English department and later served as Director of the Honors Program from 1972 to 1977. On sabbatical from Villanova for the school year 1977-78, Cherry served as special assistant to University of Pennsylvania President Martin Meyerson. Returning to Villanova, he was chosen as the first choice candidate of the Dean Search Committee for the position of Dean of Arts and Sciences — but was not named to that post. At the beginning of the school year 1978-79, he was appointed to the newly created position of Assistant to the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

"I'm looking forward to the move with cautious optimism . . . it will be a pleasure to be involved with a school oriented toward growth."

Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs, summarized Cherry's years of University service.

"He has always done an excellent job. He was all that you would expect from a young University faculty member."

There are no immediate plans to fill the vacancy created by Cherry's departure. "Obviously, someone will have to assume his duties," Cleary stated, "but I doubt that his replacement will be named as an Assistant to the Vice-President."

Fellowships Available

The National Research Council will again advise the National Science Foundation in the selection of candidates for the Foundation's program of Graduate Fellowships. Panels of eminent scientists and engineers appointed by the National Research Council will evaluate qualifications of applicants.

Final selection of Fellows will be made by the Foundation, with awards to be announced in March 1980.

Eligibility in the NSF Graduate Fellowship Program is limited to those individuals who, as of the time of application, have not completed postbaccalaureate study in excess of 18 quarter hours or 12 semester hours, or equivalent, in any field of science, engineering, social science, or mathematics.

Subject to the availability of funds, new fellowships awarded in the Spring of 1980 will be for periods of three years, the second and third years contingent on certification to the Foundation by the fellowship institution of the student's satisfactory progress toward an advanced degree in science.

These fellowships will be awarded for study or work leading to master's or doctoral degrees in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, and social sciences, and in the history and philosophy of science.

Awards will not be made in clinical, law, education, or business fields, in history or social work, for work leading to medical, dental, or public health degrees, or for study in joint science-professional degree programs.

Applicants must be citizens of the United States, and will be judged on the basis of ability. The annual stipend for Graduate Fellows will be $4,330 for a twelve-month tenure with no dependency allowances.

Applicants will be required to take the Graduate Record Examinations designed to test aptitude and scientific achievement. The examinations, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on December 8, 1979 at designated centers throughout the United States and in certain foreign countries.

The deadline date for the submission of applications for NSF Graduate Fellowships is November 29, 1979. Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Avenue, Washington, D.C. 20418.

Senate Meeting

priority. Any funds remaining would be distributed to meet student needs and University maintenance.

The Hahn motion on faculty and staff salaries carried with 25 senators voting in favor, 5 opposing, and 4 abstentions (including Chairman Dr. Angelo Armenti).

Winterhalter was among the opposing five. The Hahn proposal focused too heavily on faculty salary, contended the student body president, "I could not see giving the faculty an extra 4%. The proposal was vaguely worded and could have come back next year as a salary issue."

"As a student representative continued Winterhalter, I cannot support a proposal that may ultimately increase tuition."

In related matters, Dr. Angelo announced earlier that he had received a phone call from Father Driscoll. Father Driscoll relayed to the Senate that he had made several recommendations to the Board of Trustees at their September 11th meeting concerning the disposition of excess funds and one such recommendation concerning faculty salaries.

Driscoll's move is seen by some observers as an effort to satisfy disgruntled faculty members.

Father Driscoll also informed the Senate that a past resolution which petitioned for a safe means of crossing Spring Mill Road (above the Paoli Railroad tracks) was considered by the Board at their September meeting. "The problem can only be expected to intensify with the development and greater use of the west campus, declared Driscoll.

The President informed the Senate that proper government agencies would be appealed to.

In academic matters, a Senate resolution which recommended that students be permitted to withdraw freely from any course in which they are enrolled during the first five calendar weeks of any semester and after that period be permitted to withdraw with approval of the dean, was accepted and approved as University policy. The new academic policy will be promulgated in conjunction with Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs.

told they will be punished for offenses?"

Allan Wechsler, dean of men, said "We don't hesitate to point out to students that they will be held responsible for their actions. Students have told us that we perhaps have been a bit too conservative."

Radnor Fourth Ward Commissioner Jack Cleek, who helped organize the township meetings, said "The police have identified a pattern going on for the past two years. The thefts of plants and porch furniture seem coincident with the time college students are coming to school. We have other colleges in the area besides Villanova. It could be people who aren't students at all, or people trading in on the fact that Villanova could be accused."

One resident at last Thursday's meeting said "All summer long our furniture can be out, but on Labor Day, it seems to go. It may seem like the plants are small things, but it's more the feeling that someone is on your porch that upsets us."

Villanova — Sixties Style

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

Imagine waking up for an 8:30 class, putting on a shirt, jacket, and tie (and if you were a freshman, a beanie, too) then heading over to the wooden barracks for your classes. That's what it would have been like if you were a guy attending Villanova twenty years ago.

Ask Ed Rideout, director of the Annual Alumni Fund here at Villanova, who graduated in 1960.

The campus has changed physically over the years. For example, Stanford and Good Counsel at one time were just a pond where students used to ice skate. In the early 60's construction had just begun on Dougherty, Bartley, Sheehan, and Sullivan. Falvey Library was that little stone building off to the left of what we now know as the Library. Tolentine was called Mendel until the new science building (now Mendel) was built. Two wooden barracks where Kennedy hall now stands used to be class rooms and a storage area, including the Pie Shoppe. There was also a wooden barracks where the Bartley parking lot is, also for classes.

About 900 people enrolled in the class of 1960 with about 55% of them resident students compared to about 1500 students per class nowadays, 80% of them residents. Very few girls went to VU — most were nursing students who had to live in convents if they didn't live close enough to commute. What a shame for the very many guys. A jacket and a tie were compulsory for class, although things were rapidly changing, and jackets and ties soon became mandatory only for Sunday chapel attendance and meals.

Many of the faculty who were teachers then have stayed with the University. Some are Mr. Alvin Clay, dean of Commerce and Finance; Dr. Robert Lynch, dean of Engineering; and Dr. Downey, dean of the Graduate School. One thing that did change was the tuition — only $400 per semester in 1960. Trips to Boston for the Boston College football game remains one highlight of the football season. Kelly's and homecoming are two more traditions held from the past.

But what did they do for "real" fun? With very few girls on campus, the male students resorted to Immaculata and Rosemont for girls. Double dating at the Palestra on Date Night and going into Philadelphia to the movies were common types of dates. Valley Forge as we know it now was non-existent then, so Philadelphia was the only source of entertainment. The only problem with dating was getting the girl back on time before the nuns locked the dorm up.

Everybody's A Winner In Special Olympics

By LARRY WOEHRLE

For any Olympic hopeful, the arduous hours of training and practice culminate at the finish line. For the 120 Special Olympians who will gather at the Villanova soccer field on October 7, the winning begins at the starting line.

The Special Olympics is a unique attempt to enhance the development of mentally handicapped children through participation in athletics. Aided by the efforts of Eunice Kennedy Shriver and the Kennedy Foundation, the program has grown from 1,000 participants in 1968, to over 160,000 last year and exists in 30 foreign countries.

Next Sunday, Villanova will have the honor of hosting the Pennsylvania State Special Olympics Soccer Championship. On that day, handicapped youngsters will arrive from all over the state to compete in various contests of soccer skill. For many of these children, the day's events will provide the memory of a lifetime. The task of insuring the success of this day has been assigned to Mary Foti, chairperson of the Villanova Special Olympic Committee, her dedicated staff, and over one hundred student volunteers.

Every effort has been made to conduct the Villanova Olympics in as grand a style as possible. Along with a parade and opening ceremonies, the Games will feature an Olympic torch, borne by Tim Bewnig and Ed Kosek, who will carry it over 26 miles to the field. A lunch will be served to all Olympians before the actual events and the Games will conclude with an impressive awards ceremony during which all participants will receive a gold, silver, or bronze medal.

And how did such a major event happen to come to the Main Line? "The Villanovans For Life wanted something unique," explained Foti, a senior nursing student. "We thought it would be different." Foti, whose sister teaches retarded children, contacted Eunice Kennedy Shriver, who put her in touch with Frank Dean, Pennsylvania Chairman of the Special Olympics. Dean convinced Foti of the benefits of a Soccer Olympics rather than the usual Track and Field events and the wheels were set in motion.

"It's been a group effort," said Foti. "We've been helped by the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Campus Ministry and others. Teachers are also sending in donations." When the call went out for student volunteers, Foti received a response that left her "overwhelmed." "It was a tremendous response, really terrific."

Since each Special Olympian requires an individual to familiarize him with the various events, a large number of volunteers was imperative. Still, the volunteers themselves had little acquaintance themselves with the basic skills of soccer and it was this deficiency that was addressed in a recent meeting with all volunteers in attendance. Following a brief talk by Dean and a short film on soccer, the group was led in a crash-course on kicking, shooting, juggling and heading soccer balls by Richard Mann. Mann coached the last Pennsylvania Special Olympic team to a silver medal and while no budding Pele's emerged, the volunteers survived the session without a single casualty.

Obviously, such an undertaking involves a significant amount of money. Aside from the gifts of individuals, the hopes for a successful Olympics were greatly enhanced by the extreme generosity of Mr. Bill Charkon and the Rosemont Optimists Club and the Sun Company. Additional funds will be raised at a balloon sale on OCT. 2 and Foti expressed the hope that the entire Villanova community will support the sale.

The opening parade begins at 9:30 a.m. and all students are invited to attend and cheer on those children who have been provided with an opportunity to be real winners for the first time in their lives.

Professor Works for People

By SR. THERESA JULIA SCHUER, C.P.S.

In contrast to his boyhood conception of religion as weak and politics as powerful, Dr. William Durland, 48, lawyer, philosopher, former Army captain, former state legislator, and Religious Studies professor at Villanova, has discovered in Jesus who battled in the desert the temptation of wealth, power, and high political office a "powerful person."

A native of New York, Durland was a representative in the Virginia General Assembly from 1966 until 1970, when he decided to devote himself full time to his extensive legal activities. During his term in office, he authored laws concerning such matters as mental retardation, automobile safety, urban county government, conflict of interest, environmental law, housing, rapid transit and civil rights.

Durland a "people's lawyer," utilizes skills learned while studying at Bucknell University, Georgetown University, and the University of Notre Dame, in the public interest with his motivation being, "to balance society and improve it," in the U.S. and in the global community. For the poor he has established "Matthew 25," an organization providing legal and medical assistance.

In 1972, Durland returned to politics as an independent Peace candidate for Congress but was defeated.

A former Army captain, he became a Conscienscious Objector in 1969 for religious reasons. He asks, "Are there 'just' wars?" An admirer of Quaker pacifism, with its biblical basis, Durland, a Catholic, is a member of the Wider Quaker Fellowship. In 1968 he directed the Center on Law and Pacifism, founded in 1971 the Community for Creative Non-Violence, and is currently a member of the Catholic Peace Fellowship.

As an advocate for non-violence, Durland has written in addition to various books and articles on this subject, a book entitled, No King But Caesar? A Catholic Lawyer Looks At Christian Violence, stating his opposition to murder of any kind.

Citing Psalm 22 and the Sermon on the Mount, Durland maintains that non-violence is, "something you live, not something you do. You don't bring peace with weapons." He believes that peace is, "powerful in itself — as powerful as any other politics."

Where is the "POWER" today? In violence? In peace? Caesar's camp. Or Jesus'?

Billy Nova

The Saga of Sasha Yakir

By BRADD BOXMAN

Sasha Yakir is a student like any other. He has exams, he parties, and he likes to enjoy himself. Sasha, however, is denied the freedom to express his thoughts, to practice his religious beliefs and to emigrate to another land as guaranteed by international law. It is because of these injustices that the Villanova Community, its students and faculty, "adopted" Sasha as our own less than one year ago.

Alexander Yakir, fondly known as Sasha, applied for an exit visa so that he may emigrate to the free world. This basic human right to emigrate from one border to another, which was agreed to by the Soviets in Helsinki Accords of 1975, was blatantly denied to Sasha and many other freedom seeking individuals.

In October, 1973, Sasha and his parents applied for exit visas. They were refused on the basis of his father's secret classification as a mechanical engineer, even though his job was entirely routine. The father promptly lost his job and as a result has since been making a living doing technical translations. When Sasha applied for a visa for himself in 1976, he was refused on the "humanitarian" grounds: "We do not split up families."

In February, 1979, "The Committee to Free Sasha" was formed with representatives from the Campus Ministry, the Center for Concern, the Jewish Union, and other campus organizations. With the birth of this committee Villanova joined LaSalle College

The Decade That Lies Ahead

How Much Have We Learned?

In three months, we will witness the passing of a decade. The 1970s will be behind us; we will stand on the threshold of another ten year span of history.

Three months remain in the decade during which we passed through adolescence, ten years spent in classrooms, within the walls of school buildings.

Most of us were too young to experience the turbulent decade that came before this one; the 1960s, which have already earned a reputation in recent history as being times of activism and involvement, of change and growth. The 1960s have left us a legacy, but have we maintained that tradition? Have we made use of the lessons learned, the triumphs and the failures?

What has this decade brought? Have we learned from Kent State? From Watergate and Nixon? Did we heal with Jerry Ford? Have we attacked inflation and unemployment? Did we have reason to celebrate our bicentennial? Have we learned from the Guyana nightmare? From the Boat People? From Vietnam?

Have we learned from Three Mile Island?

Perhaps. Last Sunday's anti-nuclear rally in New York City, which drew almost 200,000 people, may be a signal that the coming decade will be one of a return to our American tradition of progress through peaceful dissent, through a synthesis of opposing viewpoints. Whether one supports or opposes the proliferation of nuclear power in this country and in the world, the sight of people actually carrying out their concern may be a harbinger of positive change for the 1980s. But will we, who are the 1980's, maintain this level of activism and benevolence?

Only time holds the answers.

Missing Items

Dear Sir:

I was heartened by the sequence of letters from "Discouraged Victim" a.k.a. "Encouraged Neighbor" and thus I take this opportunity to see if your columns have any more magic.

The Villanova Faculty Club has lost several cooking utensils (pots, salad bowls, knives, etc.) and a piano bench (which matched the piano which, fortunately, is still around). These items disappeared from the Club facility in the Field House in late August or early September.

Efforts to locate the missing equipment have availed us naught and our budget, such as it is, cannot afford to replace them. (We are so poor that we don't have a pot to make chili in).

The Faculty Club would appreciate the return of these things; The Ticket Office in the Field House is a place where they might be dropped off inconspicuously, another is my office.

Ad Response

My dearest Editor:

This letter is in response to an advertisement that appeared in your paper, Friday, September 21, on page four in the top left hand corner.

How can the Villanovan, one of the university's finest newspapers, discriminate against two of the university's finest organizations? It is beyond us that such a reputable newspaper could lower itself to such smut. In the past, we thought that the Villanovan printed in the best of taste, but now, we tend to disagree with our former opinion.

On the other hand, we do realize the high cost of running a newspaper. Sometimes, it becomes necessary to do things against one's best wishes. (In other words, we'll let the Villanovan s-l-i-d-e on this one).

AS FOR THE ADVERTISERS OF NTH:

We are proud members of both the Villanova Union and Delta Kappa Nu sorority. At first, we were highly insulted by your advertisement concerning NTH. But then, we looked to the source of the ad and understood. Some people are not capable of relating to the true warmth, overall sincerity and friendliness, and genuine beauty that make the Villanova Union what it is, and is also reflected in Delta Kappa Nu. Certain Bryn Mawr Senior males are too busy being virile, creative, and original to appreciate us. Well, boys, we do not like saying this, but IT'S YOUR LOSS!!

In closing, we would like to thank the Villanovan for its time in listening to our grievance.

Sincerely,
The Residents of R-STORE
(a "humble abode," also in Bryn Mawr,
that happens to be . . . A.N.).
N.B. A.N. meaning already named . . .

Travel

To the Villanova Community:

This upcoming year will be a very exciting and active one for Villanova University. There will be many activities sponsored by various organizations and departments for the Villanova community from which to choose. The purpose of this letter is to spotlight one small area in this vast pool of events.

Throughout the year there will be many flyers, ads, etc. describing vacation packages to various exotic locations. Let this letter serve as a warning!!! Ninety-nine percent of these packages are highly overpriced and full of hidden costs. This occurs because of so many retail travel agencies handling these trips (middlemen), each receiving a commission and passing it on to the consumer. The Villanova Union is the designated travel center for Villanova University, runs all of its trips on a non-profit basis and strives to offer the most economical and satisfying excursions possible. Aside from sponsoring an assorted schedule of travel packages, the Union serves as a resource of knowledge, experience and contacts in the travel industry for the Villanova community. If you or your organization are planning to travel, why not give the Union a call to insure that you are getting the most that your money can buy.

Sincerely,
Jack O'Brien
Assistant Program Director
Villanova University

Parking

Editor:

This is a notice to the Security Department and Radnor Garage. Unless the St. Mary's parking lot is enlarged, and there is ample space to do so, or the towing stops, don't be alarmed if numerous St. Mary residents retaliate. Why were cars towed last semester during final exams after students brought them from home to load up for summer vacation? Also, St. Mary residents who can acquire Main Lot parking stickers can't even park their cars at St. Mary's simply overnight (for protection from vandals) because the towing has begun as early as 7:45.

Don't expect us to remain passive forever.

Pennsylvanians who wish to register to vote by mail can do so through necessary forms which can be obtained from State Representative John Alden at P.O. Box 67, House of Representatives, Main Capitol Building, Harrisburg, PA 17120.

Villanova resident students can register to vote in this district so that they might be eligible to participate in the upcoming November 6 election.

Water Fountains...And The Winner Is...

By PAUL HIGGINS
and STEVE BOSCO

Question: What runs 24 hours a day yet never leaves the building? If your answer is water fountains, read on. This article is for you. If your answer was incorrect, give yourself a zero for water fountain and turn the page. We hope your plants die.

Why have an article about water fountains? We feel that it's about time that our fountains here on campus got some of the recognition they so richly deserve. We have decided to stage a water fountain contest to determine the best water fountain on campus. A special Waterfountain Examination Team (WET) was commissioned to study the fountains, using criterion such as height of water arc, water velocity, coldness of the stream and splattering radius.

Location: Ground Floor West Sullivan. This "ground fountain" has been affectionately dubbed "Niagara" by Sullivan residents since its installation in 1953. Due to its incredible water velocity, we couldn't judge "Niagara's" arc on the same scale as the other contestants. We measured Niagara's powerful punch in gallons per minute, using the same instruments employed in rating fire trucks pumping capacity. A frontrunner in our competition, Niagara is said to have taken its toll of contact lenses, chewing gum, false eyelashes and dental retainers in its 26 years of service.

Location: Men's Locker Room (Fieldhouse Lower Level). This fountain (seeded third in the competition) is not noted for its high arc. Nor is this fountain noted for its stunningly cold water. This fountain became a finalist due to the fact that it is still in working order. To call it an engineering miracle would be the understatement of the year. This fountain has been subjected to years of abuse by our varsity athletes. Season after season, "old faithful" is slam dunked by basketball players, tackled by football players, drop kicked by soccer players and dripped on by swimmers. When asked about this remarkable water fountain, Jake Nevin, Villanova's world renown trainer, simply chewed his cigar and quipped, "Yeah, I know that fountain. It always takes a smashing and keeps on splashing."

Location: 2nd Floor Tolentine. Probably the only fountain that can touch "Niagara" for sheer nozzle velocity, this antique fountain (circa 1931) is also in the running for the longest period of service of any fountain on campus. It has been said that during the second great Tolentine fire, the water pipe to this fountain broke, showering the 2nd floor with cascades of ice water, thus saving Tolentine from complete destruction. Undoubtedly the most embarrassing fountain on campus due to its wide splattering radius, this fountain appears to have it all; the ability to tear a person's braces out and the potential to splash an unsuspecting Dean.

Location: 4th Floor Library. The absolute worst water fountain on campus sits on the fourth floor of the library. "Totally Unfaithful" emits water to a height of .342 millimeters and is used only by those sly devils who fake getting a drink of water while checking out certain female prospects in the comfy chairs beside the elevator.

Location: John Barry Hall 1st Floor. An ordinary looking water fountain to those who don't know the history behind it. This fountain has seen quite a bit of the world. Originally installed in the United States Embassy in Manila, this fountain was captured by the Japanese when the Philippines fell in 1942. When General Mac Arthur recaptured the Republic, he recovered this water fountain and sent it back to the NROTC Unit at Villanova as a gift. A Japanese inscription was uncovered on the bottom of the fountain in 1965. The inscription)!&°* was translated by Dr. Joseph Lane to signify "Return to Tokyo — Not cold enough!"

Location: Sheehan Ground Floor. "Old Betsy" has been Mrs. Dependable on Sheehan's ground floor for over twenty years. (Ms. Dependable since 1974). This fountain has no special features. In fact, this fountain is so damn average that the annual Philadelphia Yawner's Convention has patterned their fountains from the likes of Old Betsy.

Location: Kennedy Hall. The "drip" just doesn't have it. Gurgle. Gurgle.

Location: Tolentine 4th Floor. "Bone-dry" has been pronounced dead. Funeral services will be held next week for the fountain and for the three psychology students who passed out and died after being denied a drink of water.

Now that we've covered an assortment of fountains, the winners of various groups will be given their due next week in the first annual WET contest.

Pink Socks — You Must Be A Freshman

By DEIRDRE FLANAGAN

So, you want to be a freshman, huh? Take it from one who specializes in "freshmaninity," it takes a lot of courage, talent, and uncoordination, to be a frosh — the only thing it doesn't require is experience.

There are however, a few minor details you should learn so as not to mess up and blow your amateurity. Mainly you must know how to look stupified. No one likes a smart alecky frosh who knows where every facility on campus is. So what if you studied the tour guide all summer, and have a detailed map pasted on your dorm wall — fake it — it will be to your advantage.

Pink socks? Sure! Everybody knows a frosh can't do laundry. Forget the crash courses mom gave you along with the box of Cheer. If she bought you everything in basic white, borrow someone's red towel, and add a little color to your life. Remember, pink underwear is a privilege reserved only for freshmen. Once you hit sophomore year, your trophies either score two in the waste-basket, or find their way between the pages of scrap books.

If you're good at looking green — great! But don't look so green that you blend into the scenery. Remember: freshmen have to stick out . . . or rather look unique. Carry a pile of books, a lunch box, a slide ruler and calculator, or better yet, wear pink socks!

About the food . . . wolf it down! The cafeteria doesn't go to all that trouble to make it look real for nothing. The upperclassmen have already discovered the powdered eggs — it's up to you to eat them. Finish your chocolate pudding! A frosh is easily detected by his clean plate. If you can't go for thirds, bring the other half dozen back to your room — it makes great glue!

There are many guidelines to being a freshman, but basically it just takes technique. If something can go wrong — make it go wrong. Why? Because it will make your sophomore year just that much better!

"Take it from one who specializes in 'freshmaninity', it takes a lot of courage, talent, and uncoordination, to be a frosh - the only thing it doesn't require is experience."

Sixties Style

The popularity of sports has carried down through the years. The basketball team was as good as it is now, and their rivalry with St. Joe's and Temple also existed in the 60's. The track team also excelled in the 60's with VU sporting one of the best cinder tracks around. And the football team lost some and won some, as today.

Of course there were other things to do besides Sports. There was the "Turf and Tinsel" club, an all male club that wrote and starred in their productions. The Villanovan was a great paper then, as now (Ed said that, not me). Frats, the Band, Villanova Singers, and WKVU were all present at that time, growing over the years. Junior week, a week of activities starting on Mother's Day with a mass and luncheon for mothers and ending with the Junior prom. Mothers were asked to send in a picture of the Juniors as babies and the cutest baby was picked. Ed Rideout was the cutest baby of the Class of '60.

VU students drank their share of beer then, but if you got caught drinking publicly on campus, you were kicked out of school. Parties were usually held off campus in rented halls in the area. Luckily, things have changed.

Obviously there is much more to VU of the past than can be covered here. Much has changed, but in a way it hasn't changed at all. VU students were probably as nuts then as they are now. But who's to say how much we really are?

Sasha

and Brandeis University as collegiate centers of support for Sasha and his family. The committee printed postcards and made them available to the public on a daily basis in Dougherty Hall. The group sent representatives to Washington, D.C. to discuss the matter with a group of legislators, including Congressman Robert Edgar (D-PA), Representative Michael Myers (D-PA), Senator John Heinz (R-PA), and Senator Abraham Ribicoff (R-CT).

Less than a month ago Sasha received his final draft papers forcing him to either serve for five years in the Russian army or to spend eight years in a labor camp, with an uncertain future thereafter. The danger of his serving is that once he has served he will be accused of knowing state secrets and subsequently denied a visa. The committee acted immediately in the face of this crisis by sending a telegram to Congressman Edgar and Senator Heinz. Both acted favorably on Sasha's behalf, with Heinz promising to bring Sasha's case to the attention of the Soviet authorities. Edgar sent a letter directly to Brezhnev urging him to intervene on behalf of Sasha permitting him to emigrate.

The best thing that we can do to help Sasha is to write to him. Even if he does not receive our letters and cards, and chances are he will not, it is imperative that we continue to send cards.

Sasha's birthday is October 15. The committee has provided decorative birthday cards which will be available in Dougherty Hall throughout the coming weeks. There will also be a party for Sasha on October 16, at 12:45 in Bartley 10. All are welcome to come. Also anyone who is interested in joining the committee can contact Bradd at 353-2599.

Let us continue our efforts to bring honor and recognition to our university and more importantly to bring freedom to Sasha, for it is a matter of social justice and a cause that warrants the support of all people who cherish freedom. Sasha's address is:

Joe Olivieri as Aston and Jeffrey Musmanno as Mick, in THE CARETAKER.

Pinter's Caretaker
shows a theme of stagnation

By STEVE COMBS

Harold Pinter's play The Caretaker makes one wonder if there's a point in anything. It has a plot that is barely discernible. The three characters talked and talked and even screamed but nothing happened ; it seemed to revolve around a theme of stagnation.

Aston, Joe Olivieri, always plans to build a shed but never moves a finger towards it. Jenkins, Jim Schlatter, waits for the weather to break and waits and waits . . . He feels it necessary to have his indentification papers or he'll never prove who is. And Mick, Jeff Musmanno, seemed to be in the valley of the blind where the one-eyed man is King. He was a ball of fire but never fulfilled his plans. Each man's plans kept him from realizing his pathetic existence.

Jim Schlatter's performance is so entertaining that, even though the plot fails to build, you are content just to watch him work. Jenkins reminded me of Tull's Aqua lung who's been in the street and knows the score. Schlatter infuses a delicate mix of fear and pride into his role.

Aston, Joe Olivieri, a former mental patient who "can never quite get my thoughts together" spends the majority of the play toying with a broken toaster. He tunes out the other characters and seems unable to complete even simple tasks. I never decided whether Mick, Jeff Musmanno, was crazy or not. He is alternately cruel and kind to both Aston and Jenkins.

The set was a realistically run-down flat which was littered with junk, and Jenkins costume was a rhapsody in rags.

After spending two and a half hours watching The Caretaker, I left depressed, confused, and feeling stagnant and pessimistic.

Daniels, Mason and Gallagher

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

Something magical seemed to be in the air on the evening of September 22nd. As I shuffled against the darkness along Lancaster Avenue, the puddles of rain water reflected the glow from the winking traffic lights, tinting the moonbeams that sliced their way through the evening mist. I kept an eye open for the characters from Dylan's "Desolation Row" to parade by and complete the menagerie. But, as these never materialized, I was lucky enough to instead attend the Daniels, Mason and Gallagher show at The Main Point.

The nucleus of the band, Ben Daniels and Danny Mason, have been playing together since June of 1978; they alligned themselves with Pete McGowan to form Daniels, Mason and McGowan, which lasted until Pete's graduation in May of 1979. The band that took to the stage on Saturday night has only been together for about three weeks, which makes their already commendable tightness and pacing even more remarkable. Ben and Danny share acoustic guitar duties, although Ben is more wont to stand with the bassist onstage and enhance the rhythm section while Danny scathingly flirts over the lead riffs. Danny and Ben do most of the vocals, and are sometimes backed by Teddie Gallagher; these three are the forces behind the band's compositions. Frank Gunther, from the Arthur Murray School of Dance, is the bassist, and Emanuel Del Pizzo, on drums, rounds out the band.

The duo of Mary Driesch and Carolyn Murray, Villanova students, served to warm up an already enthusiastic audience (There is something about the closeness of The Main Point that increases the audience's appreciation of the group onstage but, more importantly, increases the band's awareness of its audience). The twin acoustic guitars and lilting vocal melodies and harmonies effectively conjured up images of summer days and romances gone by. (Oh, Joni . . .) Applause was warm and well deserved.

The band adapts to the ideas of Neil Young very well, as they demonstrated during the last set. Opening with "Tonight's the Night," the visual contrasts between Ben and Dan were brought to the fore: Ben's blond hair frolicked on one side while, across the stage, Dan approximated the anguish in Neil's high-pitched voice, cool in his black felt hat. "Down by the River" started off in an easy manner, suggestive of the Grateful Dead shuffle, but the twin guitars were eventually eager to attack the sharp point and counterpoint. This was truly a high point, especially when Teddie's voice helped kick the chorus along. Both the band and the audience seemed lost in the rhythms. "Comes a Time" was cleanly delivered, replete with the haunting imagery that got me looking for Dylan's friends again.

CHICAGO

On Sunday, October 7, the Cultural Arts Committee of the Villanova Union will sponsor the national touring company of the Broadway hit musical play Chicago at 8 p.m. in the Villanova Fieldhouse. The musical, written and directed on Broadway by Bob Fosse won critical acclaim when it opened on Broadway in 1975. Clive Barnes of the New York Times said, "Style is everywhere. Indeed, the show seems to be stuffed with virtue." Douglas Watt of the New York Daily News commented; "The whole thing moves like a well-oiled machine." Tickets for Chicago are $9.00 for the general public and are available at all Ticketron outlets and the Campus Information Center in Dougherty Hall at Villanova. For further information please call 527-2100, ext. 297.

Date: October 7, 1979
Place: Villanova Fieldhouse, corner of North Ithan Avenue and Lancaster Avenue (U.S. 30)
Time: 8 p.m.
SPECIAL STUDENT RATE: $4.00 WITH VILLANOVA I.D.

Kenny Loggins

The Villanova Union announces a name that's been known to all, young and old, throughout the 70's. His music has a style that escapes a time limit. Presently living in California, this gentle, sincere person, who will be coming all the way to the East coast is Kenny Loggins.

Separated from Jim Messina for almost three years now, Loggins has been slowly but surely acquiring the rights to stardom (I say slowly because that's the kind of style he has, not a gaudier, all-a-glitter style at all.

"When Push Comes You Friend" which he did with Stevie Nicks made the top 40's and stayed there for a while. And his second solo LP, Nightwatch, was certified platinum.

Concerning the Loggins and Messina split, Loggins said in the Jan. issue of the Rolling Stone, "Sooner or later the student has to surpass the teacher. I probably wanted to break up more than he did." Their relationship started out as Messina being the producer, and Loggins, the artist, but it turned into a productive relationship.

Later, with solo plans and a lot of credit besides, Loggins comes forth to Villanova's Field House on October 26.

Tickets go on sale tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the C.I.C. office.

Langran Builds Net Program

By JOHN CHOTT

Two of the least publicized teams on campus are the men's and women's varsity tennis teams. Despite this fact, their moderator and coach, Dr. Langran, remains their undaunted leader.

Up until World War II, the tennis courts were located at the site of the main parking lot. With the advent of the war, the team was disbanded and the courts paved over for the construction of the present lot.

When Dr. Langran arrived here in 1969, the eight courts behind Kennedy and Falvey were constructed. Unfortunately, the courts behind the library were for the use of the Augustinians and Langran did not have the facilities needed to hold intercollegiate meets on campus. Only when St. Mary's was built and the seminarians moved out of Corr Hall was Villanova able to field a team.

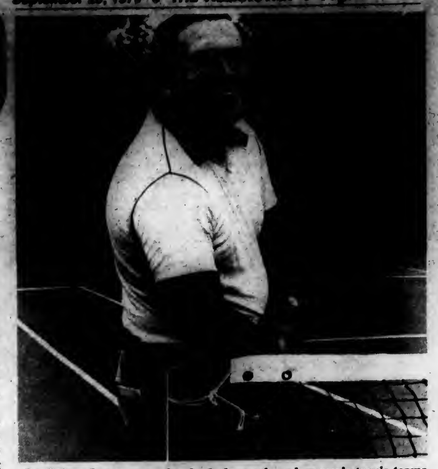
In the spring of 1967, the men's tennis club played their first match. Two years later they were granted varsity status. The spring of 1969 also saw the introduction of the women's tennis team. Dr. Langran is proud to say that his team is the oldest women's team here at Villanova. That experience has paid off since Dr. Langran was recently elected President of the Philadelphia Area Women's Coaches Association. He is the first male to be elected to the post. At Villanova, Dr. Langran is the third most successful coach in Villanova's history and the highest among non-basketball coaches.

Dr. Langran's love for tennis extends back to high school. He played No. 3 singles his junior year of high school and was top-seeded his senior year. Also that year, he was runner up in the Minnesota State Catholic Championships. In college, he didn't have the opportunity to play because, as he put it, "Loyola was a city school." In the Army, opportunity again knocked and Dr. Langran captained a team at Aberdeen, Md. and played No. 2 single.

One of the interesting aspects about the tennis team is that new members make the team by challenging an established player. Dr. Langran explained, "If someone wants to make the team, then he should be able to beat someone on the team."

Over the years, Dr. Langran has noted the tremendous improvement in women's tennis, ascribing its new popularity to television exposure. The interest in tennis as a craze, he felt, may be cresting due to its overshadowing by other sports, most notably soccer. One of the most frustrating aspects, though, is that Villanova does not give any men's scholarships and only this year gave its first partial women's.

The men's team plays during the spring semester while the women play both fall and spring. Practice is held every day Monday through Friday 2:30-6:00 at St. Mary's.



Dr. Robert Langran coaches both the men's and women's tennis teams.

The Best Fourth Place Team

By PATRICK FLYNN

"The best fourth-place team in baseball."

If I heard it once last April, I heard it a million times, from those Red Sox fans. Even worse, from those smug Yankee fans. Now and then a coherent Phillies fan would wander by and say it, too. "The best fourth-place team in baseball."

But wait a minute, fellas. That pitching staff has always been tough. The defense is air-tight. And the fiery little munchkin in the dugout is to baseball what Groucho Marx was to comedy. Surely this team will win some ball games. These arguments brought the same results every time: hoots, screams and obscene gestures. And always, "The best fourth-place team in baseball."

Well, in case you haven't checked the standings lately (and if you're a Red Sox, Yankee or Phillies fan, you probably haven't since July), the best fourth-place team in baseball is making a shambles of the American League's Eastern Division. Earl Weaver's Birds clinched the title last weekend and the baseball world is left muttering over the team that refused to fold, the team that wins with bats and gloves instead of bankbooks, the team that made a lot of so-called experts look very, very stupid.

You see, there is more to the story in Charm City than a hundred and some victories and a 3.20 team ERA. More people had more fun at Memorial Stadium and at all the bars after games and during road games, than at all the city fairs, rock concerts and discos in recent memory.

People got involved and regardless of who went to last night's game and who didn't, no matter what the final score was or who became the hero, that city was a much better place to live this past summer than ever before, in my lifetime at least. Traffic jams were bearable, even enjoyable if WFBR was playing radio highlights and horns were honking in approval. Folks were friendlier on the streets and in stores. In short, nobody could find anything to gripe about as long as the Miracle on 33rd Street was in full swing. And it was all because of a bunch of misfit ballplayers called the Baltimore Orioles.

The point is that in this era of millionaire athletes and big business becoming synonymous with pro sports, the fan is often disillusioned. He is often ridiculed for wasting his time rooting for a greedy bunch of ingrates. The summer of '79 in Baltimore proved that every now and then it pays off, and pays off in a big way.

It may be a while before I come down from this season, but I will. Soon there'll be a pessimistic word in this column, a scowl on this face. But I've enjoyed it while it lasted, and that's enough for me.

So if you'll excuse me for a while, I'll be out feeding crow to some Yankee fans I know. You remember the Bronx Bombers. They're the best fourth-place team in baseball.

Women Booters Take Season Opener

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

With 75 seconds left to go in the game, forward Liz Supchak received an assist from halfback Lori Stasco to boot in the first goal and register the first victory for the women's soccer team.

The Wildcats traveled to Lehigh last week for their season opener, which turned out to be a 1-0 shutout over the Engineers.

Villanova dominated the play with 23 shots on goal. Senior Susan Stroud capably controlled the V.U. goal cage, deflecting all seven shots on goal. It was Susan's third shutout in her second year of play.

When questioned about his main goal for the team this season, he responded, "I want the team to play quality soccer." Stevens wants the girls to control the ball and stay away from too much body contact.

Defensemen Nina Wieczorek and Denise Reid, both first year rookies, were also key players in the solid defense.

Coach Lee Stevens is optimistic about the team, hoping to improve on the 5-5 season tally registered last year.

The Wildcat booters go up against strong opponents in their next three games as they face Penn State tomorrow, Rutgers on Oct. 3 and Princeton on Oct. 6. All are away games.

Grid Tickets $2 Off

The Villanova cheerleaders will be handing out approximately 900 "Polarize the Penguins" buttons as the fight slogan for the Villanova-Youngstown State football game next Saturday, on Tuesday afternoon at Dougherty Hall.

The first 1,000 students who come to the Field House Ticket Office between Tuesday and Friday can purchase special discounted reserve seats to the game at $1 off regular student rates ($2.50 per seat) for a pair or more seats.

However, the student must display the Bonanza "Polarize the Penguins" button for the special discount.

This special reduction will not be good on the day of the game.

Gridders Can't Win On The Road

By BRUCE MURRAY

At Alumni Stadium before 16,083 loyal and screaming Eagle fans, Boston College ended a thirteen game losing streak by defeating the Villanova Wildcats 34-7. The loss lowered the Cats' record back to 1-2. Over the past four years, the Eagles and the Wildcats have split the series both winning handily on their home turf. Boston College now leads the series, the Cats' oldest continuous series between opponents, 29-14-1.

Costly turnovers were the main cause of the Wildcat defeat. In the first half alone the Cats suffered five turnovers; Pat O'Brien lost three fumbles (two because of faulty exchanges with the center) and also tossed one interception. In addition, Joe Borajkiewicz had a punt blocked. Consequently, Boston College received excellent field position as all five turnovers occurred inside the Villanova 27 yard line. Despite these golden opportunities, the Eagles were only able to score thirteen points as the stingy Wildcat defense rose to each occasion. It was the tough defense, including a first quarter goal line stand on the one foot line which kept the Cats within reach.

Boston College's first touchdown was scored on a one yard dive by Mike Mayock, a local product from Haverford School. Mayock's father, Michael Mayock Sr., was the Wildcat Football Captain back in 1954. Mayock played an excellent 60-minute game and was instrumental in the Wildcat defeat.

In the first half, the Eagles scored on four of their first six offensive possessions and their second touchdown capped a 9-play, 77 yard drive. Boston College held a 20-0 halftime lead.

A disappointed Coach Bedesem said, "We're down 20-0 but we're still in good shape. If we could get a break on the opening kickoff and get a quick score, we could change things around and make them think."

The script was written when on the second half kickoff, Boston College fumbled the ball and sophomore Bill Conners recovered the ball for Villanova on the Eagle 29 yard line. The Cats moved eagerly toward the Eagle goal line when adversity struck again. On first and goal on the Eagle 7 yard line, Pat O'Brien's pass to tight end Paul Columbia fell incomplete in the end zone. Second down and goal to go, Quarterback O'Brien optioned right and kept the ball as he stretched for extra yardage, he was hit by an Eagle defender and the ball popped loose as he hit the artificial turf. Boston College recovered the ball and the game's momentum.

"I honestly felt that if we had scored on that break we could have swung the momentum over in our favor," head Coach Dick Bedesem said after the game. "It would have been 20-7 with a whole half to go and the momentum behind us. Overall, Boston College is not a better football team, they just played better than we did — turnovers just broke our backs."

As the Wildcat defense tired in the second half, the Eagle offense was able to move the ball downfield with ease. Boston College mounted two scoring drives; the first drive covered 82 yards in 10 plays and the second score resulted from a 3-play, 71 yard drive. Boston College's freshman tailback Shelby Gamble rushed for 157 yards on 19 attempts.

The Wildcats' lone touchdown of the night came in the fourth quarter on a 10 play, 82 yard drive. Quarterback Pat O'Brien passed five yards to captain Paul Columbia for the score, and Chuck Bushbeck's extra point attempt was good.

The spirited Wildcat defense was led by sophomore linebacker Tom Fitzgerald, junior defensive back David Martin and captain Bernie Hober. Fitzpatrick finished the night with 14 tackles and 1 interception. Martin, alias "Dr. Death" had 9 tackles and also broke up several deep Boston College passing threats. Bernie Hober had 11 tackles and also grabbed an interception.

This week the Cats travel to Cincinnati (0-2) to take on the tough and talented Bearcats in their first home game. The Wildcat defense will be tested tomorrow by the strong Bearcat offense which is led by sophomore Allen Harvin, last year's leading freshman rusher in the nation (1283 yards). Both teams are coming off tough losses and both will be hungry for the win.

"Personnel-wise, Cincinnati is as good as we've faced or will face this season," states Bedesem. "They have excellent skilled people and on film they come at you strong and quick. We know we didn't play well last week, and we're ready to go tomorrow — we're looking for the win."

The Cat's Defense was one of the only bright spots in last Saturday's 34-7 loss to Boston College.

Welcome Home Willie

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

He has been called "A Burner" by Coach Bedesem. And has gained high reviews in numerous sports articles as a legitimate long ball threat. With these descriptions, one would normally think we are talking about someone from Penn State or Notre Dame. But as the record shows, the fleet-of-foot ballplayer being described is Willie Sydnor, split end on the football team.

Being highly recruited right out of "Wildcat Country," Radnor High School, Willie chose a Big 10 school, Northwestern. "I thought a big school would be good for football and it would look good to get a degree from a well-known school," explained Sydnor. But according to Willie, "It was nice but it wasn't home." "My parents got to see me play only once, against Ohio State. At least at Nova, they can see me play every game, home and away," Willie noted.

Pre-season predictions are an annual occurrence for football. This year, in the well-known sports magazine, Playboy, there was a category listing the "Top Newcomers and Players to Watch for the Upcoming Season." Of course, there were those from U.C.L.A. and the big name schools, but next to number one was Willie Sydnor, Villanova. "I was totally shocked. A friend told me about it or I would've never believed it," Sydnor modestly explained. "It made me want to try my best but that's something hard to live up to."

So far, Willie has lived up to everything predicted of him. But with all the press he has been receiving, one would think there's added pressure on him. "I think there's only a little pressure, I just go out and play. Last week, though, the team wasn't playing well and I started to get mad at myself. I don't normally do that, I want to play well for the team."

Although the Cats have a 1-2 record so far, the Radnor-ite feels the season has the talent to be good. "The ball club is very close and has a lot of spirit. I think our only problem is that sometimes..." Currently one of the top wide receivers in the country and Villanova has had some great receivers in its history. "I remember watching Mike Siani play (who holds most of Villanova receiving records)," Willie said. "But I start thinking of his records and I mess up my playing. I play for the team, not for myself."

When talking with Willie, the one word which best describes him is sincere. This trait can best be seen with Willie's outlook on football, "People take football too seriously. There are more things in life than the intense competition." And according to the Wildcat's land jet, "I play football to have fun."

But on Saturday afternoons, I'm sure those defensive backs, who have to cover Willie, aren't having any fun when he starts to shift his gears to high speed and breaks into the open for a pass.

Intramural Cross Country

By RAY ENGLER

An intramural cross-country race was held last Wednesday afternoon on a course covering approximately three miles. Several freshmen varsity prospects participated, as well as members of the Wildcat Running Club, an unaffiliated unit of runners who want to get involved in track but aren't of the calibre of the varsity team. The club, organized by Gary Tomchuk, helped swell the ranks of this year's race to a surprising 23 contestants.

The pace was strong and an unprecedented four-way tie for first was the result. Those first finishers, Freshmen Terry Delaney, Mike Henneberry, John Horan and Mark Schroder, ran a respectable (and unofficial intramural meet record) time of 16:34:0.

The Varsity cross-country team opens its season tomorrow in the Eastern Athletic Association Meet at Belmont Plateau. The race starts at 10:30 a.m.

Soccer

Villanova soccer evened its record Wednesday at 2-2 with a 6-0 shellacking of Stockton State.

The win was highlighted by a furious attack on goal by the Cat booters, resulting in tallies by six separate players. Leading the attack were Ramon Garcia (leading scorer) and Camilo Guitierres. Other scorers included Dave McHugh, Brian Barr, John Warakasa, and junior ace Jeff Antoon.

The victory has given the team the proper mental attitude that should carry them over U. Penn this Saturday at 2:00. Villanova Soccer has made impressive gains in the past weeks, and if this win is any indication of what the team is made of, the Quakers could be in for a surprise.

Girl Injured in Train Mishap

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

A freshman coed was injured critically when she attempted to cross the Paoli Local railroad tracks at the Villanova station Monday morning.

Dorothy Zimmerman, 19, of Ridley Park, was taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital with head and internal injuries after she was either struck by an express train, or thrown off-balance because of the wind suction it created. The incident occurred at approximately 11:50 a.m.

Zimmerman was in critical condition at Bryn Mawr after several hours in the operating room under the care of neurosurgeons, said a hospital spokesman.

Four witnesses gave statements to Radnor police, among them, two junior St. Mary's Hall residents, Tim Murray and Albert Procassini.

When the incident occurred, Procassini was about to cross the tracks because rain water had covered the bottom of the tunnel walkway underneath the tracks.

Murray said, "My friend (Procassini) and I were trying to get through the tunnel. I ran through it and found out how deep it was — about six inches. Al decided to cross the tracks instead. I got through (the tunnel) first and was up on the platform looking toward him."

Procassini said the incident occurred where the fence that runs down the center of the tracks ends, underneath the Rte. 320 bridge.

Zimmerman was crossing from the St. Mary's side to the main campus side of the tracks, he said.

"I was standing directly across from her on the main campus side of the tracks," he said. "The Villanova local was coming under the bridge from Paoli on the outside track, so I couldn't see her. She was in the center of the tracks, and I imagine she was looking at the train from Paoli, while an express on the inside track from Philadelphia apparently hit her."

Murray said, "She was halfway across, waiting for the local to go by. I saw she was very close to the tracks and then, after the train had passed, I saw her down. She was boxed. No one could see her because of the two trains. I ran to her and so did Al."

"She probably crossed the tracks because the tunnel was filled with water," said Procassini. "Tim had run through the tunnel, and saw the water was pretty deep, so I decided to go up and around. Not many girls usually

Medical Values of the Future Questioned

By EILEEN CUNNIFFE

"Death is becoming a therapy . . . and we pretend to know that death is a good solution."

According to Dr. George Isajiw, M.D., the above statement is just one example of the attitudes prevalent among many members of our modern medical profession. Dr. Isajiw, a member of the staff of the Fitzgerald Mercy Hospital in Upper Darby, spoke to a group of over sixty students and faculty members on Thursday, September 27, in the West Lounge.

The presentation was sponsored by the Villanovans For Life, in conjunction with a committee consisting of several faculty members, recently formed in support of the VFL under the leadership of Dean Alvin Clay and Dr. John Touhinson.

Dr. Isajiw's topic, "Medicine in the 1980's: Pro- or Anti-Life?" addressed itself to the physician's obligations to society as well as to his patients. He began by stating that the very existence of a pro-life movement within our culture indicates that all is not well — that former values and respect for human life may no longer be taken for granted, even among those who are professionally trained to care for and to save human lives.

Isajiw cited the influences of technology and utilitarianism, along with the effects of the on-going sexual revolution, as having contributed to the "degeneration of 'self-concepts' and 'upward life processes'" in our society.

He observed that many medical practices which are today considered to be routine were in recent years strictly regulated, if not prohibited, by medical standards as well as by state and federal laws.

Dr. Isajiw explained such trends in modern medicine as the result of processes of rationalization which have allowed scientists to overlook basic "biological truths" for matters of convenience and social control.

He noted the carelessness of attitudes which have allowed abortion to be considered as merely an alternate form of birth control; the dangers of pre-natal experimentation which aims at preventing birth defects at the cost of aborting all "defective" preborn children; and the injustice of permitting infanticide (a process by which unwanted and/or imperfect newborn children are allowed to die of undernourishment) to be redefined as "freedom of choice for parents."

Dr. Isajiw predicted that unless serious action is taken, such "anti-life" attitudes and practices will continue to spread in the 1980's. The medical profession will support "in vitro fertilization" (test-tube babies) not merely in cases where a woman has been unable to conceive a child, but as a major source of experimental "subjects"

His Holiness Pope John Paul II

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Pope John Paul II arrived in Philadelphia Wednesday afternoon to the welcoming cheers of over one-and-a-half million motorcade spectators and Papal Mass participants.

The Pope's airplane, a Boeing 727 dubbed "Shepherd One," touched down at Philadelphia International Airport at 3:06 p.m., more than one hour behind the scheduled 2:00 p.m. landing, to begin the 20-hour Philadelphia portion of his eight-day visit to Ireland and the United States.

Officially welcoming the Pontiff at the airport were Philadelphia Archbishop John Cardinal Krol, Philadelphia Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, and Pennsylvania Governor Richard Thornburg; responding to the greetings, John Paul proclaimed, "God bless Pennsylvania," and "Philadelphia means brotherly love."

After mingling with the crowd of schoolchildren at the airport, the Pope began his motorcade to Logan Circle in center-city Philadelphia; owing to the lateness of his arrival, the Pontiff's limousine proceeded up Broad St. at a speed of approximately 15 m.p.h., more than twice the speed anticipated by the thousands of spectators lining the route.

Awaiting the Pope at the conclusion of his motorcade was a mass of humanity, more than a million in number, which had begun forming on Logan Circle the previous evening. A good number of the pilgrims to the Papal Mass had traveled distances in excess of two-hundred miles, with some venturing to Philadelphia from such distant places as Hamilton, Canada.

The hours-long wait of the multitude at Logan Circle came to an end when the motorcade arrived at the Basilica of Saints Peter and Paul, across from the circle. Wild cheers burst forth as the Pontiff, clad in his white cassock, waved to the throng from the steps of the Basilica as he entered it to conduct a prayer service.

Finally, the long-awaited Mass got underway, with the Papal procession to the altar forming at 4:40 p.m. Row after row of onlookers stood on their chairs to snap photographs of the Holy Father as he made his way to the altar; countless photos had been wasted as the appearance outside the Basilica of anyone wearing white provoked mistaken cheering.

With the shadows already lengthening perceptively and a cool autumn breeze blowing through the circle, the Pope proceeded up the red-carpeted steps of the huge platform to the white marble altar. Reaching the final level of the platform, the Pontiff took time to acknowledge the huge throng surrounding him; thousands of waving hands returned the Pope's greeting, seemingly in a gesture of individual personal contact.

The mood of the celebration turned to reverence as John Paul commenced the Mass itself.

Speaking the words of the Mass in a rather accented but nevertheless distinct English, Pope John Paul approached the moment when he would address to the gathered celebrants his thoughts and beliefs as their spiritual leader.

In his homily the Pope pointed to the compatibility of American and Christian ideals and values in relation to the rights and dignity of every human being.

To American Christians he offered a challenge, "As citizens you must strive to preserve these (American) principles, to understand them . . . . As Christians you must strengthen them and combine them with the Gospel, which gives to them a deeper meaning."

On the subject of human freedom, the Pontiff reminded the gathering of the obligation freedom entails, calling it a "gift that enables self-giving and service."

Still focusing his words on the subject of freedom, John Paul stressed that there is no true freedom without "a knowledge and regard for the truth of human sexuality . . ." He expressed concern for laxity in Christian views and teachings of morality. "No teachings can be made outside of the true moral order," he said.

The Pope concluded his homily by urging all Christians to faithfully obey the moral values taught by Jesus; he specifically reminded the priests of their obligation to celibacy.

When the portion of the Mass arrived in which the Eucharist is distributed, an army of priests filed out into the vast ocean of humanity; meanwhile, a few chosen ones, including Villanova S.G.A. President P.J. Winterhalter, received holy communion from the Holy Father himself.

More than two hours after he began the Mass, Pope John Paul concluded it on a platform brightly illuminated in the midst of the darkness which had swept over Logan Circle.

Enveloped in cheers and the flashes of numerous cameras, John Paul motorcaded out of Logan Circle and up the Benjamin Franklin Parkway on his way to Cardinal Krol's residence.

Increase in Freshmen Creates Congestion

By JANE COYLE

Congested parking lots and pedestrian walkways are apparent indications of Villanova's increasing undergraduate enrollment, reflected by the Class of 83, the largest in the University's history.

According to Joseph P. Cunnane, head of security, the campus parking lots are a major source of congestion. He stated "This is due to diminish when students settle into their class schedules and become more familiar with other available parking facilities."

Cunnane stated, "Approximately 1800 parking stickers have been issued to eligible students and there are over 200 other available spaces." The problem he said is that there is plenty of space, but it may not be exactly what students consider convenient.

He further stated, "In this day of physical fitness, students should be prepared to make a small sacrifice by walking a little bit."

On campus parking is available to all commuters and junior and senior residents. However, junior residents of St. Mary's complain that after paying for a $25 parking sticker, they are unable to park in that lot.

Since St. Mary's functions as a dormitory and classroom facility, said Cunnane, parking spaces must be allotted to faculty. Only students of senior standing may park in St. Mary's, and all others must park in the main lot, which many consider a great inconvenience.

Cunnane stated, "There is nothing that Security can do. We regret having to tow, but it's the only remedy to unauthorized parking."

To alleviate some of the parking congestion, Cunnane suggests, "Students should not park in faculty spaces. Authorized vehicles should park in proper spaces and all other ineligible students should take their cars home.

Cunnane stated that increased enrollment has resulted in a heavier pedestrian flow in and around Dougherty, complicated by the unfinished Connelly Center walkways.

The hallway running the length of Dougherty becomes extremely congested during lunch, when classes are changing and students are waiting to get into the resident cafeteria.

Cunnane stated, "The completion of the plaza walkways will eliminate some of the congested walkways."

Presently, security is operating with a 45 member full-time staff. Cunnane stated that his staff is adequate, and they are always looking for qualified people. Twenty additional students have been added to operate and patrol in vans, work in the dorms and make emergency trips to the hospitals.

On-campus parking is just one of the many University services which has been burdened by the increase in freshmen this year.

English Prof Struck by Car

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Dr. Joseph Kinney, associate professor of English, was struck by an automobile near his home at Broad and Jackson Streets in South Philadelphia sometime Monday, October 1.

Kinney sustained a broken hip and pelvic bone, and a concussion. He was also reported to have suffered internal bleeding.

Kinney was taken off the critical list at Methodist Hospital and placed in intensive care. His condition as of yesterday afternoon was listed as "serious."

English department colleagues report that Kinney was struck by an "automobile that made a turn a bit too expeditiously" while he was attempting to cross the street.

Kinney, who teaches freshman English, Survey of British literature, and Shakespeare courses, is not expected to return to teaching this semester, a family member disclosed cross the tracks."

Murray said he wanted to go to the hospital to see Zimmerman, "because I held her."

Joseph Harvey, spokesman for the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA), said that the tunnel and railroad are Amtrak property.

He said that the crew of the express train which caused Zimerman's injury did see a woman on the one side of the tracks. No member of the crew believes the train hit her, he said.

Harvey said that trains on the inside tracks can reach speeds of up to 60 miles per hour.

Train No. 413, an express shop train from Suburban Station in Philadelphia to Paoli, was inspected in Paoli by Radnor police. Although fresh paint had been found scraped from the left front section, no physical evidence of the accident was found on the train.

Lois Morosco, spokeswoman for Amtrak, said that the drainage system in the railroad underpass at Villanova was renovated one and a half years ago. "It functions properly, and has been functioning properly until Monday," she said.

She claimed the reason the tunnel was flooded Monday was that debris accumulated on top of a catch basin in the parking lot adjacent to the railroad. "Debris accumulated on top of the catch basin, so water could not get in. The water ran off the surface and drained off into the underpass," she said.

"I would assume when we drained out the water Monday, that the debris in the parking lot, the source of the stoppage, was also cleared," said Morosco.

The parking lot is owned by Amtrak, but leased to Auto Park, Inc., in Devon. "We are not responsible for it," said Morosco.

William Dool, general manager of Auto Park, said, "Our drain is an open top drain, and it wouldn't fill with debris.

"But it probably wouldn't take that much water in a heavy rain anyway," he said.

Dool said that there are two catch drains in the parking lot.

Joe Pagliaro, office manager of Villanova maintenance, said about the walkway tunnel, "It's a mess down there, it's always flooded and dirty. Every time you get a heavy rain, it's usually flooded. I know the Villanova students have protested so many times about it, but nothing was ever done."

Pagliaro said maintenance of the tunnel is Amtrak's responsibility.

Father John Deegan, vice president for Student Life, said that Villanova maintenance helped pump out the tunnel "about a year and a half ago, when Amtrak couldn't get out there in 24 hours."

Deegan said, "The situation should be rectified." He suggested "some better kind of drainage system."

"Prior to any incident, we set up a meeting with PennDOT and state Representative John Alden, and the area commissioners," said Deegan.

"Coming back and forth across Rte. 320 is dangerous. We're trying to look at some alternatives," he said.

The meeting with PennDOT, Alden, Jack Cleek, Radnor fourth ward commissioner, student body president P.J. Winterhalter, will be held Thursday, Oct. 11, at 10:00 a.m.

"The problem is complicated," said Deegan, "because the road is a state road, and the tunnel is owned by the railroad. None of it is our property."

Between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. Monday, the day of the Zimmerman accident, 12 people crossed the railroad tracks.

Eleven of them crossed the tracks where the mid-track fence ends toward the tennis courts. One said he was a student who had parked in the law school parking lot, and it was easier for him to get to his car by crossing the tracks.

Hugh McNally and Donald Liddy crossed the tracks at about 4:30 p.m. "because it's kind of hard to swim through the tunnel," said McNally.

"I would rather risk the railroad tracks than the cars on 320," he said.

Liddy said, "You can't cross the bridge (over the railroad tracks) on Rte. 320. It's too dangerous. I know a few kids who almost got hit, and I almost got hit a couple of times." Liddy suggested that "a bridge be built over the tracks" or that the walkway on the Rte. 320 bridge be widened.

And Urgent

The Situation Is Dangerous

As news of the tragic accident involving freshman, Dorothy Zimmerman, at the Villanova railroad station spread Monday, we began to hear a resurgence of the oft-repeated complaints concerning conditions in the pedestrian tunnel underneath the tracks. Stories of individuals' own experiences with potentially dangerous situations at the station, and at the overpass on Route 320 near the station, usually accompanied the complaints.

While researching the story, we asked, "Who is responsible for proper maintenance of the tunnel?" Now, however, we wonder how important the answer is. Problems with the tunnel, its frequent flooding and blockage, are not new. Students have grown accustomed to crossing the tracks, or opted for the other alternative of crossing the bridge on 320, when the tunnel is impassable.

On Monday morning, witnesses said, the side of the tunnel closest to St. Mary's had about six inches of water on the floor. Later that afternoon, they said, the entire length of the tunnel was flooded.

It appears that Amtrak is responsible for maintenance of the tunnel. But the accident has happened.

We may not know why Dorothy crossed the tracks Monday morning. It may have been because the tunnel was flooded, but we do not know for sure. The incident, however, draws attention to the conditions pedestrians must face.

Last Friday, a student from St. Mary's was struck by a car crossing Route 320 in front of the hall, and was treated and released at Bryn Mawr Hospital. There is not even a pedestrian walkway painted on the road in front of St. Mary's.

One week earlier, the Villanova Senate received word from Father Driscoll that a resolution petitioning for a safe means of crossing Spring Mill Road (Route 320) had been considered by the Board of Trustees. The proper government agencies would be appealed to, the president said.

Before these incidents occurred, the Rev. John E. Deegan, vice president for student life, and P.J. Winterhalter, student body president, had requested a meeting with Rep. John Alden and an official from the Department of Transportation to discuss conditions on Spring Mill Road. They are scheduled to meet on Thursday.

The need for improvement is urgent. A dangerous situation now exists, and we pray that no one else will have to suffer before action is taken.

Pope Visits Philadelphia

A Cause For Celebration

After weeks of preparation, days of argumentation, and hours of anticipation, Pope John Paul II, the embodiment of Catholic history and morality, the leader of some 48 million American Faithful, arrived in Philadelphia for his pastoral mission with all the pomp and circumstance befitting such a dignitary.

Years of schism seemingly well in the past, the multitude gathered on Logan Circle with a symbolic unity often misplaced in the secular realm. But does this unity truly symbolize the state of Catholicism in the world today? Or is it a representation of false hope? Are the assembled a practicing faithful? Will the Church's teaching on birth control, abortion and religious celibacy, that the Pontiff so vehemently proclaims, be lost in the throng of conflicting secular values? Will this visit spur the Church on with a renewed vigor for its proclamations?

The bastion of Catholic faith arrived, perhaps, to reassure his flock that there is hope, a legitimate cause to celebrate. Aware of the confusion that faces his people in a world of war, poverty, corruption and injustice, the Pontiff reestablished his presence and position in the minds of those who are bewildered.

He offered direction of value not only to Catholics who have lost their way, but to all men who share in a humanity that unites all races, colors and creeds: "Follow me" in a life of love, piety, sacrifice and peace.

Thus we have been challenged to utilize this direction, to return his display of Christian concern and faith in man. We are aware of dissent, consent and neutrality. Now we must make or reaffirm our choice. And when we arrive at the choice with which we are satisfied, there is cause for true celebration and hope; for we will then have achieved a faith that is a necessity in all religious faiths — faith in ourselves.

Volkswagen Stuffing Revived

By VICKY PARENTE

The Villanova Union's University Services Committee staged a scene out of the 1950's last Tuesday when they held a Volkswagen stuffing contest on Kennedy Mall. The contest was run by Services members Bernie Emery and Rich Hadfield under the direction of Jeanie Connolly, Services coordinator. Emery told the Villanovan, "We thought that the Volkswagen stuffing idea was a great way to bring back the old college spirit and good old fashioned fun. Besides, the job of University Services is to get the students involved and this is the best way we could think of to make this happen."

A large crowd gathered around the yellow VW, and TV 10 was there to film the action as four teams sponsored by various campus organizations vied for the cash prize. Competitors were also hoping to break the present record of 21 people in a Volkswagen listed in the Guiness Book of World Records.

WKVU Radio made up the first team which tried to cram its members into the little yellow car while spectators cheered them on.

A highlight of the contest occurred after the twelfth WKVU contestant had climbed into the car and the rear window popped out, causing the crowd to go wild. Finally, after much grunting and shoving, WKVU managed to fit 16 people into the VW. Close guys — but no cigar. Team members came busting out of the car red-faced and breathing hard, but laughing in between deep breaths. They actually looked like they had a good time. Don't ever let anybody try to tell you that college kids aren't crazy.

Commenting on conditions inside the Volkswagen, WKVU team member Joe Jasek said, "It was quite hot, and it got to the point where you were so uncomfortable that you didn't feel the pain anymore; you just became numb. Nonetheless it was a lot of fun, this is something from the 50's that should be revived."

Next up was the Union's Operations team. These folks approached the problem in a novel way by climbing through the hole where the car's rear window used to be as well as through the doors. Groaning and pushing and bending fellow teammates into pretzels, Operations finally succeeded in squeezing 17 people into the little yellow Volks. The view from outside was inspiring as spectators were treated to the sight of noses smashed up against windows and people eating the foot of the person next to them. It was noted while watching the Operations team that people got out of that car a lot faster than they got in. People spilled out from all sides in their quest for air to breathe and renewed circulation to bodily extremities.

The St. Mary's RSA team stepped forward with confidence. Before the contest began team members Harry Moulopoulos and Steve Topazio assured this reporter that they had a strategy which would win them the contest — their idea was to open the hood of the car and stuff people in there. However their plans were foiled when the judges stated that it was against the rules for people to get under the hood.

The final team to participate was a group of Austin residents. Actually they were only half a team to begin with but they began to recruit bodies from the crowd

Spring Break Francais

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Spring Break 1980-it sounds like a distant melody ringing in your tired first semester ears, but already trips are being planned to carry you closer to 10 days of pleasure, relaxation, and experience. A trip to France sponsored jointly by the French and History departments, for three credits, is one such trip.

As part of the coursework for both History 5010-01 and French 2130-01, under the joint supervision of Dr. Raymond Cummings, professor of History and Mr. Rene Mongeau, assistant professor of Modern Languages, this mid-semester excursion will examine various aspects of French history and culture as seen through Paris and the Loire Valley chateaux region, beginning February 28 and ending March 9. Nine classes will be held before the trip, one after the trip culminating in the writing of a paper.

While Cummings introduces the students to various periods of French history from the medieval to modern era Mongeau will provide the language and cultural backgrounds of these periods. Places such as Notre Dame, Versailles, and Sacre Coeur will suddenly come alive through this unusual field trip.

Both Cummings and Mongeau emphasize the need for students to be open to these trips of experiences. "What we'll be seeing will provide a background and historical context for the classroom experience," explains Cummings. Mongeau adds that the trip is "basically educational not just touring."

Upon arrival on February 29, the group will spend six days touring "la ville luminere" with time allotted for personal jaunts into the life of Paris through its shops, cafes, and theatres. Three days in the Loire Valley are planned with the group residing in a chateaux near Tours.

The $729.00/per person approximate cost includes air fare via Air France from New York, but doesn't include lunch and dinner expenses in Paris. Arrangements are being made through the Franco-American Committee for Educational Travel and Services.

If your interest has been stimulated both Cummings and Mongeau welcome all questions concerning this unique Spring Break.

Nurses Unite In Forum

By BOB COUREY

The Undergraduate Nursing Forum, a newly developed system founded to deal with the rapidly changing Nursing program, is now awaiting official recognition from the University.

Formed last spring, the University Forum replaces a previous program which existed in the College of Nursing. In the former system two class representatives met with advisors. The newly proposed Forum expands its range and sharpens its focus to bring in all concerned groups and input:

"The purpose of the Undergraduate Nursing Forum is to facilitate communication between students, faculty and administration. It will also get nursing students more involved in the program and help keep the college unified," stated Mary Gucciardi, who is one of the founders of the organization.

The Undergraduate Nursing Forum is made up of four main branches. There is an executive council and three committees. The three committees, events, academic and organizational, are each headed by a senior chairperson. These committees are overseen by the executive council, which is made up of a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer.

The function of the events committee is to organize major events and to promote interaction between student, faculty and administration.

The purpose of the academic committee is to be the communication key between the students, faculty and administration. It will also organize things such as lectures, etc.

The organizational committee is responsible for public relations. It enables students to know what is happening via the newspaper and other means.

The executive council is the administrative body of the organization, and will act as an intermediary between students and administration.

Mary Gucciardi and Joyce Piroli are the co-presidents of the executive council. As of now, no one has been elected to the positions of secretary and treasurer. Karen Schrayshurer, Judy Conarty and Patty Branca are the chairpeople of the committees. "I'm really impressed by the work of our chairpeople. It took a lot of

The following life-saving facts are presented by the Villanova Consumer Protection Council from the U.S. Department of Transportation.

New Academic Advisement

By LARRY WOEHRLE

A new Academic Advisement Program for Arts and Science students will be instituted this semester under the supervision of the Vice-President of Student Life and the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

This year's service will have several objectives. While the general purpose of the Program is to provide academic advisement to new students and those with undeclared majors, participants will also be aided in planning coherent programs of study and formulating at least some tentative academic and career goals.

Rev. Frank A. Farsaci O.S.A. and Rev. John Stack, O.S.A. will be working closely with Rev. John P. O'Malley and Rev. John Betoni throughout this year's program. Fr. Farsaci has been involved in counseling as a Guidance Director, College Chaplain, and high school teacher for the past 15 years. Fr. Stack, who has just arrived from Bonner High School, has been involved as Senior Studies Advisor, CLEP Coordinator and Advanced Placement Coordinator.

Fr. Farsaci can be reached at ext. 522 or 759, or in his office at St. Rita's Hall 114. Fr. Stack is in Corr Hall and can be reached at ext. 430.

Nurses

work on their part over the summer to put this organization together," commented Gucciardi.

The Forum will meet on a monthly basis, but the individual committees will meet as needed. New members to the Forum can work on any committee that they are interested in.

The Undergraduate Nursing Forum is planning many activities this year. It plans to publish its own newspaper and organizes events such as the Freshman Welcome, the Nursing-Engineering Dinner Dance, and Nursing Career Day. It is also drafting its constitution.

"The profession of nursing is changing. Our program at V.U. is expanding to meet those needs. The Undergraduate Nursing Forum hopes to work as the unified voice of our student body in identifying the students' needs and actively participating in the decision-making process of the College of Nursing. We also plan to initiate social events, be politically active in the nursing profession and generally help Villanova nursing to be further recognized on campus and in the community," concluded Co-President Mary Gucciardi.

VW Stuffing

and their persistence paid off as they tied Operations for first place by piling 17 contestants into the VW. Austin had gotten 18 people in the car, but feet were found dangling out the window and so the judges ruled that it didn't count. Ecstatic Austin team members vowed to have a keg that night to celebrate. Operation members claimed that they owed their victory to "clean living." When asked what inspired them to enter the contest they chorused in unison, "Money!"

After the official contest was over, in the words of Rich Hadfield, "a lot of small people played big roles in getting 22 people into the Volkswagen and thereby breaking the Guiness world record." The record breaking feat will be reported to the Guiness people by Emery and Hadfield and hopefully these Villanova students will fulfill Andy Warhol's prophecy that everybody is famous for at least ten minutes by getting their accomplishment recorded in the Guiness book.

As a final comment on the spectacle Hadfield stated wryly, "I think a lot of people became closer friends today." For all you masochists that enjoyed participating in the contest and all you sadists who loved watching it — good news! The infamous team of Emery and Hadfield are hoping to mastermind a phone booth stuffing contest in the near future.

who will be created only to be destroyed. He indicated that teams of medical scientists are already preparing to begin tests with cloning and other "human experimentation" as soon as federal permission is granted.

Dr. Isajiw did not attempt to defend those of his medical colleagues who support "anti-life" medicine; rather, he wished to alert those who attended the lecture of Villanova to some of the dangers of modern medicine and to the society's responsibility to put an end to much of the experimentation and "progress" which threaten respect for all human life.

He concluded by saying that pro-lifers should not be intimidated by accusations of "trying to impose their own views upon society." Rather, he emphasized the obligations of pro-lifers to educate others and to defend the "biological truths" of life — before the philosophical and sociological truths are irreparably damaged.

Soccer Setback

By DAVE DEAR

After a long week of tough drills and hard practice, the Villanova Booters expected to be invincible. The Penn Quakers spoiled that illusion by slipping shots through and past the Cat defense for a 3-0 victory last Saturday.

The week's preparation seemed to be paying off early in the game. The Cats managed to control the play of the first half and took several good shots on the Quaker goalie. However, each try was blocked by sensational saves. The offense seemed to be clicking as it never had before, but the crisp passing and sure ball-handling couldn't produce the needed tallies.

It was only on a few separate occasions that the Cats defense let up and it was those seconds that Penn took advantage of.

Unfortunate field conditions took their toll on goalie Pete Jirak. The opponent's shots refused to stay on their predicted flight paths and bounced by. Luck, to say the least was with the Quakers that day.

Villanova outshot Penn by a 12-7 margin, and played a more aggressive and physical game. Too bad stats aren't always reflected in the score. Outplaying the Quaker team seems to have been consolation enough and is clearly evident in the new attitude of the squad.

Revenge against their next opponent would have been sweet. But the Temple Owls refused to play on a field in such poor condition, after a week's rain. Thus postponed the Villanova hopes till some other date.

The Cats will get to show their stuff next Wednesday at St. Joe's (3:00). This game is crucial if the Cats are going to try to salvage the remainder of the season. Following the St. Joe's match is the old rivalry against Georgetown away. Victories from these two outings could mean a chance at a winning season, something Villanova soccer has lacked for years.

Women's Sports Shorts

Soccer

The women's soccer team hopes to turn their luck around against Rutgers on Wednesday after a disappointing week suffering a pair of losses, bringing their record to 1-2.

Needing a more determined scoring attack, the Wildcats fell 1-0 in an even battle with Franklin and Marshall in their home opener on Wednesday. Things got worse when they traveled to Penn State on Saturday where field conditions and some unfortunate penalties got the best of the frustrated Villanova squad, as the seasoned Lady Lions took the contest 5-1. Senior Donna Lohr registered the only score, as she showed full recovery from a recent foot injury.

Back on the road against Princeton on Saturday, Coach Lee Stevens looks for more punch in the Wildcat shooting to get back on the winning track.

Cross Country

In what would have been a first place finish for All-American Brigid Leddy, an unfortunate disqualification spoiled a tremendous effort in the Trenton Invitational on Saturday. Leading the pack seventy yards from the finish, Leddy strayed slightly from the 5000 meter course which nullified a personal best time of 17:58.

Without the points from Leddy's first, the Wildcats settled for a respectable fourth place on the strength of Sue Shea's eighth place finish in 18:48, Amelia Cain 19:43 for 20th, and freshman Daria Varaitis in at 19:47 for 27th out of a field of over 200 of the east's finest runners.

Coach Jim Thompson expects Leddy and the team as a whole to "place in the top three against eastern powers Maryland and Penn State" in the Rutgers Invitational this Saturday.

Nothing Strange About

THE CARETAKER

By DR. WOOD

I think it was Pascal (an initiator of that line of philosophical development culminating in the existentialist thought to which the plays of Ionesco, Beckett, and, to a lesser degree, Harold Pinter may be usefully related) who said that the world can provide a secure and comforting refuge to man if only he would remain quiet in his room. In the almost uniformly excellent production which inaugurates the season at Vasey Theatre, we see men desirous of accomplishing exactly that — or, as in the case of the tramp, trying to secure a foothold in that foul rag-and-bone shop so effectively designed for this production by the director himself.

While the threat which comes to this unfortunately false sense of security may derive from an overt source (such as the odd couple of brutally effective agents from the world of organized crime who interrupt The Birthday Party), in The Caretaker, ironically (and somewhat poignantly, for the menaced and threatening tramp does not fail to engage much of our sympathy, especially as portrayed in all of his inglorious humanity by James Schlatter), it comes hobbling in on the smelly feet of a disenfranchised traveller through a disjointed universe who wants the very same thing the pair of brothers bonded largely by their insecurities want. Fear? Of what? Menace? By whom?

It is in large part the deceptive realism of a Pinter play which distracts us from a thematic understructure (and theme ought not to rise to the surface in a good play) never far removed from those existentialist premises which inform the work of the present writer's more renowned and perplexing contemporary Samuel Beckett.

Indeed, while Pinter has been criticized for failing to elevate his themes to the loftier levels of Beckett's by plunging his characters into those most dramatically revealing depths of despair to which Didi and Gogo are consigned (resigned?) in Waiting for Godot, it is in large part the very success of The Caretaker on a realistic level that encourages a substantial part of this detraction.

Further, Pinter himself seems dedicated to fending off those in pursuit of more elusive meanings (as maddeningly adept at times as his wary tramp.): "I don't see that there's anything strange about The Caretaker," he insists, "and I can't understand why so many people regard it the way they do. It seems to me a very simple and straight forward play." Of course Pinter is right to resist, as Robert Frost did, our demand for facile interpretation, a this-equals-that kind of understanding which is no real understanding at all, certainly not the imaginative understanding of what this play is all about at the point where laughter (and Schlatter deftly elicits much of it from the audience) stops. We must not insist on neat allegorization, since it is of the essence of Pinter's understated nightmares that their concretized metaphors be left ambivalent, ambiguous, significant on various levels.

For what, ultimately, is being conveyed is a complex existential condition, conveyed through the simplified emotions (showing as much in the silences between speech as in the words themselves) of simple people like not only Davies but even the seemingly self-assured and very capable Mick, people who find themselves in a condition beyond their making, their controlling, their understanding.

Each in his insecurity wants, like Davies, to know what's done with the bucket when it is full; what's in the paint can; who lives next door. Each tries to keep reality at bay: the tramp by refusing to recover some documents down in Siddcup which tell who he really is; Aston, who had once reached out to others but had been prodded (by electro-shock therapy) into keeping to himself; Mick by hiding behind a rapid-fire barrage (not always as rapid as it might be in the present instance) of esoterica about parchment squares and solicitor's deeds. As Pinter uses the language to fend off the writer's adversaries, these inmates of a disconnected universe (where the ostensibly significant is smashed into a thousand pieces of unrecognizability while a seemingly meaningless shell of an old toaster is clung to ever more tightly) hide behind language, cover themselves with it in order to protect their vulnerabilty, their essential nakedness.

On Sunday, October 7, the Cultural Arts Committee of the Villanova Union will sponsor the national touring company of the Broadway hit musical play Chicago at 8 p.m. in the Villanova Fieldhouse. The musical, written and directed on Broadway by Bob Fosse won critical acclaim when it opened on Broadway in 1975. Clive Barnes of the New York Times said, "Style is everywhere. Indeed, the show seems to be stuffed with virtue." Douglas Watt of the New York Daily News commented; "The whole thing moves like a well-oiled machine." Disco On Campus

By JEAN SALVATORE

Disco is a type of music, a form of dance and a way of life. People associate it with such contrastive things as polyester suits, John Travolta, an overdose of gaudy glitter, dancing, Donna Summer and a good time. Disco is an emotionally fun topic that induces controversy into almost any conversation, so several Villanova students were interviewed to get their feelings on this subject.

Eileen McCaffrey Junior Psychology Major
I don't like to sit and listen to it. It is too repetitive, but it is alright for dancing and parties. I prefer mellow rock like Jackson Brown.

Anne McDonnell Freshman Liberal Arts
I love it. I think it is excellent. It has a great beat for dancing. I do not go for all the glitter, but I love to get dressed up. I am not into the grungy bar scene and would rather dance than just sit and drink.

Mary Faith Coath Senior Civil Engineer
Disco has produced some good music, but people have taken the Disco culture too far. They come off ridiculous. Personally, I prefer country and western music.

Keith Brown Senior Math Major
Disco does not appeal to me, like other people, because I've been born from above. Disco does nothing for my spiritual being. I prefer Gospel.

Jim Sweeney Junior History Major
I like to dance and get dressed up and in that way Disco serves a purpose that Rock does not. However, the Disco scene is like a gauntlet of lust and tends to digress into a mere meat market.

David Bowie

New In Sound

By Chris Siawecki

In order that I am not misunderstood, I should first mention my inability to make an authentically objective remark about any post-Heroes Bowie endeavor. Heroes was, to my rock and roll dependant psyche, the apex of philosophical and musical expression of intellectual depth, hardly every approached by contemporary artists. It was savagely ironic and made one hell of a lot of frighteningly bitter sense. All recorded in Black and White, the colors of your basic Thin White Duke.

In David Bowie's case, it is futile to compare one stage in his musical development with another. Change has always been the nature of the artist. And out of us all, Bowie is the lodger indeed: We are all lodgers in transient situations such as the glitter-queen (68-74) and soulful — bluesman (74-76) Bowie.

There is a photograph of the expired Jesus of Nazareth on the inner sleeve of the Lodger album jacket; it comes from Milan, as the border of the picture informs us. Could any other musician raise a point of such moral and aesthetic intensity, make it part of something as seemingly mudane as a record album, and yet retain the Socratic genius of recognizing how truly little one man can know? "I'm still getting educated but I've got to write it down" — from the album's first cut, Fantastic Voyage. You need not wait for an answer.

There is a continuity to Lodger, much like that to Aladdin Sane, that refuses to release the needle arm should you desire to skip over a track. The one possible exception is "African Night Flight," presumably penned around Bowie's photographic safari to the dark continent in 1978. This cut is interesting enough, due to its devolved beginning — The sound of things falling apart — as Devo and Eno created on the first Devo album. It has been used in a remarkably effective context: The strange music and even stranger free-associated lyrics ("African nightmare one time Mormon/ More men fall in Hullabaloo men) enhance the sense of mystery and dark obscurity of Africa.

The grand production of this album conveys the sense of cosmic happiness found on such cuts as "Drive-In Saturday" and "Sound and Vision," but what else should be expected? Bowie's been in the business too long to make very many production mistakes.

I guess that's what it comes down to — Bowie's been doing it for around ten years now, and if his enthusiasm for out-and-out rock and roll has been dampened, it was to be expected. Make no mistake Lodger gets nasty when the situation arises ("Red Sails"). For the most part, the music seems secondary to the story lines, which are relatively clear compared with the free-association on Low and Station to Station. He still strikes me as being an extremely visual artist, and I'm waiting for his recent excursions into films anxiously.

Listening to "Move On," I can feel the Lawrence of Arabia-type setting hinted at in "The Secret Life of Arabia." Bowie knifes off into the sunset. As he whistles a tune, the notes fall like flowers under the hooves of his white horse, but rather than becoming crushed between hoof and sand they form puddles of crystal wine. Long before he turns back toward us to mysteriously smile, we realize that this is a man who has been there and back so many times that reality is just another hole in the wall. Lodger is a piece of the wall for us all.

Harry Chapin

By DIANE CLERY

Harry Chapin gave Villanova a rare experience when he appeared in our fieldhouse during the first week of school. Much of the music he performed then can be heard on his newly released double album — Legends of the Lost and Found.

The album features ten new Chapin story songs plus live performances of six Chapin classics, including "Mail Order Annie," "Tangled Up Puppet," and "Poor Damned Fool." Being a live album, Legends of the Lost and Found captures the emotions that are generated in a concert situation.

Living up to his reputation as a storyteller, Chapin's songs have a down-to-earth character about them. More important than the music, the lyrics make Chapin the excellent poet he is. One of the best aspects of Chapin's songs is that the lyrics hold a message, not only for the present, but for all time, With "Flowers Are Red," Chapin makes a stab at the educational system and its stifling of the creativity of children. "Pretzel Man" shows the humility of the ordinary working man.

Other songs on the album that he performed at Villanova are "We Were Three," "Old Folkie," "You Are the Only Song," and the title song "Legends of The Lost and Found." My favorite song on the album was one he also performed at Villanova — "Mail Order Annie," It is a sweet song about what it must have been like when a mail order wife met her husband-to-be for the first time.

The lyrics of "You Are the Only Song" perhaps best reflects Chapin's philosophy of his music — "When you sing from the inside, you hope that something shows."

Foreigner

Head Games

By MICHAEL BRODE

It is rare indeed to find a rock band that, upon formation and subsequent release of their initial album, achieves the kind of phenomenal success usually reserved for the established "supergroups." Bands such as The Cars and Boston come quickly to mind, performers who have reached the heights of contemporary music upon the merits of their first recorded effort. However, as unusual as this situation may be, the development of the band Foreigner is even more unorthodox.

After floundering about with various second-rate rock acts for the better part of their musical careers, the members of Foreigner were fortunate enough to somehow cross paths and revitalise each other's musical abilities and aspirations. Thus, the creation of a band which arrived on the contemporary rock scene with all the subtlety of a sledgehammer. Employing a formula that blends melody with no-nonsense rock, Foreigner triumphed convincingly with both of its first two releases, Foreigner and Double Vision, busting record charts and filling concert halls across the country. Now they are back with a new album, Head Games, a slickly packaged collection of songs which establishes them as one of the premier bands in the progressive-commercial mainstream.

Right from the opening track, the driving "Dirty White Boy," Head Games works extremely well. Highlighted by the emotion-charged vocals of Lou Gramm, Foreigner churns out one quality song after another. "Love On The Telephone" sounds like a definite hit, much in the same vein as "Cold As Ice." "Women," a subject which dominates the majority of Foreigner tunes, is a rousing rocker with a rubbery-sounding riff that is both unique and catchy. "Seventeen" rounds out side one, featuring Mick Jones' slashing rhythm work.

Side two is slightly less straight-ahead, but quite energetic nonetheless. This side showcases the album's two finest songs: "Head Games," a thumping ballad-rocker with some stunning vocal work from Gramm, and "Rev On The Red Line," a highly-structured yet pleasingly melodic song. "Blinded By Science" and "Do What You Like" maintain the soothing yet inspired feel which characterizes much of the group's slower music.

"Head Games" is an impressive album by a versatile band, combining a British rock foundation with just enough American commercialism. Foreigner's Anglo-Saxon sound seems to be truly the best of both worlds.

Netgals Establish Streak

By DEAN RIZZO

What was supposed to be a rebuilding year has been a standout season for Coach Langran and the Women's Tennis Team. After losing their first two matches to Franklin and Marshall College (2-5) and Temple (1-4), the young team rallied for five straight victories.

First came a 9-0 whitewash of St. Peters, followed by what Coach Langran called "our best match of the year thus far," a 6-3 thrashing of St. John's. Finally, the team whipped Philadelphia Textile, Philadelphia Pharmacy and Widener College, all by 5-0.

Playing in the number one slot this year is junior Co-Captain Diane Williams, followed by freshman Carol Harrison, who is 7-0 in singles matches. In the third position, another freshman, Dawn Fisher, has been as Coach Langran said "a pleasant surprise" followed by the lone senior starter, Sue Burns. Sophomore Bonnie Stokes and junior Diane Cappuccio round out the starting squad while able alternates Colleen Nolan, Melanie Calder and soph Jeannie Rignante have played in doubles matches.

"We have been successful this year mostly because of our depth," said Langran. "Also, it must be noted that six of our seven matches have been played on the road so the team has showed great character in that respect."

than last year's team." Byrne continues, "We have a tough schedule, almost the same as last year, but right now we could beat three-fourths of our opponents on paper."

Quindlen and Byrne attribute much of their optimism for a winning season to two freshman recruits: Bruce Baltera and Steve Leonard.

Baltera, younger brother of junior Watercat Bob, swims the 200 and 500 meter freestyle and the butterfly. Steve Leonard, a diver from Bishop Ireton High School in Alexandria, Virginia, was a High School All-American and placed third in the National Catholic High School Diving Championships held at Villanova last year.

The Watercats credit themselves as being "the best-looking team on campus "since their meets are attended by 95% girls. For the 1979-80 season, they plan to "swim hard and play hard."

Stealing a phone call isn't a game.

Most students play by the rules when placing a long distance call. They take advantage of bargain rates and make their calls during the discount periods. If you're not sure when you can call at discount rates, check your phone book.

A few students think it's O.K. to break the rules by stealing their telephone calls. They're not beating the system, they're taking advantage of all of us, because it drives up the cost of providing telephone service.

Students who break the rules also run the risk of paying a large fine. Spending time in jail. And getting themselves a permanent police record.

It's just not worth it!

Harriers Take EAA Crown At Belmont Plateau

By RAY ENGLER

Villanova's harriers won last Saturday's EAA Cross-Country Championships, defeating six other schools (Duquesne, Massachusetts, Pittsburgh, Rutgers, St. Bonaventure and West Virginia). The closest competitor, finishing 29 points behind, 23-52, at Belmont Plateau.

Despite the heavy Friday night rain and the absence (due to injury) of last year's champion, Sydney Maree, the Wildcats put on quite a show for all the spectators.

Crossing the line first was Amos Korir, who ran away from the field to win with a time of 25:49.2. Finishing second was former All-American Carey Pinkowski, running his first varsity race in two years. He ran an impressive 26:20.6 for the five-mile Belmont course.

Dave Wilson, a junior from West Virginia, ran 26:29.4. Paul Friedman, a Rutgers senior, ran a good time of 26:37.1, despite a badly cut knee.

Two more Villanova runners were next to cross the finish line. Kevin Dillon, a sophomore from Canada who performed strongly for the team last year, ran a solid time of 26:47.2 to take fifth place for the Wildcats. The next Villanova finished was senior Don Paige who, like teammate Pinkowski, did not run varsity cross-country last year; nevertheless, he put up a strong time of 26:50.4 to place sixth. Paige just beat the next finisher, Gary Siriano of Pittsburgh by 1.5 seconds.

The last runner to break 27 minutes was the eighth finisher, Tarry Wook of Rutgers with a time of 26:54.8. Rounding out the top ten finishers was Jack Mulqueen of West Virginia.

Other Villanovans who finished were: Mike Lacey (27:40.9), Pete Carroll (28:00.0), John Hunter (28:13.2), Paul Denis (29:07.2) and Brad Gair (30:00.0).

Villanova, by virtue of being the first team to get five men across the finish line, won the meet. The placement of the first five finishers added up to an impressive Villanova score of 23. The other teams scores are as follows: Duquesne 183, Massachusetts 82, Pittsburgh 140, Rutgers 52, St. Bonaventure 193 and West Virginia 74.

The Wildcats were also involved in a dual-meet race against the Naval Academy. The winner was an unheralded but nevertheless obviously talented runner from Villanova, Chris Rose. Rose ran a solid and impressive 27:49.6 to win by five seconds over George Abitante of the Naval Academy. Villanova won the dual-meet over Navy, 24-32, and took first, third, fifth, sixth and ninth places.

On tap for the Wildcats tomorrow, October 6, is the Lehigh Invitational at Lehigh University.

Swimmers Prepare To Rebound With Soph Duo

By BETH WHITE

Sophomore swimming sensations Dan Ahern and Matt Rafferty nailed their names and new record times to the record board by the Fieldhouse Pool in preparation of the 1979-80 Men's Swim Team season.

Ahern posted his record time of 55.1 seconds in the 100 meter backstroke, breaking Steve Tygh's freshman record of 55.5 (set in 1972) and the former varsity record, also Tygh's, of 55.3.

Rafferty tied the freshman record of Dick Kolf, also set in 1972, with his time of 1.59.1 in the 200 meter butterfly.

The Watercats hope to improve upon the past two years' losing seasons with the help of transfers Todd Russell and Rob Kownurko. Russell, a freestyle specialist from Duke University, swims everything from the 50 meter sprint to the 1000 meter distance and could possibly swim the 200 meter free at the NCAA Championships next spring. Cornoco, a transfer from rival East Stroudsburg, finishes the 500 freestyle in 4:41.0, adding to the already strong freestyle squad.

Coach Ed Geisz, once again optimistic in his pre-season outlook, hopes to send the 800 meter free relay to the Eastern Championships. According to Geisz, several individuals could go to the NCAA Championships and represent the Watercats for the first time since 1971.

Coach Geisz says that the swim team is "lopsided" since the freestyle squad is "tough as hell" and the butterfly and diving teams are also in "good shape," but the team lacks depth in the breast and backstroke.

Junior Clayton Ertlmeier is the star breaststroker and record-setter Ahern the sole backstroker. Geisz stated that the team lacks depth and "needs at least three swimmers in each event, especially the number two and three swimmers in back and breast."

Geisz looks for a "winning year" and needs only three wins to gain his two hundredth victory as a Villanova coach. The team hopes the tally will come during an away meet so they will have "a long bus ride back to celebrate," according to co-captains Jerry Byrne and Steve Quindlen.

Quindlen, a senior accounting major, specializes in the butterfly. Byrne, his co-captain, is a senior political science major and the "sprinting mainstay" (50 and 100 meter freestyle). They feel that the team is "young, but not inexperienced. We have more talent

Fall Is Exhibition Season For Baseball

By BOB CONWAY

During the latter part of September and the major part of October, the sport of baseball is pressure-packed. It is a time when contending clubs are not only up for every game, they are up for every pitch.

The Villanova Wildcats baseball team is playing games these days, but it is not in the thick of a pennant race. Baseball during the autumn, for the Wildcats, is not a life and death matter where every game has meaning. Rather, it is an exhibition season.

It is the time when manager Larry Shane, who has been the brain trust for 17 seasons at Villanova, scrutinizes the talent of all his potential spring players under game conditions.

The Villanova players came out for a game against Textile last week dressed in a variety of ways. Some wore the complete uniform, others were in sweat suits, and a minority came dressed to play in shorts. The base umpire was a Villanova player, who must be a better ballplayer than umpire. This is the atmosphere of a fall game.

Manager Shane emphasized the fact that they try to win every game, but he also wants to see how certain indviduals react in different situations. With all but one regular infielder having graduated last year, Shane is desperately looking for replacements.

He may have found one in walk-on 3rd baseman San Toni. Against Textile, with a runner on first, San Toni went behind third to dig out a hard hit ground ball that was labeled double and turned it into a force play. "Many freshmen were looking good," noted manager Shane. One frosh who stands out is pitcher/designated hitter Charlie McDermitt. He accounted for two runs against Textile with one swing of his bat as he tattooed the ball over the right field fence.

The essence of these fall games can be summed up by this incident. I questioned manager Shane after the Textile game. He told me that he wanted to win; yet, he wasn't sure Villanova held onto their lead. It was obvious this was an exhibition game.

'Cincy' Bullies Cats

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The University of Cincinnati extended their home opening victory streak to 7 games last Saturday with an impressive 27-13 win over the Villanova Wildcats before 14,785 Bearcat fans at Nippert Stadium. After falling behind 10-0 early in the first quarter, the Wildcats played more aggressively and intelligently for the majority of the game, but not enough to overcome the deficit. According to Coach Dick Bedesem, "playing against 10 points set the battle, the tone of the game."

Cincinnati's quick 10 points included a blocked Joe Borajkiewicz punt by All-American candidate defensive end Farley Bell, which was picked out of the air by end Dan Vete and ran in for a 27-yard score. Steve Schultz's point after touchdown was sucessful as well as his field goal with 5:56 left in the first quarter. Villanova's only first half score was a Pat O'Brien keeper around right end for a 29-yard touchdown with 0:36 left in the first quarter. Chuck Bushbeck's point after put the Cats within three. The touchdown was the first time Villanova has scored in the first quarter this year.

The second quarter seemed more optimistic for the Cats. Although Villanova punted only 6 plays into the quarter, Borajkiewicz's punt sailed 57 yards into the Cincinnati end zone, and the Bearcats began a drive at their own 20 yard line. Aided by one of defensive end Bruce Kullman's 2 quarterback sacks of the evening and a tipped pass by end Tom Jensen, the Bearcats moved the ball only 14 yards in 11 plays. Likewise, the Bearcats were just as stubborn on defense and V.U. was forced to punt after a 5-play drive. This time Cincinnati tailback Allen Harvin, the nation's leading freshman rusher a year ago, picked up three first downs, rushing for forty yards in an 82-yard drive which ended on a Tony Kapetanis one-yard sneak. At halftime, Villanova trailed 17-7.

The final 30 minutes of the game were dominated by the Bearcats, who controlled the ball for 18:16 compared to Villanova's 11:44. The Bearcats second drive of the third period saw Kapetanis (18-11-0, 151 yards) hit Aaron Hagans with two first down passes good for 55 yards and another Kapetanis one-yard score which eventually gave Cincy a comfortable 24-7 lead. Villanova came within 11 on Pat O'Brien's second T.D. of the game, a 2-yard run around right end, capping a 7-play, 62-yard drive. The point after was wide and the score stood at 24-13 until 5 seconds into the fourth quarter when Cincinnati's Steve Schultz's 35-yard field goal completed the evening's scoring, 27-13.

Although the stiff Wildcat defense performed well in the fourth quarter, Cincinnati's defense was equally tough. Coach Bedesem summed up the game saying, "We got some good individual performances. Seriously though, the game is over. The quicker we forget about the game, the better the team is going to be." Looking ahead to Youngstown State (4-0 tomorrow, Bedesem said "They're riding high since they haven't been beaten yet. It's a similar situation to last year (Villanova dealt the Penguins their only regular season loss, 22-17). Obviously we are going to have to get our act together."

CAT NOTES: Bushbeck's missed PAT was the first of the year (9-10) ... Mike Gold's 199 rushing yards leads the team ... Willie Sydnor has 16 receptions for 215 yards ... V.U.'s last road victory came on October 28, 1978 (vs. Youngstown State, 22-17) ... David Martin leads the team in solo tackles (12) ... Dan Burke leads in total tackles (54) and assisted tackles (50).

Phillies' Saga

By PAT FLYNN

Let's forget, for just a while, about the Pope's visit, the Cuban crisis, the dinner menu in the Pit. Let's concentrate on the real question that is dominating people's minds today. What happened to the Phillies?

First, we'll recall the spring of 1979. The coming of the baseball season was looked upon with more expectation than any event in the Philadelphia area since George Washington promised thermal underwear to the troops at Valley Forge. The Phils, it was predicted, would win it all this year.

It was a foregone conclusion. Pete Rose would be the Moses of baseball, leading his teammates to October's Promised Land. Why, World Series tickets were even being given away locally as contest prizes.

There was one obstacle in the way of the Phillies post-season party. And that was a 162 game regular season. To make a long story short, after a good start the Phils slipped behind and never got up enough steam to make a legitimate run at the flag. It was frustrating for everyone concerned, especially the fans who turned out in record numbers. If it hadn't been for the Phanatic and hot pretzels after the game, visitors to Veteran's Stadium would have been totally let down.

Everybody has an explanation for the Phil's demise. The most prevalent is the cry of "injuries, injuries." Forget it, The Reds lost George Foster, Ken Griffey and Johnny Bench, but won the National League West. In the American League, the Orioles lost Jim Palmer, Scott McGregor, and Doug Decinces for months at a time and pulled the American League East out. And the Angels lost Frank Tanana, Nolan Ryan, and a pretty good hitter named Carew. Champions. In short, winners can overcome injuries with depth. The Phils didn't.

Danny Ozark is another explanation. True, Ozark was no managerial genius and might be more suited for front office work or beer-vending than managing, but to dump the total responsibility into his lap is unfair. He had a no-win situation. Had he won the title, he would have been ignored anyway.

I have my own conclusion. It may be blasphemy, but I place the blame on the addition of Rose, for two reasons. I know he had a great season. I know he batted .330 with a bunch of doubles (and 59 RBI's, hitting in the number three spot). But the problems are behind the scenes.

The Phillies have always been unable to handle pressure. For three years, they found it impossible to win the playoffs, when it really counted. In short, they choked. In adding Rose, the Phils became prohibitive favorites to win the National League East crown. On top of that, Rose's all-baseball attitude, his insistence on all-business in the clubhouse, put added pressure on the Phillies. In effect, he gave the Phils 162 playoff games to play. And you recall their track record in pressure contests.

Also, I couldn't help but question Charlie Hustle's motivation. It seems as though his major concerns are personal ones, such as his conquest of Ty Cobb's record for 200-hit seasons and his projected run at Stan Musial's national league record for career hits. You have to wonder if Pete might look upon 1979 as a good season. The Phils went nowhere, but that might be secondary to him.

If the Phillies sink some money into their pitching staff this winter, they might become a contender next year. They had better do something soon. Looking at some of the ages on that roster, there aren't too many years left.

New Offense Brings Volleyball Win

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

A new offensive setup incorporated by Coach Gertrude Jennings and assistant coaches Dr. Rosemary Selby and Bob Covell has helped enable the women's volleyball team to establish a respectable 3-1 tally thus far.

Sarah Holyoke, Dorrie Bohs, Cathy Lorran and four year veteran Karen Hanna have been switching off for the setting position. Joanne Canuso, Lisa Ortlip, Debbie Lipp, Diane Petrablia, Patti Curran and Fran Gruber have taken turns in the bumping and spiking position. The manager is Debbie Martino.

"I want the girls to play tough, aggressive volleyball, so we can go on to win our division," related Coach Jennings.

Playing the best out of five games, the Wildcats have outplayed their opponents in two easy contests against Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science and Rosemont. The team played five full games against both Lehigh and Immaculata, only losing to the former.

The junior varsity has established an unbeaten 2-0 record with scores of 15-1 and 15-0 against Pharmacy.

The team will face Cabrini College tonight at 6:00 and West Chester and University of Pennsylvania on Tuesday at 6:00. Both of these home games are being played in Butler Annex.

Students Rally for Safety

By BILL GUERIN

Shouts of "Why must we fight for safety?" were heard along Lancaster Avenue last Friday afternoon as more than 400 Villanova students rallied to protest traffic hazards around campus.

Torrential rains went virtually unnoticed as students paraded for over an hour and a half on the sidewalk from the intersection of Ithan and Lancaster Avenues to the traffic light by the main chapel. At this light the banner-bearing protesters crossed the street and proceeded back to the intersection.

The Student Government Association-sponsored march was prompted by two recent accidents involving Villanova students.

Two weeks ago, a St. Mary's resident was struck by an automobile while attempting to cross Route 320. Three days later, a freshman coed was injured by an express train from Philadelphia as she tried to cross the Paoli Local railroad tracks at the Villanova station when the tunnel underneath was flooded.

The girl is currently listed in critical condition at Bryn Mawr Hospital.

The night after the accident at Villanova station, the Senate Caucus voted unanimously to organize the protest to increase community awareness of the safety problems around the University.

The SGA organizers of the school-sanctioned rally, Senators Dave Dear, Dave Blachly, Henry Amoroso, and Mark Zappy, coordinated the distribution of over 4,000 handbills on the days preceding the rally. On the day of the protest, another 1,500 flyers were given to motorists driving along Lancaster Avenue.

"We wanted to show the school, township, and state that we're not going to take these traffic problems sitting down," said Dear.

Goals for the rally included the establishment of a 15 mph speed limit on all the roads bordering the University, and immediate renovation of the tunnel underneath the Paoli Local tracks.

Viewing the rally from under a tree by the old Ithan Avenue campus entrance were Jonn Cappelli, Radnor township commissioner in charge of public safety, and John Alden, state representative from the 167th district.

"I intend to find out what can be done about these problems on the state level," said Alden.

A meeting was to have been held yesterday morning at the law school between school representatives, Alden, and PennDot and Amtrak officials.

"At the meeting the entire campus safety situation will be reviewed," stated University Public Relations Director Eugene Ruane.

"This is the first time we've been able to sit down and discuss these issues with state representatives," continued Ruane. "The answers we need will have to come from PennDot."

Throughout the course of Friday's rally more than 15 Radnor policemen were on hand to help protesters, whose number included Vice-president for Student Life Father John Deegan, cross Lancaster Avenue, and to maintain traffic flow on the highway.

"As far as the police were concerned, there were no problems at the rally," stated Police Chief Maurice Hennessy. "It was very orderly."

About halfway through the rally protesters attempted to stand in the intersection and block traffic, but the policemen and SGA marshals quickly ushered the crowd back onto the sidewalk.

During the week of the protest, the SGA had distributed flyers urging students to "block the pike" at Friday's rally.

"Before the rally, the Radnor Police called us and said that anyone obstructing traffic on Lancaster Avenue would be immediately arrested," stated Dear. "It was then that we decided to march along Lancaster Avenue rather than block the pike."

Media coverage for the rally included two local news teams which filmed the protest for their evening broadcasts.

When asked if the rally was successful, Dear stated, "Only time can tell. If our demands are met, then we will have reached our ultimate goal."

Over 400 demonstrators turned out to march for traffic safety around the campus.

One of the many protesters undaunted by Friday's inclement weather.

SGA Submits Safety Proposals to Township

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The Student Government Association has submitted to Radnor township a list of proposals for safety improvements on the roads and the train tracks adjacent to campus.

Radnor township commissioners requested such a list at a township meeting Tuesday night when the issue of Villanova student safety was discussed.

Among the proposals are a 15 mile per hour speed limit for cars on Ithan Avenue and Spring Mill Road, and a pedestrian crossing on Spring Mill Road.

The SGA also asked for delayed traffic lights and flashing walk signs at the intersection of Ithan and Lancaster Avenues and in front of the main chapel.

Repairs to the Rte. 320 bridge and the tunnel walkway underneath the railroad tracks are on the list. The SGA also requested that the fence in the middle of the railroad tracks be extended and heightened.

Eugene Ruane, director of Villanova public information, said that Radnor "could not have been more understanding" about Villanova safety problems.

"The (Rte. 320) bridge is not only a Villanova problem, but the problem of the whole township," said Ruane. "The township feels very strongly that something should be done about it."

Submitting proposals to Radnor is the first step in getting the safety improvements, said Student Senator David Dear. "Radnor township has to initiate something before anything is done by the by the state," he said.

Yesterday, a meeting was to be held with Radnor township commissioners, State Representative John Alden, Rev. John Deegan, vice-president for student life, and a representative from PennDOT.

Safety for students crossing Rte 320 will be the topic of the meeting, which was arranged by Deegan before accidents last week which left two students injured.

Special Kids Win Olympics

By RON TRIOLO

Approximately 60 mentally retarded children, teenagers, and adults participated in the Pennsylvania State Special Olympics Soccer Championships on campus last Sunday.

The competition, which was sponsored by Villanovans for Life under the guidance of the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, marked the first time Villanova has held such an event.

"The idea was given to me by Chris Ehart," said Mary Foti, student chairperson of the Special Olympics Committee of the Villanovans For Life. "We knew that Saint Joe's and Cabrini had sponsored them before, so we wrote to the Kennedy Foundation last summer for some information. When Eunice Shriver (president of Special Olympics, Inc.) wrote back to us, we were on our way."

Since their inception in 1968 when the Kennedy Foundation and the Chicago Park District experimented with a sports competition for the mentally retarded, the program has grown and meets are held in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, as well as Canada and France.

But the first toss of Villanova's hat into the Special Olympic ring was marred when less than half of those originally registered to take part in the competition actually participated.

"We were a little disappointed at the turnout," Foti stated, "but Villanova is just not well known for the Special Olympics as yet. Some schools had transportation problems, some didn't want to risk taking their kids out in threatening weather like Sunday's. People just didn't know about it, and a couple of schools didn't want the hassles of releasing medical forms to a school that didn't have a reputation in that area."

"Most of the kids who did show up came from the Don Guanella School and the C.K. Center. We had a good number of walk-ons, too."

Although the number of Special Olympians was relatively small, the response which the program drew from the Villanova student body was overwhelming. Over 270 students and faculty members offered their services on Sunday.

"A lot of people were interested in it, and everyone got a chance to experience it on Sunday. Maybe it was better that way because we paired two or three volunteers with each participant. It gave them a lot of individual and personal attention which I'm sure they all needed. The volunteers were so great with the kids they had never even met before, the kids will never forget them," continued Foti.

With such visible interest expressed by the Villanova community, Foti is optimistic about the future of Special Olympics as an annual event.

Frank Dean, state director of Special Olympics, said, "this year we just got our feet wet, and will take the plunge next year. It was a totally warming, exhilarating experience for all the volunteers and the kids. I can only assume that it'll be even bigger next year."

"We never did anything like this before, but everything just fell into place on Sunday."

Oldest Augustinian Dies

The oldest Augustinian, Rev. Walter Gabriel Rafter, O.S.A., died early Monday morning ending a lengthy career of service and dedication to Villanova and the Augustinian order. He was 91.

"He was a quiet, priestly man," commented Rev. Bernard Lazor, O.S.A., friend and associate of Reverend Rafter, "he loved Villanova and was proud to be associated with the university."

Villanova's "oldtimer," as he was affectionately called by fellow Augustinians, entered the order in 1904 at the age of 16. He was ordained a priest in Rome in 1913.

Upon ordination Rev. Rafter returned to the United States where he served in various stations ranging from instructor to parish priest.

From 1913-26 Rev. Rafter was assigned to teach Latin and Greek at Villanova Prep and after some years, in the college. In 1926, he became Headmaster at newly-transplanted Malvern Prep, and in 1929, he was assigned to the Augustinian Seminary in Washington, D.C. From 1935-47 Rev. Rafter began a long term in parish work that brought him to New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and New York. He served as priest and pastor during this time.

Rev. Rafter again returned to Villanova in 1967 and taught Greek at the university. His last five years were spent in retirement. But he was by no means inactive: "He was an especially familiar figure walking between the Monastery and the Villanova Stadium, remarked Rev. Lazor. "He enjoyed many home football and basketball games."

Father Driscoll recently awarded him the title "honorary Chaplain for Varsity Sports," a tribute to Rev. Rafter's loyalty, and enthusiasm. "It is perhaps significant," concluded Lazor, "that Father spent his first 13 and last 13 years at Villanova. He was responsible, gentlemanly, and gave daily evidence to the priesthood and Villanova."

Students Spot Rats on Campus

A Stanford radiator, believed to be one of the hiding places of campus rats.

By STEVE HAGGERTY

Rats have been spotted by several students at various places on campus. These recent sightings have prompted concern that there might be a growing rat problem at Villanova.

Junior Mike O'Brien, a resident of Sullivan Hall, has seen the pests on several occasions.

"I'd heard about rats on campus but I was surprised to see one scurry from the traffic island in front of the Connelly Center into Sullivan Field," remarked O'Brien.

Mr. James Slector, director of Housekeeping, stated that to his knowledge there is no growing rat problem on campus.

"Rats are a common problem but there has been no increase of them on campus.

"We have exterminators come in weekly who take care of the rats that we do have," explained Slector.

Slector said that the rats may be more visible because the construction on campus has stirred them up.

"The exterminators seeded Sullivan Field because that is where the rats were re-locating after being forced to move because of the construction," Slector remarked.

Harkin's Exterminators takes care of Villanova's rodent problem. They come on campus each week and place poisons in various spots for the rats to eat.

The problem of scraps of wood on the traffic island by the construction area has not been able to be solved. It remains an eyesore and a haven for the rats.

"We would be happy to clean up that traffic island but the construction workers need some of the boards in the pile for their work," Mr. Slector commented.

"Generally, I think that the problem is pretty well under control. The dumpsters on campus are dumped at least once a day and the exterminators keep the number of rats in check. I feel the problem is not getting worse," stated Slector.

Adventures Around The World

By TRISH NABER

Attempt to imagine the adventure and learning experience from a three-month trip at sea. Rick Hovsepian, a second semester senior at Villanova, actually lived this once in a lifetime opportunity through a program academically sponsored by the University of Colorado in Cooperation with the Institute of Shipboard Education.

In January, 1979 Rick and 500 other students from all over the United States set out on a voyage around the world they would never forget.

After making sure Villanova would accept the credits he would take, Rick applied to the University of Colorado and was accepted. He spent the first semester of his senior year working, and in January flew to the origin of his trip, Los Angeles. From Los Angeles the S.S. Universe, set sail for their last visit in America, Honolulu, Hawaii.

The U.S.S. UNIVERSE.

From Hawaii, the Universe, 500 virtual strangers, a complete faculty, and a Chinese crew (the ship is owned and operated by Oriental Overseas Lines) set out for their next destination, Japan. The atmosphere of the ship quickly changed, after only two days out in the North Pacific they encountered a storm which knocked the ship 23 degrees to each side. "We all gathered together that night and held on to one another," he said.

From that moment on the students were united, which Rick considers one of the most emotional and educational aspects of the trip. "I learned as much about my own culture as I did about other cultures because there were people from all over the U.S. We came together with a special closeness, our own ship-board community. We loved each other," Rick emotionally stated.

From Hawaii the next stop was Japan, and then on to Korea where Rick remembers the hundreds of children he saw in orphanages and how intrigued they were at this strange American. Next stop, Taiwan, where Rick traded a native baseball player's shirt for his American football jersey.

"I saw the boat people leaving, three-months before word was out in the U.S."

"We all did a lot of trading all over the world," he said. The "community" went on to Hong Kong, Singapore and India where they saw the magnificence of the Taj Mahal contrasted with the poverty and hundreds of orphaned children. From India, they traveled to the Seychelles Islands, to Egypt where they rode camels and saw wonders like the treasures of King Tut. The next stops were Greece, Spain, Morocco and finally a place called Baltimore, Maryland, U.S.A.

It was impossible for Rick to try to communicate all his experiences. Every moment was a new experience for him. From Singapore Rick went on to a Malaysian Island where he met a Peace Corps representative who had been sent to aid the refugees from Viet Nam. "I saw the boat people leaving, three months before word was out in the U.S.," Rick said. The incredible stories, experiences and emotions go on and on. "I went through more in those three months than I have in twenty years of my life," he said.

College Students Have Problems Too

By SHARON MILLS

Students enrolled in colleges and universities across the country face a great deal of problems, ranging from academic to social categories. Something not thought of as frequently, however, is that schools also share in societies problems, those of crime, economy, status, and class. These problems are just as present in some form on campus as grade averages. They simply are not emphasized, and in the case of crime, not as common.

As is the case anywhere in America today, crime is a problem evident, to some extent, at all colleges and universities throughout the country. Several things can be seen by looking at statistics from various reports issued by the United States Justice Department. The 1977 report of "Crime in the United States" contains a listing of the "Number of Offenses Known to the Police, 1977, Universities and Colleges." Overall, property crimes were much more common than violent crimes, as normally would be the case. In data on a college in Virginia, whose undergraduate enrollment of 5,463 is slightly smaller than Villanova, only three violent crimes were reported, as opposed to sixty-eight property crimes. The violent crimes were one robbery, and two aggravated assaults; the property crimes three burglaries, sixty-four instances of larceny, and one motor vehicle theft.

In contrast, a larger university would naturally have a higher instance of crime. Pennsylvania State University's College Park campus, with an enrollment of 33,068 reported eighteen instances of violent crime, including two rapes and sixteen assaults. Approximately one thousand twenty-four cases of property crime were known: ninety-six burglaries, nine hundred twenty-two instances of larceny, and six car thefts.

These statistics show that crime can very easily be a part of a college student's life. Many offenses go either unnoticed or else unreported, but the basic fact remains that they still occur.

Another problem faced by all college coeds is their financial situation, their so-called "economic stability." The majority of students attending a school like Villanova are involved to some degree in paying for their education. For many, it involves holding down a job while attending courses, for others, it is in the form of long-term loans that will be repaid after graduation. But financial aid is not the only force of economy that is a part of college. The very reason people attend college is to broaden their horizons concerning the job market, among other things. Thus, gaining a certain "workability" of the economy is the very reason that most individuals pursue a higher education.

H.O.T.—Peer Counseling

By MARY ANNE BILZ

Life always seems a little easier when there is someone there to listen and help out with problems. An understanding person to offer advice, who cares. This is what Help On Tap (H.O.T.) is all about.

H.O.T. is a peer counseling service consisting of a group of trained students here on campus. Trained for approximately one year, these students are here to offer advice concerning drug and alcohol related problems as well as any other difficulties that students feel are troubling them. In addition to talking with a member on the phone, arrangements can be made to meet on a one to one basis. This may be especially helpful when a phone call is not enough. When necessary the person will be referred to an outside source.

H.O.T. DIAL 525-1370
Students helping students

This year, the organization is beginning to bloom. Though created last year, the group is just beginning to make its intention known on campus. Originally designed to help the student with alcohol problems, H.O.T. felt by expanding its purpose, it would be able to encompass more students with problems not necessarily dealing with drinking. John Gordon, a H.O.T. member, felt that "students had the impression that drinking and alcoholism was the only aspect we dealt in." He adds, that "the training we received has also helped us in our everyday lives."

This organization is available to every student here. Many times a student will feel that seeking a counseling service is projecting an abnormal life. But H.O.T. is there to help even if you feel particularly "bummed out" one day. Their number is 525-1370, 6 p.m.-12 a.m. Monday through Friday.

OBLIQUITIES

A Belief in the University

Despite Cynicism, Hope

Several years ago, Frederick Taylor, executive editor of The Wall Street Journal, told a group of journalists gathered at a convention that the key to success in the business was a macabre sense of humor.

While Mr. Taylor's statement was, of course, a generalization, made in context of those after-dinner rhetorical exercises that seem to follow most conventions, we have come to recognize that there is a great deal of insight in that line.

Although operating on the philosophy that our coverage area is primarily the campus, thus allowing us to miss death and suffering on a much broader scale, week after week, we still seem to face issues calling for action on some problem on campus, some complaint of injustice or unequal treatment. There are questions of the budget, of costs, of apathy, of safety, of academics, of the myriad of policies and regulations involved in the operation of the university.

Weekly coverage of these issues tends to breed a degree of cynicism. We do not fall into melancholic depths each week, however; we are saved by the realization that, while problems seem to draw the attention of the university community, and hence this newspaper, there are many encouraging signs around us. Ultimately, after the issues we cover today have long been forgotten, the people of Villanova will have made it all worthwhile. A university is, foremost, a center of learning; we will have learned, both in the classroom and from our peers. We will have seen a wider range of people; we will have made new friends.

Perhaps a degree of cynicism is needed by journalists. Certainly, Mr. Taylor's words bear some truth. We will continue to cover the issues of the day that we feel are relevant to the university community, but that does not indicate a sense of despair.

We believe in the university, and we believe in the importance of its primary resource — its people.

March Congratulations

To the Editor of the Villanovan:

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Student Government Organization on their well organized march to demonstrate the University's concern for traffic safety. It is gratifying to me to see the students assume their rightful leadership role in this important issue and to exercise that leadership in such a responsible manner.

I would also like to thank the faculty and administrators who cooperated in our efforts to demonstrate our concern to the motoring public.

Change is a process. The process has begun. I would ask the Villanova community to continue to responsibly support myself, Mr. Winterhalter and other campus leaders as we urge this process forward to an acceptable solution.

From time to time we will be reporting to the Villanova community on the progress of our negotiations with the various parties concerned with the traffic safety issue. Our first meeting will be with representatives of PennDOT and State Representative Alden on Thursday, October 11.

Again, congratulations to the student leaders and a sincere thank you to the whole Villanova community.

Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.
Vice President for Student Life

Thanks

To: All students who supported our demonstration for traffic safety:

We'd like to thank everyone who participated in our demonstration for pedestrian and traffic safety. We regard this as both a success and a beginning. We feel like we have brought the problem to the public's attention yet, there is still a great deal of follow-up and work to be done. Special thanks goes to the Villanovan staff, KVU, the R.S.A., the S.G.A. committees who worked so hard, and to the third floor O'Dwyer who kept us smiling when we needed it most.

The Student Caucus

Concerned

Editor:

We are only a few of the many concerned St. Mary residents who are getting very irritated with the recent actions occurring in and around OUR dorm. The towing of cars has become very irrational and now a very serious accident has occurred on the nearby train tracks because pedestrian crosswalks are either non-existent or in very poor condition.

The tension and anger here is enormous, only organization is lacking. Give us a little time and soon, very soon, we will be heard. If the administration doesn't act now, we will make ourselves heard — that's guaranteed!

Special Olympics

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all the people involved with our first Special Olympics at Villanova this past Sunday.

To the Steering Committee: Angie, Olli, Jim, Lisa, Linda, Tim, Eddie, Tony, Brian, Felicia, John Del Ferro, Martha, Leo, Bill, Egert — without your persistence, this event would not have made it. Thanks for trying so hard even when everything looked so bad the day before. Despite the mud, lack of money, lack of tee shirts, etc., those who attended all remarked how smoothly things went and how happy everyone was.

My heartfelt thanks to all the volunteers. We were so overwhelmed by the number of interested people. Also thank you to all of the captains, nurses, and school sponsors, for without you the day would not have been the success that it was.

Thank you,
Mary Foti

Tailgate Support

Dear Sir:

On Friday, October 5, I received a letter posted on the fraternity bulletin board concerning tailgating. Tailgates, for those of you who don't know, are small parties with food and beer, usually before or after football games.

The letter I received was from Fr. Robert Martin, Dean of Student Activities. His position was " . . . tailgating by student organizations has not been permitted on campus in the past and will not be tolerated in the future." As a student organization leader I believe that this view will hurt, not help, the football program. During the four years that I have attended Villanova there have been tailgates by Villanova supporters at all the football games, home or away. The tailgates create a sense of unity among the tailgaters which leads to better support of the football team at the game.

The letter I received also condemns us for our behavior at the games. If yelling and cheering the football team at the game is inappropriate behavior then we are wrong, but I believe that this is the only appropriate way to behave at a football game.

I hope that the Villanovan and the rest of the Villanova community will support the view that tailgates add to the excitement of the game and add to the support of the team. I also hope that Student Activities will review their letter and create a new and better policy towards tailgates.

Sincerely,
Chris Davis

Student Government Association

Illustrating Effectiveness

"So that's what the S.G.A. is supposed to . . . I thought so, but how do they get things like this accomplished?" This statement and the accompanying question have recurred since the first freshman learned what the letters "S.G.A." stood for.

Last Friday the S.G.A. illustrated their effectiveness. Your Student Government proved that they could move the students when it was necessary. Last week it was necessary, and the students moved. That's what the S.G.A. does, and that's how they get things accomplished.

A Villanova freshman was seriously injured last Monday on the train tracks, which she was forced to cross as the least of three evils: risking her life on the bridge over Rt. 320, wading through a flooded tunnel, or crossing the tracks. Two weeks ago, a male V.U. student was badly hurt when he was struck by a car on Rt. 320. Those of us who have been here in previous years know that these are not isolated incidents; they are, sadly, only two in a long list of unnecessary tragedies.

The past history of student legislation attempts to solve the problem of traffic safety in the area surrounding the Villanova campus have proven fruitless. The rally, and those who participated in it, were instrumental in shedding light on the matter. The major goal of the rally was to gain public awareness of this issue. The demonstration did exactly that. The battle for traffic safety is just beginning, but to the brave souls who stood up against the inclement weather to make their point, a thank you is gratefully extended.

In another article there is a request by Mr. David Blachly, Chairman of the Student Caucus, for all of you to write to the legislators of the area. The demonstration was a success but the battle is not nearly over. You helped us Friday, help us now.

P.J. WINTERHALTER

Coming of Age

Student Government and the elected student senators have finally come of age. I write this not only as an incumbent senator, but as an observer and participant in student government for the past three years. This year, unlike the past, the students have a group of senators that are unselfish and dedicated individuals. They have, over a period of time, developed a vision of what they believe Villanova should be. In addition, they are dedicated in their beliefs and determined to encourage change.

Perhaps the most visible example of this dedication was the demonstration for traffic and pedestrian safety held last Friday. The Student Caucas encouraged and promulgated the idea for a visual manifestation of discontent in regard to the number of accidents that have occurred around Villanova recently. Seeing that state and federal agencies were showing reluctance at finding solutions to these problems, the student body responded and exercised their right to demonstrate for a common goal.

The media response was encouraging. The response from the public officials was also encouraging, but it must be realized that following up on the crest of the wave we developed is essential. The Student Government encourages all students to write to the applicable legislators in our area. Lists of these officials and their addresses are available in Rm. 204 Dougherty.

One final comment, we encourage all students to express your various ideas and concerns about Villanova to your senators. We are answerable to you! All that we ask is that you come to us with your problems and support us in pursuit of your goals.

S.G.A. Committee Meetings

The progress of the S.G.A. committee reorganization has been clearly evident during the past few weeks. Each committee has fulfilled its responsibility with extreme competence. For instance, The Activities And Services Committee is currently investigating possible fund raising events for the S.G.A. A number of plausible suggestions were articulated at this initial meeting. A raffle for a Fort Lauderdale Vacation is in the planning process at this very moment. A S.G.A. volleyball team, fully equipped with personalized S.G.A. tee shirts, will be displaying its athletic ability on the court this upcoming season.

Activities And Services would like to coordinate numerous social events, such as an S.G.A. picnic, later this year. Their first service project was the Voter Registration Drive for Villanova Students which ended last Tuesday. Katie MacLochlan was elected chairperson, and Priscilla Bodner was appointed secretary.

The Lobbying and Opinion Committee is busy at work on the Food Services Survey. They are investigating the possibility of an alternate meal plan. The Committee is also circulating petitions for the postponement of graduation, and signature sheets regarding the traffic safety issue at Villanova.

Catch-19 is presently researching student rights at Villanova. The Committee members fell that the current definition of what it means to be a "student" at Villanova is very ambiguous. This committee is also looking into the alcohol issue. Committee members want to focus their attention on the existing alcohol policy on campus.

The Preparedness Committee played an instrumental role in the success of last Friday's demonstration. Under the formidable leadership of Mark Zappy, Dave Dear, Dave Blachly and Henry Amoroso, this committee was able to circulate their posters and petitions, inviting enthusiastic students to join the march.

Publicity and Communications Committee aided the Preparedness team in the creation and the circulation of the traffic demonstration flyers. This committee is anxiously awaiting the arrival of S.G.A. printed poster sheets, so that S.G.A. events can be adequately publicized. Committee members will also be responsible for the S.G.A. supplement in the Villanovan.

The concentrated efforts of these committees have definitely demonstrated that this year the S.G.A. is an effective organization.

The ACS

A letter from the President

The Association of Commuter Students is an organization which provides functions and services for commuters and off-campus residents. Its goal is to get these students more involved in student life on campus. There are many ways which the ACS works to serve the commuter student.

There are four committees of the ACS. The Athletic Committee forms teams for all intramural sports, has T-shirt sales and purchases blocks of tickets for members of ACS to attend basketball and football games.

The Communication Committee puts together newsletters, fliers and the ACS section of this supplement. These students also provide communication between ACS and other organizations as well as communication between the organization itself.

Ski trips, Monte Carlo night, socials and Bingo night are brought about by the work of the Social Committee. The Ad Hoc Committee works on carpools and coffee and donuts during finals.

We need the help of you, the commuters and off-campus residents, to plan and bring about these activities. If you are interested in joining, our next meeting will be Tuesday, Oct. 16 in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The Association of Commuter Students goal is to encourage the participation of students in campus affairs. Our organization welcomes any ideas or suggestions which will improve student life here at Villanova. Feel free to stop by our office located in 213 Dougherty Hall, or call extension 527.

The RSA

Committee: Another Side of The RSA

By HELEN M. HANEY

Well into the start of the school year, the RSA is in full swing. Coffee Houses, Parent's Weekend Receptions, and Sundae Parties are just a few of the events that have been successfully run in the dorms with many more in the offing. It promises to be a positive and successful year for all residents.

Another side of the RSA, one used in order to bring the various dorms together on a campus wide basis, is its two committees: Social and Publicity. Mr. Villanova, a Halloween Costume Contest, a Christmas Mass and reception, Shopping Trips, and several socials are just some of the activities planned for the committee under the direction of co-chairpersons Rose Marsico and Leslie Carranza. Watch for the posters and come to the social committee meetings to help plan these or any other events which you would like to see made available to the resident population.

In order for these events or those of each individual dorm to be successful, it is imperative that we have a strong publicity committee. The function of the committee is to gather news items for the Union Calender, for WKVU, and of course for this section, and for putting up flyers in strategic locations around campus. Being creative is the key to overcoming the "poster blindness" on campus by coming up with new ways to advertise. If you are this creative person, would like to get some writing experience, or are just interested in getting more involved in the RSA, stop up in the office on the second floor of Dougherty and sign up for the publicity committee.

Combined with the dorm governance and programming aspects of the RSA, the Social and Publicity Committees enable the RSA to provide a better resident atmosphere. Get involved and help us to "Do it in the dorms!"

Education At Sea

Academically there is a wide variety of course selection onboard ship. Courses listed in the regular University of Colorado catalog are adapted to the itinerary for each voyage. The lectures were geared to coincide with the area being visited. For example Rick's English class read the teachings of Zen while traveling through the Orient. Teachers and students had a special relationship. They worked, ate, drank, lived and experienced new people and places together. "It was superior education, true correspondence in learning. We all learned from each other. It was an academic and social experience combined as one, with no separation between student and teacher. "If I had a question about anything, I would run down to my teacher's room and ask," Rick stated.

According to Rick, the most important course the students took was a Psychology course entitled "American Re-entry." "We experienced a total culture shock coming back to the U.S. It took me a month to re-adjust to American society. We are privileged to a point of being spoiled. Our biggest problem is the gas crisis and that we don't have enough gas for our yachts and skidoos, how ludicrous," Rick said.

The ship-board curriculum is designed to provide students with insights into the machinery of society and allows them to dissect and assess its various functions. They are called upon to examine the crisis issues of the world-environmental concerns, population issues, foreign policy ,interrelationships, economic forces in the contest of the nations they visit.

The cost of this excursion averages $5,750 which includes tuition, passage fare, required in-country programs, visa fees, health insurance and student fees.

Information for semester at sea may be acquired by calling this toll free number (1-800) 854-0195.

Rick stated, "I learned to live every moment to the fullest. I treasure my time and try not to let a moment slip by. The energy is still there." And it is.

Counseling

The problem, then, is gaining enough momentum during the college years to enable economic success in the years to come.

Status and class fit more into the social category than those previously discussed, but they need to be mentioned because of the role they play in both crime, and economy. It is a proven fact that crime offenders often come from backgrounds of low social class and status. Likewise, they are the losers as far as economic and financial situations go. No real generalization can be made saying that all lower class people are crime offenders or vice versa, for there is also a high instance of crime in the middle and upper classes. But it is important to point out that these two elements are factors in the problems of crime and economy.

Thus, it is seemingly obvious that college people are not all that different from people elsewhere in society. Remember, college students are a part of society.

Streamers

Carlyle enters the audience is aware of the stress placed on the already disparate group. Intense rage and frustration are at Carlyle's fingertips threatening to slip out at any time. And slip out they do in a final, harrowing scene where self-knowledge, a bit of truth, and blood flow. The men haven't even been called to Vietnam yet.

Blood does not restore order but leaves us despairing and questionning. Why? What for? Who is the enemy?

Rabe's message is delivered by a fine cast who handle the dialogue well. Director Robert Hedley deals well with what must be a difficult final scene in Act II. Also his handling of the entrance of the two war veterans — Rooney (Tom McCarthy) and Cokes (Marvin Gendleman) and their lecture to the three men about the soldier whose parachute has failed to open is superb. The rendition of their war song is poetic and illustrates Rabe's truthful yet compassionate treatment of the two foolish fighting veterans:

Beautiful streamer,
open for me,
the sky is above me
But no canopy.

Streamers will run through October 14. Performance times are Wednesdays through Saturdays and Sunday afternoon (3 p.m.).

Drama Demands Input

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

"I wish the audience could relate to me, not as an actor, but as a human being." This statement shows how personally involved Jeff Musmanno is in his acting.

From his home in Pittsburgh, Jeff came to Villanova as a freshmen majoring in biology and planning on medical school, with no thoughts of theater as a profession. Finding biology to be too structured for his taste, he switched to English. Midway through college, he took a year off to drive across the country. In his second semester junior year, he took Acting I because it sounded different and interesting. "I fell in love with it then," he says. His first role came during the summer of 1977, following his junior year, in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead. Immediately after graduation in the summer of 1978 he began his graduate studies in theater. Most recently, he has acted in Little Murders, A Doll House, Trumpets and Drums, The Water Engine, Scapino, and as Mick in The Caretaker. He also assistant directed Little Murders and The Water Engine.

Jeff is in theater because he loves it. However he is saddened to see that "theater is dying," because people want only to be entertained. Drama demands input from the audience. It is an opportunity to share a creative experience with a group of people. The actors and all involved in the production are just people who are trying to create art and share it with other people. They are trying with all their being to create something and communicate it to you, the audience.

A play makes you think about your values, because however you respond to it, you must ask yourself why you feel as you do. "You don't re-examine yourself while watching Laverne and Shirley."

One thing that upsets Jeff is that people tend to think that actors are different from other people. "We're just like anyone else on campus." Most actors are not narrow because of their interest in theater. Similarly, theater is not so intellectual that only a few people can understand it. "Anyone can enjoy it."

Jeff prefers Villanova's theater program to others because "you deal with all aspects of theater." He can write, direct, build sets, and design sets as well as act. Jeff will graduate in May 1980. He hopes to either form or join a repertory company thereafter.

Life Reflected in War

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

David Rabe's Streamers, currently in production at the Harold Prince Theatre (University of Pennsylvania), is an intense, compelling drama that deals not only with the tragedy of the Vietnam war but with the explosive, battling elements which oftime surface in man's nature. Violence, whether acted out in southeast Asia or on the social and personal battlefield is almost always senseless; however, tragically so, it appears at times to be unavoidable.

Streamers is the final play in a trilogy by Rabe, a former Villanova professor, and follows Rabe's previous successful efforts — Sticks and Bones and The Basic Training of Pavlo Hummel. The Philadelphia Company production of the award winning play (1976 Drama Critics Award) is the first such staging in the area.

The choice by the repertory group is a good one from both a financial and an aesthetic perspective.

The popularity of television and cinematic portrayals of the Vietnam war (Friendly Fire, The Deer Hunter) are testimony to the presence of a sizeable audience interested in seeing the war dealt with visually; this interest naturally extends to the theatre.

Although Vietnam as a subject is topical, from an artistic viewpoint the war seems somewhat distant to us now affording us the opportunity for objective analysis — a necessary viewpoint for art. Perhaps Rabe himself has gained distance from the conflict which he took part in.

In his third statement on the affair, where Vietnam plays a relatively minor role, Rabe transcends the specifics of the war itself and reaches for universals. He cannot be accused of being a war playwright.

Set in an army barracks in 1965 Streamers largely revolves around four diverse and complex characters. Richie (Bruce Jason), an impulsive homosexual, Billy (Mark Brewer), a bright, latent homosexual and Roger (Lee Williams), a young black man who has risen above ghetto life, all room together in what appears to be a typical army existence. Time is occupied with training exercises and basic army duties.

Into this seemingly routine existence enters Carlyle (Rozwill Young), a black, mentally imbalanced KP; he is aptly classified as a transient. Carlyle hates the army and is not afraid to vocalize his opinion. Unlike Roger, he finds no solace in "cleaning up messes" and mopping floors.

Young captures the sometime humorous yet underlying animal quality of Carlyle well. His portrayal of the socially and psychologically maimed KP is impressive. From the moment

Curtain Call

As its second offering of the fall season, Vasey Theatre of Villanova University, will present Cole — A Musical Revue. The show will run from October 17 thru 21, and 24 thru 28. All shows are at 8 p.m.

The show is a rousing revue of music and dance from America's best loved and most celebrated songwriter, Cole Porter. The magic of Cole's world will come alive with the frenetic energy of flappers and the smoke-filled settings of speakeasies. Top hats and "tails" are all the rage in this uproarious revue of that marvelous era of the '20's.

Vasey Theatre is located at Lancaster and Ithan Avenues; free parking is available, as well as group rates and special discounted subscription plans.

Sound Waves

By MICHAEL BRODE

Emerald City, Cherry Hill's floundering attempt at a chic discotheque, is introducing a new series of concert performances by rock/new wave acts. The early line-up includes the explosive David Johansen Group (Oct. 14), the hot new B-52's (Oct. 21) and those neurotic new wavers, Talking Heads (Nov. 5-6) ... Speaking of Johansen, his new album "In Style" is drawing rave reviews from the critics. Catch his dynamic act tomorrow night, at the Tower Theater, with Ian Hunter ... New albums scheduled for release this week include Bonnie Raitt's "The Glow" and Santana's "Marathon" ... When The Cars played Houston's Music Hall recently, they invited fans to come to the parking lot of a nearby record store and take out their frustrations on a car. Sledgehammers were provided and a smashing good time was had by all ... The long-awaited new Eagles album, "The Long Run", has been received with mixed reviews. Most of the criticism has been aimed at the group's clumsy attempt at social comment, a severe departure from their previous simplistic lyrical style ... To Whom It May Concern: Frank Zappa has cut off his long hair and is now sporting a style reminiscent of David Bowie's Ziggy Stardust days. Just another lad insane ... For you jazz buffs, Chick Corea and Gary Burton, two extraordinary musicians, will be appearing Oct. 17 at the Valley Forge Music Fari ... Two new bands from England, The Records and Sniff 'n the Tears, have released extremely impressive debut albums. Their singles, "Starry Eyes" and "Driver's Seat" respectively, have been receiving extensive airplay and concert tours for both groups are in the making ... Maybe it's me, but I can't figure out why David Werner's "Doesn't Anybody Know What's Right" wasn't more popular. The chord structure is downright mean and the vocals are vintage Bowie ... And as long as we're voicing opinions, what the hell is the reasoning behind these inane sketches of our favorite rock star that have been popping up on shows like the Midnight Special and Don Kirschner's Rock Concert? These things must be aimed at arousing 12-year-olds. Recently I have had to suffer through Rod Stewart rockin' 'n rollin' with a group of farmhands, David Bowie exchange kisses (!) with various male and female members of a mob of apparent disciples, and even the savagely wild Iggy Pop, who sang a song lying on his stomach in a narrow corridor while wrapped in plastic. Wouldn't it make a lot more sense to just tape the performer and his band playing the actual song? It's bad enough having to stay up till the sun rises just to catch some of these shows without being rewarded with artificial trash.

The Ramones

Rock and Roll High School

By STEVEN COMBS

Who are the Ramones? That's the question I heard when I told people that I was going to the Ramones' concert Tuesday night at the Walnut St. Theater. Well, the Ramones are loud, obnoxious rock and rollers who can claim credit for inspiring most of today's punk bands. Their songs include Teenage Lobotomy, Beat On the Brat With a Baseball Bat, and Needles and Pins.

Their show opened with a movie, Rock and Roll High School, starring, of course, the Ramones. This flick is a minor miracle. Filmed in four weeks on a budget of $200,000, it is definitely a grade B cheapie. However, the man behind it, Roger Corman, is the king of cheap and his magic has worked one more time.

Mary Woronov plays principal Togar who decides that rock and roll is too dangerous to tolerate. She demonstrates this with her rockometer. A white mouse is placed between a pair of speakers. As the decibel level increases, the corresponding musical group is indicated. The mouse appears unharmed at the Donny and Marie level. Anxiety sets in when the meter registers Kansas and Foreigner. The cage begins to shake at the decibel count for Ted Nugent and The Who. When the sound reaches Ramones intensity, the mouse explodes.

P.J. Soles is Riff Randell, rock 'n roller. She leads a rebellion with the Ramones' helpWhen confronted with armed cops and an ultimatum to give up or else, they do what any punk would do. They blow up the school.

Now all of this sounds pretty inane and it is. There is no social message here. Rock and Roll High School is just a bunch of crazies making a quick flick for fun and profit. They seem successful on both counts.

Meanwhile, back at the theater, the Ramones try to follow their own warm-up and give all the punks in the crowd something to jump around to. The noise level rarely varies. You can tell that they're banging away on a different chord when a different part of your body starts shaking. There is certainly an opportunity to get your aggressions out. After jumping, screaming, shaking, and flailing like a spastic rag doll for several songs, all the nastiness in your body just seeps out onto the floor.

The individual musical abilities of the Ramone brothers aren't worth mentioning. The audience was really more interesting. There were plenty of gals in leather pants and leopard body suits. Several people wore large amounts of metal chains, pins, etc. Dark eye makeup and purple lipstick was a must for the truly chic. And sunglasses were fairly plentiful for a rainy October evening indoors.

The Ramones' set was mercifully short with two encores to shouts of "Hey ho, let's go". The entire affair was something like a charismatic religious meeting with people shouting, writhing about, and speaking in tongues.

If you get a chance to see Rock and Roll High School before it's put on television, it would be worth the trip. But going to a Ramones concert is something best put off until the craziness builds up inside you to the point that only a good scream will help. Then it's "Gabba gabba hey" and off to the show.

Tennis Continues Win Streak

By BRUCE MURRAY

The women's tennis team won four more matches last week and extended their winning streak to nine consecutive matches. The highlight of the last week was the hard fought, (3-2) victory over Mount St. Mary's. Against Rosemont, Gwynedd Mercy, and Cheyney St. the netgals won handily, by a score of 5-0 each time.

According to Coach Langran, "The girls played an excellent match against Mount St. Mary's — it was one of the most exciting matches of this year." This victory was especially significant in that it was the one hundreth victory for women's tennis (12 year history) at Villanova. The netgals are the first women's athletic team at Villanova to reach that plateau.

Against Mount St. Mary's, the first doubles (Bonnie Stokes-Diane Cappucio) and the second doubles (Jeannie Rignante-Monica Shultes) both won. Senior captain Colleen Nolan also won at third singles. Freshman Carol Harrison (10-1) has the best individual record on the team.

Next week the netgals will be trying to better their 9-2 record when they play at home. On Monday, the varsity will host Glassboro State while the JV's play at Eastern. On Tuesday the varsity will host Delaware Valley Community College.

Stickgals Lose Close Game

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The women's soccer team has played very well in most of their games this season but have a deceiving record to show for it. After winning their first game of the year, Coach Lee Stevens' squad lost four games in a row, three losses with identical 1-0 scores, to post a 1-4 record as of this writing. Despite the record, Stevens credited senior goalie Susie Stroud with "playing excellent games in the 1-0 losses." In last week's 1-0 loss to Rutgers, Stroud made 11 saves and 16 saves in the 1-0 loss to Princeton the following Saturday.

Looking ahead to Thursday's opponent, Swarthmore, Stevens said "We should be able to beat them, but after losing three games I'm not optimistic. We're playing good soccer, but just not putting the ball in the goal." But he did seem optimistic in facing the first-year University of Pennsylvania team tomorrow, 10:00 on the field across from the Fieldhouse. Stevens also pointed out that although last year's team totaled five wins against five defeats, their record after five games stood at 1-4. Hopefully behind co-captains Robin Glackin and Carol Boyle, this year's team can break .500 again.

One complaint the second year coach expressed was his displeasure that in order to save money, a lot of teams hire one referee for games, whereas Villanova hires two. "One referee can't keep an eye on all the action," Stevens stressed.

Volleyball Wins

By SARA KELLY

Wednesday night, the women's volleyball team increased their winning record to 4-1 by defeating Gwynedd College with an impressive rally in the final two games.

After a slow start in the first game, losing 14-16, the team exploded to dominate Gwynedd with scores of 15-8 and 15-6. They later defeated Bryn Mawr in three straight games with the powerful arm of Lisa Ortlip, whose spike is virtually nonreturnable.

When asked to compare last year's team to the 1979 Wildcats, Coach Gertrude Jennings stated, "This year's team is better. They're moving better than last year."

In a close game on Friday night, the team beat Cabrini College to establish a very impressive record of 6-1. On her birthday, Sarah Holyoke executed several very important plays which enabled the Wildcats to eliminate Cabrini. Coach Jennings commented that "Sarah is consistent and can anticipate where the ball is going."

The two teams brawled for all five games, then the Cats finished off their tired opponents with scores of 15-11, 13-15, 15-10, 10-15, and 15-5.

The junior varsity team increased their overall record to 3-0 with a win over the Cabrini JV, earning scores of 15-10, 6-15, and 15-13.

The teams face off against Drexel University Tuesday night at 7:00 in the Butler Annex.

Leddy Starts A Women's Tradition

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

She has been described as possibly the best women's collegiate runner on the East Coast. And best of all she goes to Villanova. But her name and achievements have lacked the fanfare that her male counterparts have received and she just does her thing, usually unpublicized. She is Brigid Leddy.

Until six years ago, Villanova didn't have a women's running team. So when cross-country and track teams were developed, they couldn't rely on a past tradition for quality runners. Leddy is one such runner who will enable the coaching staff to give an example as to the type of athletes Villanova now has.

She began her running career in high school during her freshman year "just as something to go along with swimming." But by her junior year she was running the mile and with graduation she decided to choose between Villanova and La Salle. "LaSalle had a better facility but the Cats had the better track tradition and potential," Leddy explained.

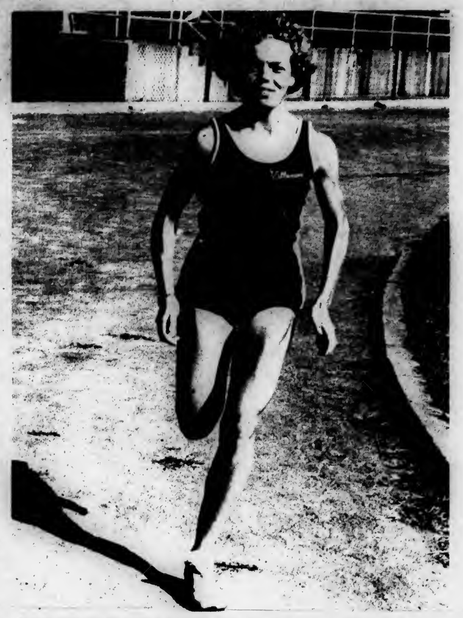
"The running teams aren't just scholarship people. All are welcome to run, there aren't any cuts," noted Leddy, who also pointed out that scholarships in women's track began just three years ago. "The one negative thing, though, is that Villanova is wasting a great resource, the men's track team and a growing women's team. Both have great reputations; it's foolish to waste them without good track facilities, especially indoors."

While analyzing this year's team, Leddy spoke with much optimism. "This year's cross country team is better than ever. We're building on our field events, sprinters and distance runners. We have an all-around good team which will score points in a lot of areas." The petite runner also added, "We are even getting experienced freshmen runners on the team, that will help."

Because track is such an individual sport, setting team goals are difficult. But, one meet which does stand out for the team is the Nationals in Florida. "I hope we can send as many people as possible to Florida," the Accounting major expressed. As for personal goals, Leddy wants most to improve her times. The holder of seven Villanova women's records, Leddy would like to knock off at least seven seconds off her 1500 meter time, her specialty. Her most recent attempt of gaining her season's goal was a first place finish in a cross country meet at Rutgers last weekend.

In today's athletics, winning has developed into the only reason for competing. The Havertown native has found a different reason for competition. "I get a feeling of self-satisfaction from my achievements. I like to win but competing gives me a change to meet people, travel, and have fun." She continues, "Working hard has its rewards. Running helps me put everything in perspective."

While talking to the Penn Relay's 1500 meter champ, you realize that there is more to sports than going out and feeling you have to win to be important. Brigid Leddy competes and Brigid Leddy wins. But during the course of her victories she has a good time. Because of this, whether she finishes first or fifth, Brigid Leddy is important.



Brigid Leddy has been a key scorer in women's cross country in her four years at Villanova.

Harriers Undefeated Hopes Collapse In Paul Short Run

By RAY ENGLER

Villanova's dreams of an undefeated Cross-Country season were shattered last Saturday afternoon on the lush green Lehigh University 10,000 meter course when the Wildcats lost to a stubborn Penn State team, 51-74, in the Paul Short Memorial Run also known as the Lehigh Invitational.

Although Villanova took both first and second in the race, Penn State was able to garner fifth (Larry Mangan, 30:56.9) sixth (Jeff Adkins, 31:02.6), ninth (John Ziegler, 31:12.1), fifteenth (Tom Rapp, 31:35.0) and sixteenth (Alan Scharsu, 31:42.2), for their total of 51.

The two superior performances by junior Amos Korir (who won the race with a commanding time of 30:39.2) and senior Carey Pinkowski (who took second with a solid 30:49.5) notwithstanding, the Cat harriers were unimpressive. Dean Childs, a senior from Canada, ran well enough to take 13th place with a time of 31:28.5. Soph Kevin Dillon, who admitted going out too fast for the first mile, finished a sub-par for him, 26th in the .75 man field, with a time of 32:10.8. Senior Don Paige, who cramped up after three miles, also finished lower than expected; 32nd with a time of 32:35.2 for the 10,000 meters. These five led to the Villanova final score of 74.

The other two entrants for Villanova in the race were senior Chris Shafer (35th, 32:41.1) and Mike Lacey (47th, 33:23.7).

The Wildcats were hurt much more last week by the absence of Sydney Maree (the Champion of this race last year) than in the previous week's meet at the EAA. Maree, still suffering from a painful foot injury, is hoping for a full recovery in time to run tomorrow in a quadrangular meet between Villanova, Delaware, St. Joe's, Haverford College, and Temple at 11 a.m. at Belmont Platesu in Fairmount Park.

The final scores: Penn State-51, Villanova-74, Navy-95, Maryland-108, FDU-110, George Mason-132, Queens-197, Haverford-209, Lehigh-213, Rider-268, and East Stroudsburg State-356.

Lehigh also sponsored an open race at the conclusion of the Championship race. Villanova sophomore John Hunter finished a solid second, sandwiched by two Penn State runners.

Amos Kipkorir (91) finished first in the Paul Short Memorial Run last Saturday.

Field Hockey

By KATHY STICKEL

Debby Smith and Lisa Alderfer led the offense with five and four goals respectively for the field hockey team. Posting a 1-3-1 record so far, the tally does not account for the close games.

In their most recent loss to Lafayette, the opponents scored two goals in the first minute. The Wildcats fought hard to catch up with goalie Marybeth Campanelli who had 16 saves, four in one on one situation. The match ended in a 3-2 loss for Villanova.

Freshman Sherry Boyle holds the sweeper/halfback position and, according to Coach Cathy Miller, "has been a sound performer in their last few games."

The junior varsity has established a very respectable 4-1-1 record with sound wins over LaSalle, 4-0 and Swarthmore, 7-0.

On Monday, the Wildcats will travel to Eastern College and Coach Miller feels that, "If past performances are a sample, we should beat them easily."

Cats Paddled By Penquins

By JOE JASEK

It was another long Saturday for the Villanova Wildcats as the Youngstown State Fightin' Penguins handed the Wildcats their third straight loss 27-22, as 4,837 fans watched the Cats' record fall to 1-4 for the year.

Luck seemed to be on the Villanova side this week as Dwight Dumas fumbled the first carry of the game and Villanova recovered on the Youngstown 23 yard line. Villanova could not get a first down, so Chuck Bushbeck came on to attempt a 26 yard field goal. Unfortunately, the kick went wide left. Youngstown first drew blood when tailback Robby Robson took a 36 yard pass from quarterback Keith Snoddy with 7:19 left in the first period. After Villanova took the kick-off, the Cats manufactured a masterful eleven play drive capped off by a 23 yard end-around that caught the Penguins' flat-footed. The score knotted at 7-7 with 12:40 gone in the first period.

The second quarter found TB Robeon take a one yard plunge with 8:22 elapsed. Even though Youngstown scored, the defense did a fine job as it took the Penguins seven plays to go fourteen yards and find paydirt.

punted to Villanova and the Cats assembled a seven play 42 yard scoring drive to boost the score to 22-14 with 14:17 elapsed in the second quarter.

The whole second half belonged to Youngstown State, much to the dismay of a tight Villanova defense. With 3:15 gone in the third quarter, Youngstown's Robson again took the ball over from one yard out to tighten the score to 22-21. All the Cats had to do the rest of the game was to hold on to the ball and shut down the potent Youngstown offense and the Cats would have had their second win of the season, but with 7:14 left in the game, Robby Robson once again put the Penguins ahead to stay. His two yard run lifted the Penguin lead to 27-22. No matter what the Wildcats tried, they could not muster a score to halt their losing streak.

Coach Bedesem stated, "We lost this game, and it hurts a lot. It's a game we should have won, and we didn't win it." The Cats were hit with several penalties in the second half which astounded Coach Bedesem.

On the brighter side, the Wildcats did have some stellar per-

Football player Don Ziesel is the VILLANOVAN'S first Budweiser Athlete of the Week. The fullback had an excellent day last Saturday despite the team loss as he plunged for touchdowns. His longest gain of the day was a 73 yard run, and had 111 yards rushing at halftime. The junior finished the day with 139 yards. Don was nominated for this award by Henry Amoroso.

Amtrak Promises Tunnel Renovations

Officials Pledge Safety Actions

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Amtrak officials promised to begin renovations on the train station tunnel behind Mendel Hall in a meeting last Thursday with Villanova to discuss pedestrian safety.

Other proposals from the meeting, which was attended by representatives from Villanova, Amtrak, PennDot and Radnor Township, include an elevated footbridge over the train tracks, a crosswalk on Route 320 in front of St. Mary's and an investigation of traffic patterns on Lancaster Avenue.

The major renovation in the tunnel will be the enlargement of the catch basins and drains below it. "We can make the catch basins under the tunnel bigger so that it takes more debris to stop them up," stated Richard Pinkham, director of transportation and commuter services for Amtrak. "It would only take one newspaper to stop up the one we have now. As long as there is some trash there they won't work."

Another repair under consideration is the installation of a new floor in the tunnel. "We will definitely look into a new floor," commented Jerry Grodzi, Amtrak's supervisor of structures. "It wouldn't go wall to wall. Perhaps we could leave a ditch to help drain off the water."

Also proposed are a new coat of paint and an improvement in the lighting system.

"That tunnel is not passable at night because of the darkness. A lot of students are unwilling to go into it," noted Fr. Deegan, vice president for student life.

Amtrak officials have also agreed to pay the cost of renovating the tunnel, which is the property of Amtrak. "You don't have to worry about where the money is coming from," Pinkham stated at the meeting. "We'll spend whatever is necessary."

An elevated footbridge over the train tracks, similar to that over the P&W station across campus, was suggested as an alternative to repairing the tunnel. Amtrak would not be responsible for the construction costs, however.

The problem of pedestrians crossing Lancaster Avenue was also discussed at the meeting. Radnor Township Committeeman and Chairman of Public Safety John Cappelli recommended that the University submit a proposal for safety measures to the township traffic safety committee, which would then act upon the proposal.

"Our committee can do surveys and traffic counts and see what is suitable," Cappelli said. "I recommend that the University stay with this. I'm willing to support it in every way that I can."

Radnor Chief of Police Maurice Hennessy commented, "The main problem is the number of students and heavy volume of traffic. We'd like to get the students to cross where they are supposed to cross. We also realize that the speed on Lancaster is a problem. This is our job."

Bob Roland, a district engineer for PennDot, proposed that a pedestrian walkway be attached to the outside of the narrow bridge on 320 instead of widening it.

"If you're looking for a quick solution to the pedestrian safety problem, the best solution is a pedestrian walkway attached to the outside. There's no question that the bridge is too narrow and totally substandard, but it would cost about half a million dollars to build a new one."

Villanova is filing a complaint with the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission, which owns the bridge. The final decision on the footbridge and responsibility for the cost of construction will rest with the PUC.

SGA President P.J. Winterhalter also proposed a cross walk with some type of light in front of St. Mary's, and delayed traffic lights on the corner of Ithan Ave. and Lancaster. Both possibilities are being investigated by the University. Winterhalter's other priority is the renovation of the tunnel.

"It's not over yet," he commented. "We want these measures implemented as soon as possible. All these proposals seem to be in the general interest of everyone. The safety of everyone is involved here, and we have to find answers so that we can avoid future accidents."

Girl Dies After Train Mishap

Dorothy Zimmerman, 19, of Ridley Park, died at Bryn Mawr Hospital, approximately 6 p.m., Tuesday night, October 16.

The Villanova freshman had been in critical condition since October 1, when she was either struck by an express train or thrown off-balance by the wind suction it created.

Zimmerman underwent several hours of neurosurgery after the accident.

Funeral arrangements will be handled by the White-Luttrell funeral home in Ridley Park.

Zimmerman is survived by her parents, John C. and Joan Dougherty Zimmerman, by Ellen M., Charles H., J. Patrick, and Karl A. Zimmerman, by her grandmother, Anna M. Zimmerman, and grandfather J. Howard Dougherty.

A Mass of Christian Burial is to be held today at 10 a.m., in St. Madeline's Church, Morton Avenue and Penn Street, Ridley Park.

AAUP Seeks Bargaining

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Villanova's chapter of the American Association of University Professors voted unanimously to petition the National Labor Relations Board, requesting an election for collective bargaining at Villanova.

Dr. Bernard F. Reilly, professor of history, made the motion at the AAUP meeting Tuesday afternoon, authorizing the AAUP to petition the NLRB during this academic year.

Should the NLRB approve the request, an election for faculty unionization may be held on campus.

The petitioning procedures for collective bargaining began last April, when the cards were ditributed to the faculty, cards designating the AAUP as bargaining agent were distributed to the faculty.

Faculty members who signed the cards and returned them to the AAUP, did not pledge votes for collective bargaining, or for the AAUP as agent, but merely indicated they would like to see a vote on unionization.

According to AAUP President Dr. James M. Bergquist, about 53 1/2 percent of the faculty returned the petitioning cards. Before petitioning the NLRB, 30 percent of the faculty must indicate support of an election.

"Within three days of mailing the cards, the 30 percent number was achieved," said Bergquist.

The total of returned cards now is 200 out of about 374 faculty members, he said.

There was some discussion at the meeting that the AAUP wait until more cards are collected before petitioning the NLRB.

"The way to get more cards is to begin to act as if we're going to do something with them," said Reilly.

In 1973, a proposal for collective bargaining at Villanova was defeated by 40 votes. Before that election, Bergquist said the AAUP collected cards from less than 50 percent of the faculty.

The chapter voted to distribute petitioning cards last semester at its April 19 meeting, after an AAUP executive committee poll showed that 73 percent of the faculty would like to see a collective bargaining election.

Senate to Meet

By BILL ROCK

This afternoon at 4:00 p.m. in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall, the Univeristy Senate will hold its second meeting of the school year.

One of the primary issues confronting the Senate will be a motion presented by Senator James J. Cleary concerning the present Course/Teacher Evaluation Policy. Senator Cleary seeks to have an ad hoc committee to the Senate formed for the purpose of evaluating the current system and determining whether improvements are needed.

Also on tap for this afternoon's meeting is a proposal to petition President Driscoll for additional funding for the Office of University Relations. The additional money will be used in the expansion of the office's fund-raising capacity.

Senator Richard A. Neville of the Rules and Review Committee will present to the Senate two consitutional changes concerning the University Planning Committee.

The first concerns changing its title to the University Planning and Priorities Committee. The second declares "that the committee shall annually evaluate the administrative priorities to see if they are in keeping with the institutional priorities set by the University Senate."

Another member of the Rules and Review Committee, Dr. Harry R. Strack, will present his report and recommendations on the structure and organization of the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee. Strack's recommendations include a limit of one three-year term for all committee members and a limit of one representative from each department at a particular time.

This afternoon's Senate meeting is open and all students are invited to attend.

VILLANOVAN Takes Top Awards

Paper Lauded by Pennsylvania Collegiate Press

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

The Villanovan, newspaper of record for the University, won top honors in three major categories at the annual Pennsylvania Collegiate Press Journalism contest, it was announced at the Association's 1979 convention held at West Chester State College.

The Villanovan placed first in the News, Advertising, and Sports categories among some twenty participating schools including Carnegie-Mellon, Duquesne, Penn State, and Drexel universities.

"We are very proud that we've captured so many awards considering the fact that it was a state competition and that we went up against schools with journalism programs," exclaimed Editor-In-Chief Terry O'Toole.

Sophomore staffer Patrick Flynn's "WKVU Marathon Breaks Record" (November 1978) was chosen as top news entry. Judge Flora Rathburn (Homestead Daily Messenger) cited Flynn's use of quotes and lead as major factors in her choice.

Jerry Dougherty, a junior news writer, received honorable mention for his article "Illness Strikes Campus" which dealt with the flu epidemic that struck many campuses last year.

David Dear, managing editor of the paper, received first prize in Advertising for his "Get It Once a Week" ad. Dear's concept, according to Judge Russ Hickey (Indiana Gazette), "promotes the newspaper well; it has eye appeal."

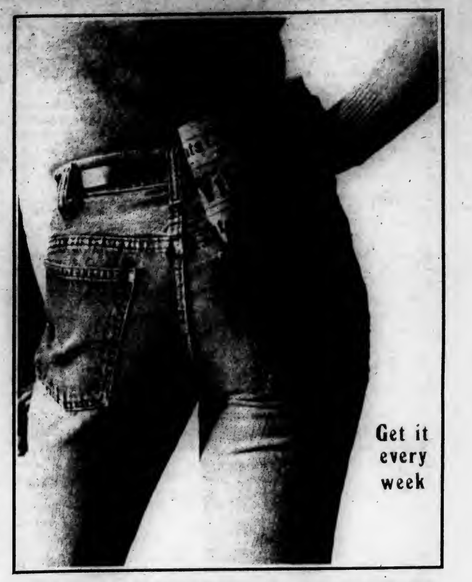
Brian Cecchi, advertising editor, also placed in the competition receiving third prize for what was labeled "a good image building advertisement."

Charles Anderson (The Meadville Tribune) judged Jerry Knafo's article on former basketball coach Mike Fratella as best sports story complementing Knafo's use of wording and high quality writing.

Nate Cooper received honorable mention for a contribution to the Sports Features category.

In all the Villanovan received a total of six awards.

"This is the second year that we've entered and we went from one to six awards," continued O'Toole. "I think that we have made a concentrated effort to upgrade the paper both visually and in terms of writing quality." "I think that the awards reflect that."



The ad that said "Get it every week" got it from the Pennsylvania Collegiate Press Association. Managing Editor David Dear took first prize for its design.

Speakers Bureau Expanding

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

This fall marks another step in the continued growth of the Speakers Bureau, a community service of the University's Public Relations Office.

The bureau, which makes a portion of Villanova's intellectual resources available to area civic and professional groups and other social organizations, has recently enlarged its list of faculty and staff speakers from 60 to 71.

Another segment of the bureau included in the expansion process is the collection of topics on which the bureau's members are prepared to speak, with the number of topics now at 349 compared to last year's 150.

Eugene J. Ruane, director of University public relations, is not at all surprised by the steady growth of the organization which he began three years ago.

Ruane points to the mutual sense of enjoyment expressed by the speakers and the community organizations as the major catalyst for the expansion; he reasons that more faculty and staff offer their services as the bureau establishes a strong, dependable reputation.

When asked to characterize the incentives a faculty or staff member has for offering his or her services as a speaker, Ruane replied that "professional ego" plays a significant role. "They know they're experts, they want to share the knowledge they spent such time acquiring," Ruane said. "The enjoyment of the experience and loyalty to the University are also factors in their willingness to offer their services," he added.

Although the bureau gained just eleven new speakers over last year, the increase in the number of topics offered was much more dramatic, in fact it represented a jump of over 130 percent from the previous year.

Speakers Bureau Coordinator Catherine Taylor accounted for the huge increase in topics by pointing to a process through which a speaker restructures the range of his or her subject area. "Expansion comes in topics as people ask for specific lectures on specific areas," she said.

Enlargement is not the only process to be noticed in the area of speaker topics. Among the new topic categories to be chosen from in this year's bureau booklet are energy, ethics, aging, biology, and career planning. The areas added each year as new categories "reflect what is important to people at the moment," Ruane suggested.

The purpose of the bureau, to share a portion of Villanova's intellectual resources with the surrounding community, is quite important to Ruane. He refers to the bureau as " . . . the centerpiece of the University's community service program."

Both Mr. Ruane and Miss Taylor anticipate further growth in the Speakers Bureau as the reputation of this community-oriented organization builds.

Athletic Expansion Halted

By BILL ROCK

A domed football staduim, which would have housed University athletic activities and intramural events, might have been the next construction project on campus after the completion of the Connelly Center this Spring.

In an extraordinary meeting on May 11 of this year, however, the University Senate defeated the proposal presented by the Athletic Advisory Committee to dome the football stadium and expand athletic facilities.

The Athletic Advisory Committee, chaired by Dr. Barry Young, was originally charged in 1976 to examine the governing structure of the Athletic Department and to recommend specific economies to be realized in the area of athletics.

"We were unable to fulfill this charge because certain budgetary information concerning salaries and other items was not made available to us," explained Dr. Young. "We therefore proceeded to look for a way in which the athletic program could be more self-sufficient. I believe what we submitted was the best alternative."

The committee's plan called for the construction of a sports complex modeled after a domed facility at Northern Arizona University. The structure would house virtually all of the University's athletic activities, including intramural events. The committee estimated that the cost of such an undertaking would be 7 million dollars.

On the last day of the spring semester, the Senate met to consider the Athletic Advisory Committee's recommendations. The proposal was defeated by a vote of 21 to 2. Criticism centered largely on the committee's failure to deal with the possibility of an athletic facility strictly housing intramural activities.

"I cannot see the point of spending several million dollars on an intramural center alone," responded Young. "Such a facility would bring in no income. The

Honors Schedules Italy Trip

Dr. George Radan

This week the Honors Program announced its study trip "The Renaissance in Italy," scheduled for the Spring semester.

Organized by Dr. George Radan, chairman of the art and art history department, the course will consist of an intensive investigation of the art and culture of Renaissance Italy during the week of Spring Break, March 1-10.

The trip will center on the three focal centers of the Renaissance: Florence, Rome, and Italy.

The course will offer three credits, and is open to non-Honors majors on a limited basis. Students in the course will be expected to keep a travel diary and to write a paper by the end of the semester.

The price of the trip, $739, includes airfare to Milan, transportation between cities, and return flight from Rome. Also included are: all hotels (three nights in Rome, three in Florence, two in Venice — all with private bath, double occupancy), continental breakfast each morning, luggage transfer between hotels, all tips and taxes, service charges other than personal, full-day sightseeing tour of each city, and U.S. Departure Tax. Lunches and dinners will be at the expense of each student.

In Florence — in the shadow of Brunellschi's dome — towering majestically above the Arno Valley, students will view the Baptistery where artists such as Donatello, Botticelli, Leonardo, and Michelangelo were baptized. They will visit the Uffizi, designed by Vasari and once housing the offices of the Medici; the Bargello, originally a medieval constablehouse; the Palazzo Vecchio, where centuries ago the bells rang out at the execution of Savonarola.

The first Renaissance church, the private chapel of the Medici by Brunelleschi, and that same architect's Pazzi chapel for another aristocratic family will also be visited. Students will get a glimpse into life as a private citizen in Renaissance Florence when they visit the Palazzo Avanzati, as well as a look at the life of a monk with the visit to San Marco.

In Venice, they will experience the splendor of the culmination of the Renaissance, the city of Giorgione and Titian. They will see how the Byzantine, medieval, and Renaissance blend in S. Marco, the only orthodox church on the western soil of Italy, with its golden altar. The site is magnificent, the largest enclosed square in the world.

They will see the Doge's palace, symbol of Venetian power on the Grand Canal; the Academy of Art, once the covenant church of Saint Mary of Charity, with its fabulous masterpieces of the Bellini family (founders of the Venetian Renaissance school) and the works by Mantegna, the Lottos, and the dazzling Tintorettos.

In Rome they will visit the Vatican, built over a Roman street housing the bones of St. Peter with its tombs, the altars of Bernini, the new Michelangelo, the works of Bramante, the Sistine Chapel and Raphael's frescoes.

One full day will be spent in the Vatican Museum viewing Raphael's rooms, the Stanze, where one can see the fulfillment of the High Renaissance; the Pio-Clemente museum to see the masterpieces which inspired the renaissance; the Borgia apartments decorated by Pintorricchio.

The Imperial forums will also be visited, the excavations of which were so essential for the spiritual revival of the Renaissance, and the Bath of Caracalla, housing a museum, and the Domus Aurea of Nero's fabulous Golden House. The Early Christian basilicas such as St. Paul's Outside the Walls, St. John Lateran, and St. Peter in Chains

NROTC Observes U.S. Corps' Anniversary

By PETER C. BOARDMAN

On Saturday morning of Parents' Weekend, friends and family of Villanova's Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps (NROTC) gathered in John Barry Hall to witness the Annual President's Fall Review of the NROTC Midshipmen Battalion. But, due to inclement weather during the previous week, the Fall Review was postponed until October 23.

This did not stop the NROTC Battalion from continuing with ceremonies commemorating the 204th anniversary of the founding of our nation's Navy and Marine Corps. The Midshipmen Battalion marched in unison to St. Thomas of Villanova Chapel, where they participated in a Military Mass celebrated by Father Hugh J. Cronin, O.S.A., a commander in the United States Naval Reserve. As in the past, the Villanova Singers offered accompaniment for the Mass.

Following the Mass, the battalion marched to Bartley Cafeteria for a reception with their family members and friends. A ceremonious cutting of the cake by Midshipmen Battalion Commander Douglas A. Wolfe and an inspiring talk by NROTC Unit Commanding Officer Colonel Ben W. Summers, USMC marked the founding of the Navy and Marine Corps.

But the festivities were not over yet. The Midshipmen briefly visited campus tailgate parties before returning to march in a pre-game ceremony before a standing-room-only crowd at Villanova Stadium. The entire Battalion of 165 Midshipmen spanned the football field in their individual companies: ALPHA, BRAVO, CHARLIE, WHISKEY, and BAND/Staff. During the playing of The Star Spangled Banner, the entire Midshipmen Battalion saluted in unison. Villanova NROTC extends an invitation to the Villanova community to witness the President's Fall Review this coming Tuesday, 3:45 p.m. on Mendel Field.

CDC Offers Grad Seminar

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Senior year signals decision-making concerning future career plans. To alleviate senior anxiety attacks the Villanova Career Development Center in conjunction with Bryn Mawr, Haverford, and Rosemont Colleges will sponsor a two-day "Consortium of Graduate and Professional Schools," October 30-31.

According to Paul Kenny, acting coordinator of the Career Development Center, 52 colleges and universities, primarily from the Middle Atlantic region, will participate in this "unique" recruitment program to "provide students with an outstanding opportunity to get first hand information on admissions procedures, and other questions frequently asked. People who are in decision making positions will be here and they can give the most accurate and efficient information."

This consortium, the only program of its kind in the Philadelphia area, is "an innovative approach to graduate and professional school recruiting," states Kenny, "usually 20 to 30 schools come at different times a resulting in a sparse and unpredicatable student turnout." These sparse turnouts is one reason why Kenny contacted the Career Planning Directors of the three participating colleges last January, to combine their efforts for an effective program which would benefit area colleges, and all citizens of the college communities, not only the seniors. All colleges suffer from the same recruitment problems.

The Consortium will begin at Villanova on Tuesday, October 30 in the West and North Lounges of Dougherty Hall, and will move to Bryn Mawr on the 31st, in Thomas Great Hall. Both days the program will begin at 10 a.m. and end at 4 p.m.

Law schools, business schools, and graduate schools from the University of Pennsylvania to New York University, to Babson College will be represented. Of the 52 schools scheduled to attend, one-third have MBA programs, one-third Law School programs, and one-third general Arts and Sciences programs.

Honors Trip

Other areas of interest will be the Borghese Museum, the Farnese Palace, once the home of Paul III Farnese, mentor of Michelangelo's Last Judgement, the Lateran Palace, and the Capitolium, an early example of town planning.

Dr. Radan, who will be in charge of the trip, has 15 years of experience with foreign programs. He has served as director of programs for Wayne State University, Northern Kentucky State University, American College in Paris, and presently, as Director of the Villanova-Rosemont Summer Program in Italy. This trip differs from the latter in that the focus includes all three major centers of the Renaissance, rather than just Tuscany, and does not emphasize the creative arts from the practical point of view. This trip emphasizes art history primarily. Dr. Radan speaks Italian and has spent the last 15 summers in Italy.

Interested students should apply to the Honors Program Director. Early application is recommended as places in the course are limited. Questions should be directed to the Honors Office or to Dr. Radan in the AAH office in St. Mary's.

proposal we submitted would have eventually made money for the University. I believe that you have to spend money in order to make it."

Dr. Young was uncertain as to whether the committee's plan, or an amended version of it, might be resurrected at a later date.

"There is a three-man board among the trustees whose function is to consider questions concerning athletics," he explained. "They may review our proposal, but I have heard nothing since last May. At this time, it would appear to be a dead issue."

Emerald Isle In The Spring

By VICKY PARENTE

If the only prospects you have right now for Spring Break are sitting at home and watching the paint peel off your walls, then you'll be interested to know that the Honors Department is offering a course next semester which will provide you with an exciting alternative. The course, entitled Irish Literary Heritage Honors 5501, is being given by Dr. James Murphy, associate professor of English, and the requirements include a trip to Ireland over Spring Break.

The objective of the course according to Dr. Murphy is "to trace the major strands in Irish literature, especially as found in the early epics and myths and in the folk traditions." The class will meet nine to ten times during the semester for two hour periods and course material will include the Irish epic Tain Bo Cualigne, which details the exploits of such figures as Cuchulain and Deidre, Yeats' Mythologies, Treasury of Irish Folk Lore, and selections from the works of Synge, Lady Gregory and Yeats. Dr. Murphy commented that students who have taken his Irish Renaissance course will find this new course a logical supplement since the roots of the Irish Renaissance movement grew out of these historical traditions.

Ennistymon, County Clare, is one of the sites which students traveling to Ireland this spring will visit.

Students will leave for Ireland on February 29 and return March 9. The price of the trip is $709 which includes airfare, hotel room, one meal per day and guided bus tours. The first four days of the trip will be spent in the west of Ireland, the center of the Irish folk tradition. Students will visit Ennis in County Clare, Galway, the Avan Islands where Synge got much of the material for his plays, and Sligo, the birthplace of W.B. Yeats.

The remaining days will be spent in Dublin and will include visits to the Abbey Theatre, Trinity College, and Joyce's Tower site of the opening scene of Ulysses. There will also be a day trip to the Boyne Valley, an area rich in Pre-Christian and Early Christian ruins. Dr. Murphy also promises that students will have plenty of free time to "get the flavor of Ireland," to shop, browse and sample Irish pub life which is "an institution in itself."

Dr. Murphy maintains that the trip to Ireland is an integral part of the course for as he states, "How can you know Joyce's Dubliners without knowing his Dublin?"

Enrollment in the course is limited so Dr. Murphy urges anyone interested to contact him before the Pre-Registration period. A non-refundable deposit of $100 for the trip is due by December 1, with the remainder due at the start of the spring semester. It is important to note that students may go on the trip without taking the course.

As a final note Dr. Murphy commented that, "The trip to Ireland is an excellent way of getting in touch with one of the oldest and richest literary traditions in Europe, in fact, in the world."

Why Come Home Again?

By TONY CENTONE

Whatever happened to the "traditional homecoming?" Where did the bonfires, floats and parades of that festive weekend go? Is homecoming nothing more than a football game in which several of the alumni return and a pretty girl is driven around the football field at halftime? If that's the case, as it seems to be here at Villanova, than something is wrong.

In a recent interview with Ed Rideout, director of the Alumni Association, I tried to find out what Villanova is doing, or not doing, to prepare for homecoming. The Alumni Association plays an important role in the workings of homecoming. It is their job, Rideout stated, to reunite the alumni of years gone by with the students of today. It is one of the two times each year when graduates come back to their alma mater (the other being their reunion) and the only time they are together with Villanova students. There should be some type of interaction between the two but there doesn't seem to be any. "There are many things that could be done," said Mr. Rideout. "Each separate class could host a reception for graduates of different eras. Student associations such as the Union or the Theatre Club could sponsor post or pre-game get-togethers for their former members." The students could inform these alumni of what's new and the alumni could remind the students of what was old. Rideout also mentioned that individual dormitories could prepare something for their former hall members who might venture back to see their old rooms. Some type of parade might also take place, as it once did. The parade would proceed through the campus showing the alumni new places of interest, such as the Connelly Center, and perhaps end up in the Field House parking-lot for a little "you-know-what."

These things could all be done, but they're not. The problem seems to be a lack of cooperation between the Alumni and the student body. Only if both work together could any of this come about. The Alumni is preparing certain events for the returnees such as Mass and a brunch before the game and a post-game reception after, and I'm sure the students are doing their share to prepare for the homecoming festivities at half-time, but this

Meaning In Art

By DEIRDRE FLANAGAN

You've probably shared in the fingerpaint experience in your youth: smudged faces, spackled smocks, and paint everywhere but on the canvas. Now that you've matured, it's time to discard the CRAYOLAS and finger goop and to experience "real art."

How? Through Villanovas' Art and Art History department (AAH), which has facilities to bring out the true Picasso in you. Your empty canvas will turn into a meaningful world of culture and art. The department offers a variety of courses from Art History to Modern Art, American Art, and even a combination of Art and Religion. If these don't bring music to your ears, then tune into some music appreciation and musical composition courses, also offered.

In correlation to these courses, trips have been planned to surrounding museums. This semester students will visit the University of Pennsylvania Museum to see the Egyptian collection. If your cultural drive must be satisfied immediately, take a detour to Falvey Library and indulge in the current Artists Equity Exhibit. This nationwide organization of artists is exhibiting paintings, drawings, and prints. One of the highlights this year is a large watercolor called "Tower Street" done by Giovanni Martino. If you've never seen Tower Street, this is the next best thing to being there.

These works are also for sale, and may be collected immediately after the exhibit which ends October 26. If your walls are presently cluttered, and there's no place to display your masterpieces, wait till March and see them exhibited in the new Connelly Center Art Gallery — designed specially for professional quality art exhibits.

The AAH department has planned many surprises to keep you culturally alert. This Fall they are holding numerous art shows and photography displays including one by Christine Clay (BFA, '78), a freelance artist, and in the Spring they will feature a senior exhibit encompassing work done by BFA seniors.

Now you can feel your inner Picasso beginning to emerge? Perhaps a trip to Italy might enhance the feeling a little more. This summer visit one of the empires of art, enjoy the cultural atmosphere, become acquainted with da Vinci and his works — visit Italy. For further details contact Ms. Cheri Leibold, ext. 238, and become culturally alive.

Project Some Sunshine

By CRAIG BARUK

Project: SUNSHINE is a volunteer organization which provides various types of services to local agencies, hospitals, and schools.

Project: SUNSHINE recruits members from within the Villanova University community, usually students who are able and willing to donate one to three hours of volunteer time a week. No past experience is necessary to become a member. The only prerequisite to joining the organization is strong enthusiasm and a desire to help.

The program's coordinator, Santo Marabella, stated that, "Project: SUNSHINE is one of the most accommodating organizations for students to join here on campus. The students work when they are free and where they feel most comfortable volunteering, whether it be with children or the elderly, and they decide their own degree of involvement in their services."

There are many services members can perform. Among these are tutoring children in such subjects as math, English, social studies, and speech, working on special events, and assisting in therapeutical training.

Last April 28, Project: SUNSHINE launched a special event called Sunshine Day. This event honored over 90 handicapped and mentally retarded children from area institutions. Sunshine Day was financed by Project: Sunshine and the Office for Social Action.

Preparations are now being made for next year's Sunshine Day. The Project: SUNSHINE committee along with the Office for Social Action are planning a benefit show in hopes of raising enough money to make the 1980 Sunshine Day more elaborate. The benefit show will be a take-off on Saturday Night Live and all interested are welcome. Any individuals willing to share a little of their time and special talents are to contact the Office for Social Action in room 121, Tolentine Hall.

"The purpose of the show is to raise money for Sunshine Day, 1980. The extra cash will enable us to make this Sunshine Day more elaborate than last year. Hopefully we'll reach more shut-ins, perhaps as many as 100 more guests."

As a final thought, Marabella commented, "Villanova students have a re-affirmed my belief that they care about those people less fortunate than themselves. Sunshine Day '79 convinced me of that. I am confident that this momentum which began with Project: SUNSHINE last semester will continue to grow stronger as more students get involved each semester. The work students do for Project: SUNSHINE exemplifies the ideals of serious social commitment to those in need. This is what makes our students stand above the others."

Project: SUNSHINE is a worthwhile organization which offers individuals tremendous experience with others along with spiritual and personal growth. Don't waste time, join the other enthusiastic students and help make Sunshine Day 1980 a larger success than last year.

Coming Home Again

What Do They Owe?

Homecoming is the gathering of Villanova Alumni from across the country to renew old friendships, relive campus experiences, and recapture, if only for a brief moment, "that old college spirit."

In these respects, Homecoming is usually a very successful event for participants. Villanova becomes "home" in a way it never was while they were students, and wistful college memories and dreams become temporary reality.

As rapidly as trunks close on the last tailgate parties, many alumni completely sever their ties and commitments to the university for at least another year.

Only one question remains: What do these alumni owe to their institution?

It can certainly be argued that tuition payment for credit hours rendered was a complete and final business transaction. Few of us, however, would be willing to reduce four years of learning to dollars and numbers.

A Villanova degree conveys more than the accumulation of required credit hours. Intangible benefits, without price tags, such as faculty friendships, activities' experience, and the reputation of a quality institution have also been realized. There is a responsibility to repay what we have been given.

For these reasons, the Villanova diploma also imposes obligations upon its bearers. Not a definitive obligation but one that must be made personally. Presently, only 20% of Villanova alumni answer their responsibility through a monetary contribution to the Alumni funds. It is impossible to measure support provided by alumni in other areas.

Is Villanova alumni support sufficient? Unfortunately, no definitive answer can be given to this very difficult question.

One fact remains clear: the continuance and progress of a viable, quality institution of higher learning demands that alumni "come home" more than just once a year.

A High Price For Action

After years of resurging complaints concerning conditions in the pedestrian tunnel beneath the train tracks, after three weeks spent rallying, meeting and discussing, Villanova has finally accomplished something valuable.

Amtrak, responsible for maintenance of the tunnel, promised to remedy the problems of the tunnel's frequent flooding and blockage which is potentially dangerous to pedestrian safety as pedestrians opt for crossing the tracks or bridge on 320 when the tunnel is impassable.

Villanova's appeal, last Thursday, to representatives from Amtrak, PennDOT and Radnor Township produced a series of positive proposals to: renovate the existing tunnel, construct an elevated footbridge over the train tracks, add a crosswalk on Route 320, and investigate traffic patterns on Lancaster Avenue.

The plans are in process. All that is needed now is implementation of these concepts. Action that is immediate and satisfying is due. It is reproachful that it costs a human life to incite action, but too often in life this is the high price that is paid.

Perhaps this is a lesson that needed to be brought home to Villanova. Nothing is accomplished, conditions will not improve without some conscious visible effort to incite action.

We can only hope that the lesson has been learned, that there will be action before another life is endangered and before it is too late.

Congratulations

Dear Editor,

Much has been commented on the apathy of Villanova students. Recently, we had the opportunity to observe these so called "apathetic students" demonstrate anything but a lack of concern for others.

October 7 allowed us to witness two events which proved that Villanova students do care enough to get involved. It was quite obvious that those who volunteered their time for the Special Olympics were sincerely interested in the happiness of those in their care. Even though the weather was less than perfect, the atmosphere was not. The volunteers generated enthusiasm and an all-around good time.

Also on Sunday, an unfortunate accident occurred on the corner of Ithan and Lancaster. The response was immediate. Two people rushed to the aid of the victims while a third ran to call an ambulance. As he was returning, we were impressed to see the first police car had already arrived. Within minutes traffic was under control and an ambulance arrived.

The teamwork and consideration exhibited compelled us to write this letter. We are proud to see that Villanova students don't show the least amount of apathy in matters of importance.

Congratulations for a job well done!

Sincerely,
Laura, Dana, Sue and Ellen

Concerned

Editor,

Two years ago, those of us who used the weight room in the Fieldhouse referred to it as "The Pit" for obvious reasons. By some miracle, it was renovated and gave the appearence that someone actually cared for us students of non-scholarship status, and without a doubt, we appreciated the facelift.

Now, two years later, we are begining to see little by little a deterioration of the facility which is so widely used by the student population. Firstly, the last time the rug was vacuumed, the Phillies were in the play-offs. And as any non-mechanical genius could tell you, things wear out with time and constant use, example, the universal machine. Broken windows, full trash cans and mostly a deaf ear to our pleas for improvements round out some of the problems we put up with.

Of course the money situation is tight and the Fieldhouse is old but it also is the home of one the best powerlifting teams in the nation. That weight room not only serves a fitness capacity but it helps keep a good weightlifting tradition at Villanova University.

Other schools in the area have facilities which range from full weight rooms to twin nautilus facilities. We're not asking for miracles, just a working agreement between the lifters and the establishment to keep a class standard for our room.

Student Government Association

Legal Information Center to Open

During the last three years I have been teaching here at Villanova University I have found that a substantial amount of my student counseling concerns informing students of their most basic legal rights. The majority of requests for information involves landlord and tenant law problems. Due to the housing crisis along the Main Line coupled with the lack of dormitory space on campus, students have often found themselves in disadvantageous positions when dealing with landlords. In order to remedy this, I decided with the aid of several volunteer law students to create an information center where students could go to receive free legal advice in landlord tenant matters.

Before attempting to establish this center I realized there were three hurdles to overcome: (1) proper training; (2) professional liability; and (3) charges of an unauthorized practice of law.

First of all, I designed and set up a training program in which local judges, lawyers, building inspectors and zoning officers came to Villanova University and lectured the law students in their area of expertise concerning landlord and tenant law. In addition, drawing from my own experience as a practicing lawyer, as well as director of a neighborhood law office for three years, I lectured the law students on the methods and skills needed for legal interviewing and counseling.

Secondly, as to professional liability, I was fortunate enough to find an insurance company who understood the limited nature of their exposure compared to other areas of law and who agreed to insure the entire program and all of its participants at a minimal cost.

With respect to the charges of unauthorized practice of law, I formally presented the program to the local bar association's standing committee on Unauthorized Practice of Law. The program received their unanimous approval thus allowing the law students to participate without fear of charges of professional misconduct.

Thanks to the kindness of the Student Government Association we now have office space and a phone available. We hope to be able to set up shop within the month and be available for all area college students.

The primary purpose of the Legal Information Center is to provide counseling for students. Should a particular problem become so serious as to warrant court action, the case will be referred to an attorney. The attorney is usually a local lawyer known to myself (usually a Villanova graduate) who agrees to take the case for a reduced fee. I have been able to do this thanks to their generosity and our friendship.

At one time it was felt that academics was the only thing a university should provide the students. Gradually, educators realized that students did not live by books alone. Sports were added, then social outlets, clubs, and student organizations. Counseling centers sprung up when Universities realized that tending to student's personal and emotional problems was equally important as lecturing them on the fine spirit instilled by their institution. Now, over one hundred colleges have recognized that legal problems too, are part and parcel of what could commonly occur to any given student during a four year college career. Some of these colleges employ lawyers on a full time basis. In some others, students have been permitted to go to small claims court and represent other students.

I would like to close on a personal note by addressing the patient volunteer group of law students who offered their help to me one year ago when the idea for this center was first discussed. At that time, the substantive problems of organizing this center and the procedural process in gaining approval seemed like a difficult task. I told them that a law professor once told me "nothing happens unless you make it happen." And now I say that given a fair system and an honest need a new idea needs no precedent and can succeed on its merit alone.

Committee Progress

To date, there are approximately 100 students serving on five committees of the S.G.A. Each committee is comprised of both residents and commuter students. This point is noted because it expresses student concern for the benefit of all Villanovans. In addition, committee turnouts are sure signs of active participation rather than passive observation.

During the past week, each committee met to refine their organizational structure and to discuss future endeavors. Each committee is now staffed with a chairperson and secretary, who are charged with coordinating and reporting efforts, respectively. The chairpersons will meet with Student Body President, P.J. Winterhalter, to report on committee findings and progress.

Emergency Car Care Kit

The Association of Commuter Students has come up with a way to save the commuter money. It is the emergency car care kit. Now instead of having to pay out money for a tow truck if your car breaks down, you can fix it with tools we have made available to you.

If you have the knowledge to fix your car we have the tools. The kit includes a one hundred and six piece mechanics tool set, jumper cables, an all weather flashlight, and even something to fix flats.

All you have to do to use the kit is go to the student activities office on the second floor of Dougherty hall. You will be asked to sign a sheet specifying what you want to use. You must also leave your student I.D. in the office until you return the tools.

To All Commuters

The ACS supplement this year will be devoted to helping you, the commuter, with problems that arise with commuting. We will also help the commuter student to become an integral part of campus life. If you have any suggestions for this supplement, or would like to air your opinion of what is going on with ACS, please feel free to talk with me. I can be contacted through the ACS office in 213 Dougherty.

The RSA Residence Judicial Boards

As of the leadership training session last Monday night, judicial boards are now functioning in every residence hall on campus under the leadership of Resident Director, Matthew Christenson. Each board, comprised of students living within the residence hall and one Resident Assistant in a non-voting advisory capacity, will investigate the facts surrounding alleged violations of non-academic University rules and regulations which do not subject a student to dismissal or separation from the University committed within the residence halls. If a student elects to go before the board the case will be adjudicated by a body of his peers, a recommendation sent to the respective Dean and a decision made on that recommendation. This system places more responsibility for the governance of dorm conduct in the hands of the residents themselves.

Why Come Home Again?

doesn't seem to be enough. The students and graduates will go through the day, for the most part, without coming in contact with one another. It seems a shame that the two are so segregated. Rideout further pointed out that the students have so much to gain from the student-alumni interaction as the graduates. Those businessmen and professionals who return could prove invaluable to students looking for jobs or maybe just advice. They know that their former school is capable of producing responsible, proficient graduates who could be an asset to their firm or profession.

The graduates of Villanova have a great deal of pride in their alma mater as can be seen by their abundant return on homecoming day. Their pride is equaled only by that of today's Villanova students. Maybe we won't be able to institute the many fine ideas expressed by Rideout this year. That will have to wait until the future and will take a great deal of preparation and cooperation between the Alumni Association and the students. But one 'fine idea' that won't have to wait until the future is the friendly attitude we as students can show toward the returning alumni. Invite a wandering alumnus who looks lost over to your T.G. for a beer. Give a hearty welcome to an alumnus who searches for his old room in your dormitory. After all, we're all part of one big family. So let's make homecoming day "Be-kind-to-an-alumnus day" as well. Remember, 10 or 15 years from now we'll all be alumni, too. Treat this year's alumni in the same manner you hope to be treated then, with uninhibited kindness and cordiality to all.

Cole: A Musical Review

By JOSEPH M. BLIMM

Cole came to Vasey Theater with a company of singers and dancers that left no doubt about Cole Porter's importance to the American musical stage. The songs of the production ranged from ballads to swing, from blues to standard show tunes. All of the lyrics, delivered in a crisp and in-

Vietnam Relived

Anyone who had a loved one killed in Vietnam should not see Apocalypse Now.

Coppola stated, "the most important thing that I wanted to do in the making of Apocalypse Now was to create a film experience that would give its audience a sense of the horror, madness, the sensuousness, and the moral dilemma of the Vietnam war.

Apocalypse Now is not only an epic war movie, it's a totally emotional film experience that leaves no room for personal detachment. We are all aware of what happened in Vietnam. We read the death and casuality "count and amount" in the daily papers.

Apocalypse Now depicts the ultimate cessation of all humanity. It reflects the violence, horror and injustices of war.

"Charging men with murder in Vietnam was like handing out speeding tickets at the Indy 500," said Capt. Willard, excellently played by Martin Sheen.

The plot revolved around Willard's top secret mission to terminate Col. Kurtz (Marlon Brando), "an insane, poor, wasted, rag ass renegade," leading a rebel military cult in Cambodia.

During his river boat excursion, Willard encounters the macho, fearless Lt. Col. Kilgore, (Robert Duvall) a loathsome character "who loved the smell of napalm in the morning." Willard watches in awe as Kilgore orders an attack on a Vietnamese village so that his men can surf and have a beach party, complete with steaks and six-packs. In this ritualistic episode, a calvary "charge bugle" was sounded before the helicopter blasting classical music from its stereo speakers, swooped down on the village.

Cruising through an erie fog, past naked bodies hung from trees, Willard finally reaches Kurtz's jungle headquarters, a cite permeated with the steach of death.

Willard is informed by the cult members that "Kurtz's mind is clear but his soul is mad," even his jungle followers want him dead.

Before his death, Kurtz stated, "I wish I had an army of men who had the instinct to kill without feelings, judgement or emotion. I want my family, especially my son to know what I've done."

Apocalypse Now is a visually shocking and emotionally draining experience, that haunts you long after the film credits are rolled.

Coppola is successful in probing our consciousness about the injustices of war. We are witnesses to the mangling of bodies as well as the horrendous scarring of the human psyche.

I left the theatre with a few nagging questions. Was Vietnam really worth the emotional and physical devastation? Consider the violence, horror and human degradation. Did it change anything?

You'll have to see Apocalypse Now and answer those questions for yourself.

Apocalypse Now, directed and produced by Francis Coppola, written by John Milius and Francis Coppola, narrated by Michael Herr, starring Marlon Barndo, Robert Duvall and Martin Sheen is playing at the Milgram Twin Theatre at 15th and Chestnut Sts. in Phila. and other surrounding area theatres.

In Concert

with the Knack

By MICHAEL BRODE

While most of the new up and coming rock bands are characterized by a sound and style which has been broadly labeled "new wave" the hottest new band in the country at the moment employs an approach to music perhaps best described as "old wave." This melodic pop/rock blend has catapulted The Knack into national musical prominence, triggering staggering popularity and success from their debut album "Get The Knack." While the album went platinum in just eight weeks, music critics were citing the band's fresh, energetic style as the primary component of their success. Others credited the group's image as the basis for their early achievements: heavily Beatles-oriented with an emphasis on that old, successful rock n' roll selling point - sex appeal. Whatever the factors which contributed to their popularity, The Knack brought their long-awaited debut concert tour to the Tower Theater last Friday night for a capacity audience of 3,000 anxious fans.

The first thing one sensed upon entering the Tower was the tremendous amount of anticipation which seemed to permeate the atmosphere. Excitement was definitely in the air, and the crowd appeared to be storing their energy for an impending explosion-type of release. The second thing which was immediately evident was the large number of females in the audience. Young females. Young rowdy females. The Beatles hype had obviously been effective.

When The Knack finally hit the stage, the explosion did indeed occur. If I hadn't known better, I might have thought this was Shea Stadium circa 1964. Hysteria was rampant: security guards attempting to keep the hordes of over-zealous girls from dancing in the aisles, rushing the stage and standing on their seats. The entire crowd was receptive and responsive, feeding back to the band the same kind of energy which they were releasing.

The Knack were not fancy. They performed a non-stop, high-powered set which included their entire first album, several new tunes and some standard rock n' roll classics ("It's Allright," "Not Fade Away"). The band's stage lay-out (positioning of musicians, white canvas backdrop) was reminiscent of the Feb Four, as was their attire: black straight-leg pants, pointed black boots, white shirts and skinny black ties. The Knack's music is not highly complex, nor are their lyrics profound. They play basic, old-fashioned rock n' roll with polish, and they sing about girls, love and sex. Sound familiar?

Highlights of the show were "She's So Selfish", "Frustrated" (dedicated to the guys), "Good Girls Don't", and the rough-edged "My Sharona." Although the band was not nearly as tight as on vinyl, I was genuinely impressed with their energy and enthusiasm. Their performance, although primarily simple and straightahead, featured some clever instrumentation and pleasant harmonies.

Say what you will about The Knack, but for now, they seem to be simply following an established formula, and a successful one at that.

Python's Jerusalem

By STEVEN COMBS

Watching satire is like looking at our lives in a carnival mirror. The humor is not necessarily the fact that the image is distorted but that it is still recognizable. Satire enlarges the foolishness in a situation yet leaves it familiar enough to be relevent. The point at which satire fails is when we no longer see ourselves in it.

Monty Python's Life of Brian has caught a lot of flak from the responsible citizens of this country. These people feel compelled to protect the rest of us from 'sick' humor. Well, if anyone can watch Life of Brian and not see foolish aspects of themselves in nearly every scene then they're not watching close enough.

Most people are familiar with the type of humor the Python group expounds. The people who brought us the Ministry of Silly Walks, Twit of the Year, and Spiny Norman have now been let loose in Jerusalem.

Brian is born in a Bethlehem manger about half a block from the kid with the halo. As an enemy of Rome he becomes a reluctant spiritual leader and is eventually crucified. Jesus of Nazareth is only shown once. Brian goes to hear him deliver the sermon on the mount and is so far back in the crowd that he hears the Greek will inherit the earth.

The Python ensemble's acting abilities aren't taxed beyond the level of their television show. Men dressed as Hebrew women and Romans with English accents making a farce of Judeo-Christian heritage is humorous without being artistically exceptional.

The collage of moving photographs that opens the flock is characteristic of the group's productions. But it's getting a little old. There's only so many times that a huge foot dropping from a cloud onto somebody's head is still funny.

Life of Brian doesn't hold a candle to The Holy Grail which reduced me to tears of laughter in the opening credits. But the same madness that made The Holy Grail a comic masterpiece spills over into Life of Brian.

Sound Waves

Joe's Garage

By STEVEN COMBS

Frank Zappa's vulgar social commentary on Joe's Garage Act I is musical genius. His often crude lyrics cut to the bone of today's self indulgent culture and generally mindless politics. Yet behind the scathing words runs a manic guitar that rivals any performer of our time. And his use of unusual noises as an integral part of his songs is Zappa's trademark.

Joe's Garage is a story of how music can destroy lives. It was inspired by the 'Ayatollah Khomeini's ban of music in Iran. If one self-righteous fascist can do it, reasons Zappa, who knows?

The narrator of the story is The Central Scrutinizer, a metallic Orwellian Big Brother who is in charge of enforcing all the laws that haven't been passed yet. He introduces the first song, Joe's Garage. This harmless bit of rock-n-roll tells of Joe's misspent youth, playing guitar and drinking beer. Zappa has stated repeatedly that he is against 'drugs' and limits himself to cigarettes and liquor. This theme crops up several times on the album.

Zappa does Billy Joel one better with Catholic Girls. This raunchy ballad about C.Y.O. cuties is, to say the least, unkind. Joe's girlfriend Mary doesn't make it to the church social meeting one night. Her exploits are detailed in a ditty called Crew Slut. She spends the night and subsequent month with the road crew of a big rock band. Once again we are shown the destructive, immoral power of music.

The second side opens with Wet T-shirt Nite. In this song Mary tries to earn her busfare home by letting some local disc jockey pour ice water on her breasts in front of a bunch of drunken clods. As she jiggles in the spotlight Zappa asks us, "Ain't this what living is really all about?"

Joe gets lonely in Mary's absence and manages to contract V.D. from a girl named Lucille. His tale of woe is titled Why Does It Hurt When I Pee? This number is simple but bizarre. Zappa has brought musical mastery to the lockerroom.

Act I of Joe's Garage finishes with Lucille Has Messed My Mind Up. This innocuous love song may actually get some airplay since it is considerably less caustic than the rest of the album.

Any Zappa album must be heard several times to be appreciated. The intricacy of his art is not immediately apparent. It is more than likely that many years from now Frank Zappa will be regarded as one of history's great musicians. Joe's Garage is proof in plastic.

Fear of Music

By JERRY ARTH

In the beginning, God created "punk" rock. But it did not prove to be commercially viable, so he created "new wave" sound. This placated the people for a time but they soon grew weary of the mass-produced, mass-marketed sound and clamored for something different. So God combined the best elements of his previous attempts and presented the Talking Heads to the world.

With the release of their debut album in 1977, the Talking Heads immediately became a musical force to be reckoned with. Though they were classified as 'new wave' their music was much too loose and unstructured to fit that description. Yet they were not of the three chord/heavy Cockney accent/Root Boy Slim and the Sex Change Band-type that characterized 'punk' music. They formed their own genre, one which could be termed 'quaalude rock.' With their new album Fear of Music, the Talking Heads prove to be hard at work keeping their particular style alive and well.

Side One of the new album is definately the best. The first track, I Zimbra, is a jungle fantasy trip replete with conga drums and an incomprehensible chant for lyrics. With an almost disco beat provided by bass player Martine Weymouth, the song is one the album's finest. Following are Mind, slow, vintage Talking Heads music with David Byrne's Thorazine haze vocals; Paper, a wasted tune; and Cities, a song of charging restlessness powered by the guitar of Byrne and the keyboards of Jerry Harrison. However, these serve as but introductions to the album's key cut Life During Wartime. A cryptic, cynical view of everyday life, with Chris Frantz thundering the beat and Byrne soaring the lyrics, Life During Wartime is destined to be the hit of the album much the same as Take Me To The River was on their first effort. Side One ends with Memories Can't Wait, a song which seems too reminiscent of David Bowie's Space Oddity lp.

Though the chronological approach is boring, the second side of Fear Of Music is the only one left. To be succinct, it is not very remarkable. The only really worthwhile track is Animals. A scathing critique of society in general, it picks up where Pink Floyd left off with a growling, caveman-like intensity and bitterness. Among the rest, only two are worth mentioning-Heaven because of its refrain, "Heaven is a place where nothing ever happens" and Drugs simply because of its excellent reproduction of a tranquilizer high. The other three songs appear to be useful only as sounds to fill up the album.

True to their form, the Talking Heads have provided a distinctive brand of music. an alternative to everything, on their Fear of Music release. The album is far from perfect but the Talking Heads are definately polishing their work.

Laxmen Open With Win

By BRUCE MURRAY

Over the past weekend the Villanova Lacrosse Club scored an impressive 15-5 victory over the Keystone - Commonwealth Lacrosse Club. The laxmen took the lead right from the beginning and never relinquished it as goals were scored by seniors Bob Adams (6), Bill Hook (3), Jeff Bergman (2); juniors Al Horcher and Chris Clark (1 goal each); sophomore Mark Jonoska (1) and freshman Dan O'Connell (1). "We looked stronger than we did last year at this point," Coach Lee Stevens commented, "and the freshmen looked good — they could push some of last year's starters."

Last year under Stevens, the laxmen had their best season in six years and finished with an overall record of 8-3. When the final NCAA Division I statistics were released, two Wildcat stickmen received national recognition. Senior attackman Bob Adams finished first in the nation in total assists with 45 and he also finished eleventh overall with 62 total points. Senior Bill Hook tied for second place in the nation in total goals scored with 51. Between the two, they formed what Coach Stevens calls a "powerful attack," as the Adams Hook connection scored 117 points over eleven games.

The nucleus of last year's team is returning this year and will be led by Captains Bill Hook (attack) and Frank Giorgio (defense). This year's attack of Horcher, Adams, Hook and Kelly is regarded by Stevens as "one of the best in the area." The midfield will be led by senior Jeff Bergman (last year's third leading scorer) and by juniors Jim Sweeney and Paul Grady. "This is the strongest team I've been on in the four years I've been here," claimed Hook. "Potentially, we can score a lot of goals; our depth is good, and the goalie and defensive positions look strong."

Philly Rugby Routs Ruggers

By ROBERT L. P. WALSH

The 'old men' of the Philadelphia Rugby Club gave the younger Villanova ruggers a lesson in rugby last Saturday in the form of a 34-0 shellacking at Villanova. Although not indicated by the score, Villanova did put forth their best efforts in the match. Tom Rosato, the captain of Villanova's rugby team last year, scored twice, as did Woody Stone, an excellent player and member of the U.S. rugby team. The Philadelphia Rugby Club is captained by John Campbell, who also managed one score in the game.

Villanova was not physically overmatched by Philadelphia, but it was the teamwork and skill of the veterans that determined the outcome. From the outset of the game most of the play was restricted to the Wildcats' side of the field.

The second half began much like the first with Villanova again bogged down in their own territory. As the Philadelphia Rugby Club continued to roll up points, Villanova's determination to avoid a shutout also grew. The Wildcats put together several good runs in the second half, only to come up short each time. Philadelphia scored five times in the second half to complete the rout.

The loss to the Philadelphia Rugby Club drops Villanova's record to 1-4. The Wildcats beat the Hibernians 17-12 for their lone victory. Villanova's other losses were at the hands of Temple Med., Georgetown and West Chester by the scores 8-4, 12-0 and 7-6, respectively. Mike Abele, Tim McCarthy and captain Mark Civil have all distinguished themselves at wing. Captain Bob Lynch, Jim "Tooth" LaVine, Al Corless and Paul Hartwick have all turned in outstanding performances in the scrum.

Unknown Leads Harriers

By RAY ENGLER

Carey Pinkowski, an unknown on Villanova's Cross-Country team before this season started, really earned his stripes last Saturday in a quadrangular meet against St. Joe's, Haverford College, Delaware and Catholic University. Pinkowski, who was suffering from a stomach virus and a 104 degree temperature, ran the course best known as "Everglades North," and won the race with an incredible personal time of 25:54. His performance was the highlight of a meet which was totally dominated by Villanova. The Cats received credit for 4 wins, 19-38 over St. Joe's, 18-45 over Delaware, 20-41 over Haverford, and 15-49 over Catholic University.

Villanova won the meet despite the fact that all but two members of the Varsity team sat out. Along with Pinkowski, sophomore Kevin Dillon placed third with the time of 26:34. Solid performances were also turned in by sophomores John Hunter (5th with a time of 26:40) and Mike Lacey (7th with a time of 26:57), and by senior Paul Denis, who rounded out the Wildcat scorers placing 11th, overall with a time of 27:06.

Tomorrow, at 11 a.m. at Belmont Plateau the harriers' take on the "Big 5" teams (Temple, La Salle, Penn, St. Joe's) in their annual meet. Next week's IC4A meet has been relocated from Van Cortlandt Park in New York City to Sunken Meadows, Long Island.

Committee Guides Safety Moves

University Lawyers to File Complaint With PUC

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

A steering committee comprised of the parties involved in the movement to improve campus safety has been formed, as measures to correct unsafe conditions got under way last week.

The committee, to be chaired by the University, will seek to coordinate and expedite measures aimed at eliminating hazards associated with the railroad station tunnel, the Route 320 bridge, and pedestrian crossing of Lancaster Avenue and Spring Mill Road.

State Representative John Alden proposed the formation of a steering committee when officials of Amtrak, PennDOT, and Radnor Township recently met with University officials.

"A smaller committee makes the job of improving safety easier," Alden reasoned. "The larger the number of people involved, the more cumbersome the task becomes."

Through the structure of a steering committe, Alden believes a climate of understanding will develop.

When the committee holds its first meeting later this month, it will be made up of the following members: Rev. John A. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life; Steve Lester, district traffic engineer for PennDOT; Lois M. Morasco, Amtrak's director of public affairs; Dr. Evelyn Behanna, assistant to the dean, College of Nursing; P.J. Winterhalter, student government president; John J. Cappelli, Radnor Township chairman for public safety; Maurice Hennessy, chief of police, Radnor Township; Eugene J. Ruane, director of public affairs for the University; and William Weber, student bar association president, School of Law.

Fr. Deegan is expected to serve as committee chairman.

While the Steering Committee prepared for its initial meeting, developments in the overall safety picture continued to unfold.

Amtrak has apparently begun to act upon its promise to renovate the tunnel under the railroad tracks; last week a team of workers were seen clearing the drains which periodically clog with debris and cause the tunnel to flood.

A report by Amtrak on its plans for extensive tunnel renovations is being awaited by the Steering Committee.

The question of responsibility for safety improvements to the Route 320 bridge over the railroad tracks will be forwarded to the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission; University lawyers are planning to file a traffic safety complaint with the PUC.

After the PUC receives and acts upon the complaint, it will first hold an on-site field meeting at the University; all interested parties will be invited to attend the meeting.

There will then follow an opportunity to present testimony relating to responsibility for corrections, type of corrections, and the cost to be incurred.

When the hearing process ends, the PUC will evaluate the information and then issue an order.

PennDOT District Engineer Robert Roland is confident that action by the PUC will totally clarify the uncertainties concerning the bridge.

"The PUC will issue an order as to what is to be done, who's to do it, and who's to pay for it," Roland explained.

Another aspect of the safety question, the situation dealing with pedestrian crossing of Lancaster Avenue and Spring Mill Road, has been addressed by the University.

Senate Proposes Structure Reform

By BILL CLARK

The University Senate met for the third time this year on Friday, October 19. The meeting concerned the internal makeup of the Senate and the topics of debate centered on four recommendations coming from the Senate Rules and Review Committee.

These four recommendations were directed at reforming the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee, which reviews faculty promotions. Of the four, only the motion limiting one faculty member per department on the Committee was passed by the Senate.

The other three motions, that would have limited a faculty member to one three-year term on the Committee, demanded that each candidate fill out an information form listing his qualifications, and demanded that the faculty elected to the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee also make up the Administrative Rank and Tenure Committee, "which makes the actual recommendations on applications for rank and tenure."

Before these motions were brought to the floor, Senator Neville of the Rules and Review Committee yielded the floor to Dr. Harry R. Strack. Even though Dr. Strack is not a Senate member, he had prepared a report for Rules and Review entitled An Inquiry into the Structure of the Senate Rank and Tenure Committee.

In compiling this report, a faculty survey had been conducted concerning a limit on a faculty member's term to the Rank and Tenure Committee. The result of this question was 62.3% in the affirmative.

Even though this report was only intended as background material, debate centered more on the report than on the motions themselves. Dr. Cleary questioned the idea that "long membership on the committee may result in a subtle influence or bias."

Sen. Amorosa also questioned the phrase saying that limiting the term of a member "would reduce the possibility of vested interests or large voting blocs exerting undue influence over the election and re-election process." Dr. Strack explained that these ideas were given by the faculty members themselves and he was not sure of the reasoning behind them.

Also discussed was a constitutional charter change relating to the University Planning Committee. The Senate unanimously passed a motion that reads "That the University Planning Committee shall annually evaluate the administrative priorities to see if they are in keeping with the institutional priorities set by the University Senate. The findings and recommendations of the annual charge shall be reported to the Senate at its October meeting. After this motion was passed, the Senate also voted to change the Committee to the University Planning and Priorities Committee.

Petitions Spark Parking Change

By JERRY VENTRESCA

In response to recent letters and petitions concerning the lack of parking facilities at St. Mary's Hall and the poor conditions of pedestrian crosswalks surrounding the dormitory, a special meeting was called last week by Rev. John A. Deegan, O.S.A., vice-president for student life.

RSA President Don Kraft, RSA representative Tom McIntosh, St. Mary's Council President Mike Stumpf, St. Mary's Area Representative Tom Ogrodoroski, and St. Mary's resident Jerry Ventresca presented Deegan with a list of proposals designed to alleviate some of the problems.

The first proposal allows juniors residing in St. Mary's to purchase Spring Mill stickers. The second proposal from the students suggested that the junior and senior students with stickers be allowed to park their cars in the St. Mary's lot at night from 5:00 p.m. to 8:30 a.m. Deegan approved night parking for students with stickers, but between the hours of 9:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. during the week, and 9:30 p.m. Friday to 7:30 a.m. Monday.

Captain Cunnane, head of Villanova Security, approved the proposals, and the stickers are currently being issued.

The final proposal called for a 15 mph speed zone on Rte. 320 from Mendel Hall to the end of the Law School and St. Mary's area, including within the zone, an official pedestrian crosswalk. The final decision on this matter, however, rests with PennDOT. Also, proposals caling for increased patrols and lighting of the main lot will be considered by Captain Cunnane.

Kraft summarized the meeting by saying, "The only reason why we got action was because of the letters. Recently, the RSA hasn't been taken seriously, so I thank the guys from St. Mary's for using the system to prove it can work."

Netters Lead Division

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

The Wildcat volleyball team leads their division displaying a 7-2 record along with La Salle College. Undefeated in their own division, Villanova's only two losses were given up to the University of Pennsylvania and Lehigh. Villanova shared the division title with La Salle last year.

Last week the volliers split a trimatch, overpowering a strong West Chester team with 6-15, 15-9 and 15-10 tallies and putting up a tough fight against U. of Penn., losing 8-15 and 9-15.

Captain Joanne Canuso has exhibited consistent play at all positions, recently breaking a school record by serving for ten consecutive points.

Sophomore Sarah Holyoke and freshmen Cathy Lavan and Dorrie Bohs turn the defensive bumps into consistently perfect sets to the outside players.

Towering Lisa Ortlip and freshman Diane Petraglia are just two of those who deliver intimidating spikes at the net, putting the finish on a well organized offense.

The junior varsity team still carries a 3-0 record, hoping to boost it to a 6-0 tally.

Women's Tennis

Recording its ninth consecutive victory, the women's tennis team easily defeated Cheyney State, 5-0, last Monday. A match against Rutgers-Camden was washed out on Wednesday. In a typically strong performance, freshman Carol Harrison picked her 10th win out of the second singles position.

First and third singles, Diane Williams and Dawn Fisher swept their opponents without losing a game.

Villanova will be the host school of the first PAIAW Division 2B Tennis Championships this Saturday.

cessive games to Boston College, answered points to stretch their lead to 20-7.

After an interception by cornerback David Martin, his second of the afternoon off of Brunner, Villanova drove 68 yards in 11 plays before the offense sputtered and Bushbeck was again summoned. He was successful in his 21-yard attempt and Villanova led 13-7.

Just two minutes later, quarterback Pat O'Brien uncharacteristically hooked up with Ziesel on a 37-yard touchdown pass for yet another Villanova score. It was only the fifth completion of the season for O'Brien to one of his running backs and that deception caught the Blue and Brunner, in turn, engineered the final drive. On third and two from the Villanova 46, Brunner looked for Hooks downfield and found him wide open at the ten, but the tiny receiver couldn't hang on to the pigskin. After a successful fourth-down conversion left the ball on the 44-yard line, Brunner sent Hooks out again and once more he was all alone. This time, Hooks found the handle and Delaware found victory, 21-20.

The Wildcats will once again try to reverse the losing trend, hosting the Holy Cross Crusaders. Game time is 1:30 at Villanova Stadium and a good crowd is expected for Homecoming, 1979.

DPE Nominee Crowned Queen

By TERRY O'TOOLE

Junior psychology major Linda Schon, third runner-up in last year's balloting, captured Villanova's Homecoming Queen title in voting two weeks ago.

Sophomore Melissa Araya was first runner-up, followed by junior Jean Mariano, freshman Lenore Meyers and senior Maureen Delaney. Members of the Homecoming court each receive a dinner for two, and the Queen receives $50 and $100 for her sponsoring organization. Schon was sponsored by DPE fraternity, and was escorted by Danny Logatto.

"I was very surprised and very excited," Schon said. "It was definitely an honor, and I was very happy that I won."

Schon presided over halftime activities at October 20's 29-14 Homecoming football victory over Holy Cross. After sitting in the stands during the first half and riding in the Homecoming parade during the halftime break, Schon changed into her cheerleading uniform and joined the squad to cheer during the second half.

"I had changed into my uniform, and I cheered with my crown on and everything," Schon said. "The title means a lot to me, but so does cheerleading."

Students voted for more than 20 candidates, nominated by various student organizations, during the week before Homecoming weekend. On Thursday night, the five top vote-getters were assembled in a reception in Dougherty Hall's North Lounge, where they met with alumni, administrators and students. Votes were taken toward the end of the reception, and Schon and her court were crowned.

"Last year it was a new experience. I was young," she said. "But even though it wasn't new to me this year, I was still nervous."

Weather for Saturday's game was sunny and clear, a change from last year's Homecoming weekend.

"I was so excited that it was a nice day," Schon said. "It made everything better. I met a lot of alumni, teachers and deans, and had a good time."

"I really think that Homecoming is an important part of the year at Villanova," she added.

Honors Offers Sex Course

Several unique courses, ranging from the study of human sexuality to a Marxist perspective on social work, will be offered by the Honors Program in the spring of 1980.

Dr. John McEnerney, chairman of the Classical Studies Department, will teach The Epic Tradition. This course will study the development and continuous tradition of heroic poetry in western literature, covering both the historical and intellectual contexts of the poetry. Authors include Homer, Dante, Milton, and Byron; the period ranges from early Greece to the modern day.

Normal Psychosexual Development will be taught by Drs. Greenhouse and Neville of the Counseling Center. The course is designed to enhance students' intellectual comprehension of the processes that contribute to psychosexual development, and expose students to the study of human sexuality from the viewpoint of contemporary psychology.

The conflict of values between the industrialized world and the less developed world will be the focus of Problems of Development in the Third World. Taught by Dr. Harold Leamna of the Geography Department, the course's major concerns will be the issues of industrialization and environmental protection. In addition, a number of economic, demographic, geographic, and political models will be examined to better focus on problems which the majority of the world's population faces.

Honors will also be hosting several visiting professors for the spring. Dr. Jeffry Galper of Temple University will teach Social Work: A Marxist Analysis. The course introduces a Marxist approach to the field of social welfare generally, and social work specifically. The history and nature of social work will be analyzed from a Marxist perspective. The question of social work practice will then be addressed from a radical viewpoint.

Study of the law in action is the focus of Inside the Criminal Courtroom, to be taught by Judge Marvin Halbert of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court. Class will be held in the courtroom, where students will observe cases through to completion, then discuss each case with Judge Halbert.

Students wishing to take any of these courses must register for them at the Honors Office, Corr Hall 101.

Grad Fellows Nominated

The Villanova University Fellowship Committee announced its nominations for the Danforth, Marshall, and Rhodes post-graduate fellowships for the 1979-1980 academic year.

The Committee: Dr. Maria Alter (Modern Languages), Mr. Gerald Bonas, assistant to dean of Arts and Sciences, Dr. Earl Bader (English), Dr. Raymond Cummings (History), Dr. Peter Keliher (Chemistry), and Chairman John Doody also suggested two sophomores, Owen Evans and Daniel Sullivan for the Harry S. Truman scholarship; the scholarship allows undergraduates to prepare for careers in public service.

Seniors Lauren Bretz, Eileen McDevitt, Barbara McPherson, and Richard Ruhrold were among the nominees for the Danforth, which offers financial support to doctoral candidates who seek to become college teachers. Some criteria used for nominations included: motivation and discipline; personal characteristics contributing to effective teaching; academic accomplishments and concern for ethical and moral values.

Nominations for the Marshall, which affords college graduates the opportunity to study for two years at a British university, included Paul Denis, Terence O'Toole, Nancy Rooney, Richard Ruhrold, and Susan Ward. Candidates were chosen for their "distinction of intellect and character as evidenced by scholastic accomplishments and by their activities and achievements."

The Rhodes fellowship candidates nominated were: Paul Denis, Nancy Rooney and Ronald Triolo. Bases of selection included literary and scholastic achievements; physical vigor; moral force of character and instincts to lead.

Safety Progress

Last month, Fr. Deegan submitted a list of proposals pertaining to pedestrian safety to the Radnor Township Traffic Safety Committee; they called for: 1) installation of a "WALK" light at the corner of Lancaster and Ithan Avenues, 2) reduction of the speed limit on Lancaster Avenue from 35 to 25 miles per hour between Lowry's Lane and Spring Mill Road, 3) the painting of crosswalks on Lancaster Avenue at the intersection with Ithan Avenue and in front of the chapel, 4) the painting of a crosswalk on North Spring Mill Road from the Law School to St. Mary's with "Pedestrian Crossing" signs posted, and 5) enforcement of the speed limit in the area surrounding the campus.

The proposals were studied by the Traffic Committee and last week were recommended for immediate implementation.

Further proposals dealing with pedestrian safety have been presented by the University to Radnor Township for evaluation. In part, they suggest studies of traffic flow on Routes 30 (Lancaster Avenue) and 320 (Spring Mill Road).

Responding on behalf of PennDOT and its committee member, Roland commented that to accomplish anything, "there must be a group of people, comprising all the interested parties, push-for action."

Winterhalter expressed optimism that the committee structure will "facilitate an expedient solution to the safety problem."

"Stepping Out"—New Direction

By SHARON MILLS

"Stepping Out," taking off a year or so while in college, is a common event that many students share. The reasons for it are numerous, ranging from personal frustration in the collegiate atmosphere to working to get first hand experience at the job level. Stepping out differs from dropping out; a person who drops out leaves the college scene permanantely, while a person who "steps out" returns to college after a year or two.

During the time a student leaves the classroom, he or she can experience several things. But there are alternatives to stepping out. Villanova students can take advantage of the Internship Program and the Study Abroad Program, both sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences. The Internship Program gives the student an opportunity to work and develop professionally in a business atmosphere related to his or her major. Although the student is not attending classes, credit is awarded based on the work experience. One very positive aspect of this is that a student is earning both money and credit, and at the same time is developing in the business world.

The Study Abroad Program offers a unique and exciting experience. In this educational activity, a student may take a year of courses in a college abroad. While the student is still attending classes, the foreign atmosphere offers a tremendous amount of non-class learning, and also a lot of fun. A good example of the benefits of this program can be seen in a student planning a career in foreign language. Much more could be learned by actually living with the people of certain culture in their home environment rather than simply reading dialect from a textbook.

However, those students who step out cut all ties with college life. Many get jobs of their own, exploring possible career choices. Dr. Kenny, acting director of the Career Development Center here on campus, expressed the idea that experience is the best teacher. It is his feeling that checking out the reality of an occupation or career ahead of time provides tremendous insight into it, and exploring this can be very influential in a career-planning process. By working in a potential career atmosphere, either on an employed or volunteer basis, the individual is able to see the reality of the job setting, get an inside view of what goes on, and see first hand some of the rewards and frustrations that are part of the occupation.

Stepping out can be an extremely beneficial experience for students with mixed feelings regarding their intended career choice.

For some careers, especially those such as nursing that require extensive training, this out of class experience proves to be invaluable. After working in the actual environment, the student may feel he is completely dissatisfied with his present goal, and revise it. Others may have very positive feelings after working in their planned field which may act as reinforcement and incentive.

Stepping out can be an extremely beneficial experience especially for students with mixed feelings or uncertaintities regarding their intended career choice. Often it's the best and ONLY way to be sure what you career eventually becomes is right for YOU. The opportunites are there, so take advantage of them. Don't let you college education go to waste!

Student To Participate In Seminar

By CRAIG BARUK

Beta Gamma Sigma is a national organization whose purpose is to encourage and promote advancement of education in the art and science of business.

Membership in Beta Gamma Sigma is considered a prestigious and high scholastic honor attained by a business administration student. Membership prerequisites include that the student rank in the upper five percent of the junior class, or in the upper ten percent of the senior class. Also important in attaining membership to Beta Gamma Sigma are recommendations by professors in the school of Commerce and Finance.

Beta Gamma Sigma was founded in the spring of 1907, with Villanova being awarded a chapter on April 2, 1976.

Annually, Beta Gamma Sigma holds a week-long national seminar, with 26 students selected from colleges and universities nationwide. Villanova University student Arthur J. Lutschaunig has been honored and acknowledged for his outstanding credentials in business administration. Lutschaunig, a senior in the school of Commerce and Finance has been selected as one of 26 participants in the "Beta Gamma Sigma National Seminar." Lutschaunig stated that the National Seminar will "broaden my scope concerning various issues that come into play with business."

The seminar is broken into five sessions dealing with topics concerning the economy. The first session will discuss "Law, the Business Environment and Contemporary Problems," and will review the legal liability of directors and managers for their business decisions, the product liability explosion, and the regulatory process with its effect on business decision making. The second session will discuss "Organizational Analysis" which will review current approaches to management of people in organizations. The third session discusses the "Accounting Tools Used for Increased Marketing Effectiveness." The fourth session will deal with the "International Development Role for U.S. Business and Business Schools." The fifth and last session will discuss the "Marketing Innovative Technology to the Cities," involving delivery of a wide range of complex public services.

Lutschaunig's future goal is to attain a Ph.D. in "Organizational Behavioral Integrity Concerning Man and His Company," possibly

Halloween In The Hallowed Halls

By DEIRDRE FLANAGAN

Scandalous transactions occurred this past week. Maids were hijacked and their linen was kidnapped. Janitors' cubby holes were mysteriously wiped out, and a number of last Christmas' "rejects" miraculously found their purpose in life. What was going on? Everybody was preparing for the coming of the "Great Pumpkin."

Did you go trick-or-treating? It was a great way to supply one with a semester full of munchies . . . and zits.

Ringing doorbells wasn't your style? Well how about ransacking the local goblins and making off with their treats? No, too rotten a truck, huh? — left that for the high school youngsters.

Those who wanted to pull a real trick showed up for class on the 31st and shocked everyone. It probably went over better than that costume the girl in your History class wore. Oh, that wasn't a costume? Maybe she's the owner of the '68 convertible broom in the commuter parking lot.

The Killer Bees participated in the RSA Halloween Costume Contest Wednesday.

While moseying through Dougherty, hope you stopped off at the Day Hop and joined in on some frightful events. There were beers, tunes, and six-packs of freshmen. Bump into any familiar creatures?

Did anybody attend the off campus creature-feature parties? Or did you have a bit of trouble getting a ride? After all, how many witches, apes, and U.P.O.'s (unidentified partying objects) can you fit in a red Volkswagen? Not as many as in a Sugartown apartment . . . especially the R building.

Well, hope you had a "spooktacular" Halloween, were true to your Jack O'Lantern friends, and didn't eat the pumpkin pie!

What You Don't Know May Kill You

Notes from the Villanova Student Consumer Protection Council . . .

. . . the Edgewood Chenille Company, a clothing manufacturer in Tunnel Hill, Georgia, is recalling thousands of highly flammable women's garments, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission has announced. The garments include women's bathrobes, jackets, shorts and tube-tops. All are made of 100 percent cotton chenille, a soft, unribbed fabric with a high, fuzzy nap.

. . . Sears, Roebuck and Co. has announced a repair program to correct a potential fire hazard in 21,000 of its 19-inch portable color television sets. The program is being conducted in cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

. . . Following fast on the skateboard fad is a resurgence in popularity of roller skating. In 1978, an estimated 93,000 persons were treated for roller skating injuries. In the first seven months of 1979, an estimated 74,000 persons had been treated in hospital emergency rooms. This figure can be contrasted with less than 55,000 annual injuries only five years ago.

The Villanova Student Consumer Protection Council will sponsor a "Smoke Off Challenge."

We dare you to tell the difference between Marlboro and Winston cigarettes in blind test. The challenge will be held on Monday, November 5, in Bartley Cafeteria.

Villanova Voting

A Voice To Be Heard

Among the many freedoms students enjoy as members of a democracy is the freedom of choice, a choice that is exercised yearly in the privilege of voting in national, state and local elections.

If exercised by those who possess this right, the vote can determine policies, change leadership, and thus influence the economic, social and political milieu in which we exist. Hence, the voter is obligated to respond to this responsibility; for it is through his vote that he and others are effected.

Yet the second Tuesday in November, the day of reckoning when we are called to respond to our obligation, the booths remain infrequented by the approximate 3,000 potential voters on the Villanova campus.

A total of only 800 students are registered to vote in Radnor township.

But how many will heed their responsibility by voting Tuesday, November 6?

Isolated from the world of national, political and economic policy, the student often loses touch with himself as a contributor. Yet resurging complaints, spurred perhaps by a discussion in political science class or a glimpse at an area newspaper, can be clearly heard. When it comes down to transforming negative complaints into positive action, only a few respond.

Last year's race for state representative involved relevant issues (drinking age, tax-tuition credit, Morris estate rezoning) in which Villanova students should have taken an active interest by voting for the representative who best represented their concerns. Only 500 registered to vote and an even smaller number really voted.

The potential Villanova students possess to influence township elections will only be realized when voting is transformed in the minds of the students from a burden to a privilege and a right to be exercised.

Villanova has made some attempts but not enough. What is needed now is some concentrated effort to mobilize this potential of student voters for next year's elections. Students have a voice, but it's not being heard.

Congratulations

Dear Editor:

I want to congratulate you and your staff on winning top honors in three major categories of the Pennsylvania Collegiate Press Journalism contest.

All of us on this campus are aware of the improving quality of journalism in the Villanovan, and as a former moderator of the paper, it comes as no surprise to me that the PCP would recognize it.

I know the long hours you and your staff put in and the high level of responsibility it takes to put out a good newspaper each week. What you have done by achieving this statewide recognition is to establish standards of excellence to which future Villanovan staffers will have to aspire if the tradition is to be maintained. I am sure they will.

Again, my congratulations.

Sincerely,
Eugene J. Ruane

Roll-out Thefts

Dear Villanova Community,

Recently, two signs publicizing the Kenny Loggins concert were taken from their frames outside the fieldhouse, and several roll-outs advertising Union events were removed from the walls of Dougherty Hall. The actions of the person(s) responsible are destructive, selfish, and malicious. Roll-outs and fieldhouse signs are posted primarily to inform students of Union-sponsored events. Taking down these signs by unauthorized persons not only affects the Union by everyone on campus as well.

The purpose of the Union is to serve the Villanova community. Publicity Committee contributes its service by making known what is happening on campus to as many people as possible, but it needs your cooperation. Because the Union and students and the rest of the Villanova community are interdependent, each needs the support of the others. The Publicity Committee is asking that you help it to serve you. Please let the roll-outs and fieldhouse signs stand.

Furthermore, Union members draw, paint, and print the signs themselves, which become personal, creative works of art. Please respect their efforts and stop the vandalism of removing their art work. If anyone sees someone tearing down roll-outs or taking a fieldhouse sign, please report it to the Publicity Committee or to Security. Regarding the Kenny Loggins sign, if anyone has it or knows where it is, please return it to the Union Office, second floor of Dougherty Hall, or give the information to someone on the Publicity Committee, anonymously if you wish. No action will be taken against the person(s); we only want the signs back. Let's support each other and work together.

Donna Zimmaro
Chairperson of Roll-outs and Fieldhouse sign

Fan Thanks

To the Editor,

We would like to extend our thanks to the students who attended our soccer game Friday night at Franklin Field. Their enthusiasm in the stands carried onto the field and into us and, without that enthusiasm, the outcome of the game may have been different. As a result: Villanova 1, Notre Dame 0.

Villanova Teamwork

Dear Editor:

Much has been commented on the apathy of Villanova students. Recently, we had the opportunity to observe these so-called "apathetic students" demonstrate anything but a lack of concern of others.

October 7 allowed us to witness two events which proved that Villanova students do care enough to get involved.

It was quite obvious that those who volunteered their time for the Special Olympics were sincerely interested in the happiness of those in their care. Even though the weather was less than perfect, the atmosphere was not. The volunteers generated enthusiasm and an all-around good time.

Also on Sunday, an unfortunate accident occurred on the corner of Ithan and Lancaster. The response was immediate. Two people rushed to the aid of the victims while a third ran to call an ambulance. As he was returning, we were impressed to see the first police car had already arrived. Within minutes after several people got the traffic under control, the ambulance was there.

The teamwork and consideration exhibited, compelled us to write this letter. We are proud to see that Villanova students don't show the least amount of apathy in matters of importance.

Congratualtions for a job well done!

Sincerely,
Laura, Dana, Sue and Ellen

Missing Items

Dear Sir:

Concerning the Faculty Club's losses as described in my letter of 28 September, I have good news and bad news.

The good news is that the piano bench has been returned. The bad news is that the cooking utensils (knives, pots, bowls) have not been returned.

Admittedly, the former is the more important and music is food for the soul but, after all, body and soul must be kept together.

May I thus appeal once more for the return of the pots. We missed the corn-on-the-cob season but OKTOBERFEST is coming (in November!).

Thank you for the (partially efficacious) use of your columns.

After Playboy, that highly esteemed national magazine of the arts, politics and social thought, published its "Girls of the Ivy League" feature in its September edition, we wondered if there was any potential for Villanova to make it into the magazine some day. To judge the talent, we went into Kennedy Mall (or what's left of it) on Halloween day to ask, "If a national magazine offered you $1000 to pose in the nude, would you do it?"

Our responses:

"Sure, I'm not proud, but if someone wants to pay me, I'll do it."
Bill Dwyer,

"A picture is worth a thousand words."
Rory Sparrow,

"Yeah. I'd do it. The human body is a piece of art. If someone wants to pay me — sure."

Misguided Jogger

Editor:

In recent weeks, many people on this campus have been working hard to convince area residents that Villanova students are responsible members of the community. Unfortunately, on the past Friday afternoon, one student engaged in a small prank at the Agnes Irwin School on South Ithan Road, which publicly embarrassed the university and immeasurably set back our efforts with the community.

As the annual field hockey game between Shipley and Agnes Irwin ended, a jogging Villanova student ran onto the field, before a crowd of 200 people to join the huddle of one of the teams. Obviously uninvited, and refusing a request to leave the field, he had to be pushed from the huddle by a young woman, the Shipley team coach. It was a rather unpleasant sight.

If this student can read, I hope that the moron reads this letter, because I have a message for him. Perhaps you thought you were being "cool," and making a great impression on your companion, but to me and many others, you were a fool. Your behavior was a poor reflection upon the university, your family, and your own character and maturity. I sincerely hope that before you graduate from this university, you grow up a bit.

Thanks

Editor:

I would like to thank the signers of the letters published in the Villanovan concerned with the lacking parking facilities and depressed pedestrian crosswalks in and around St. Mary's, the Villanovan for the publication, and especially the RSA and Fr. Deegan for showing an interest in the students' needs. Last week's meeting with Fr. Deegan to discuss these problems was definitely a step in the right direction and now the administration's duty is to act in the best interests of Villanova. This incident proves that not all V.U. students are lazy and apathetic and expect the administration to be their guardian.

Intramural Referees

Editor:

This letter starts by acknowledging a problem that concentrates its attention on those who participate in intramural flag football, but then stems far enough out to effect everyone who pays tuition here at Villanova.

FACT: Wednesday, October 24, 4:30. Austin Field — a flag football game was officiated by "four" referees.

FACT: Thursday, October 25, 3:30 and 4:30, Austin Field — Both flag football games had again "four" referees.

FACT: Friday, October 26, 4:30, Austin Field — Two teams of 18 guys gathered at an intramural scheduled football game — "NO" referees were present. The two teams assumed the games were cancelled till further notice (due to the intramural office being vacated).

For those of us who were present last Friday evening, I'm sorry. For those refs who were supposed to have been there, I feel sorry for you. I think this letter is going to blow your convenient caper.

To explain: I'm sure this problem of referees not showing up at game times that Intramurals schedule is not just our problem. It has happened to us twice this year and a multiple of times over the past three years.

At each flag football game one referee is needed to control the game or at most two would be great, but as our eye-witnessed facts revealed there were "four" referees controlling one game on different occasions and none at other times.

If my recollection serves me right, I believe these referees are getting paid for the games they ref. If so, they sure are taking full advantage of reffing the games suitable towards their personal needs rather than for the spirit of this extra-curricular activity.

The straw that broke the camel's back was last Friday, October 26, when 40+ guys made arrangements to make a 4:30 game, which on a Friday evening is tough, only to find that the intramural scheduled game was unattended by intramural referees.

This sort of operation must "STOP."

To throw another wrench into the problem, the intramural department had recently closed down games for a few days to re-vamp the football game schedule, weeding out the delinquent teams that have not been showing up for their games. It was a good idea but now referees are not showing up. What is the problem guys? Must letters of this tone be written to make you aware of your negligence? Too many students are getting hurt and discouraged from your actions, which in return is bad for V.U. morale.

The Student Government Association is in full swing with various activities simultaneously occurring. Just what are these activities? Read on and find out what's happening around the S.G.A.!

ACTIVITIES AND SERVICES. The Activities and Services Committee is involved in providing services and social events for the student body. One of the many services provided by this group was the voter registration drive run in September in which over 300 students were registered. There will be transportation provided to the polling places for those who are eligible to vote on election day. The committee is presently involved in a project to sell noise makers for the basketball games. The Activities and Services Committee is an active, vibrant group involved in making this University a better place to be.

PUBLICITY AND COMMUNICATIONS. The main function of the Publicity and Communications committee of the S.G.A. is the public relations that it must establish through the integral workings of the S.G.A. and the Student Body. This is done through advertising meetings, making posters, and establishing a close working relationship with the Villanovan. It is also the responsibility of this committee to provide the Villanovan with articles concerning the S.G.A. Any student wishing to submit an article or editorial for the supplement of the Villanovan is asked to leave it in the S.G.A. office.

PREPAREDNESS COMMITTEE: This committee deals with everything that seemingly no one else wants to do, but we do alot. In early October this committee organized the traffic safety rally. Villanova University received commendation from the township officials, Radnor police, and the community on its successful efforts. The next porject that Preparedness will be working on is organizing the van service to take students to the polls who are registered to vote in Radnor Township. The committee is always in need of more assistance and any student wishing to help us out is definitely welcome.

Are you a leader? Take the following test to determine your potential.

1. Do you find yourself sitting in your room at night watching T.V. and ordering out?
2. Do your study breaks outnumber your studying hours at Falvey Library?
3. Do you reside at Bartley cafeteria or the Pie Shop during lunchtime?

If you have answered "yes" to any of the previous questions you may be the person we are looking for! Why waste your free time when you can become actively involved and at the same time develop your leadership abilities?

There are numerous areas revolving around student's concern which require YOUR input. "An Encounter with Elie Wiesel"

Elie Wiesel, a survivor of the Holocaust, world renown author and lecturer, and chairman of the President's Commission on the Holocaust will speak in Vasey Theatre on Tuesday November 20 at 12:45 PM. Wiesel will discuss the importance of learning about the Holocaust, its effect on our world and its ramifications in our day. This presentation however, should not be viewed as just merely another lecture. Rather it is an interpretation of events by one who witnessed the ultimate atrocity of and by mankind. An indication of the Holocaust's panoramic effect on our society is its relevance to all sectors of academia. Accordingly, this presentation has been funded by several departments on campus including the English, History, and Religious Studies departments in cooperation with the Villanova Union, The Jewish Union and the Campus Ministry. It is imperative that we, as a college community and as individuals, recall those events and grapple with their significance. For as in the words of George Santayana, "Those who do not remember their past are condemned to relive it."

A Grateful Commuter

While walking through the train station on the morning of Saturday, October 20, I found a group of girls hard at work painting the railings on both sides of the tracks. After talking to the girls, I learned that they were the sisters and pledges of Pi Beta Delta, Villanova's newest service sorority. Leslie Palmer, the president of the sorority told me that the project was given to them by the Villanova-Rosemont Civic Association to fulfill part of the sorority's service obligation. As a commuter, I was glad to see an effort being made to improve the condition of the station. Other commuters appreciated the project as well. In addition to the railings, the sorority plans to paint the station waiting rooms next semester. On behalf of myself and other commuters, thanks.

Letter

Accidents are occurring so frequently at the intersection of Ithan and Lancaster Pike that is not unusual for one to see flashing red lights and mangled automobiles on any given day at the junction. On Thursday, October 25, a third collision in as many weeks occurred at the location.

As I waited for twenty minutes in the ensuing traffic jam, I wondered if perhaps it wasn't time that something be done to alleviate the hazardous conditions along Lancaster Pike.

Despite protest actions taken by the Student Government Association, the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) has done nothing to reduce the chances of further collisions on the pike.

A reduction in the speed limit in the area of the university is one type of action that PennDOT might consider in an effort to stem the rising tide of pedestrian and vehicular accidents.

We, as commuting students, should make our voices heard in the roar of protests so that PennDOT gets the message loud and clear. And that message is this: Something MUST be done to insure the safety of pedestrians and motorists on Lancaster Pike.

Loggins Captivates Crowd

By MICHAEL BRODE

Last Friday evening at the Fieldhouse, Villanova was treated to one of the finest concerts ever presented on its campus. The memorable performance showcased the multi-talented and truly professional Kenny Loggins, and introduced the rising new British band, Sniff 'n the Tears. An enthusiastic throng of well over 2,000 people turned out for the show and, by concert's end, had witnessed and actively participated in a thoroughly enjoyable musical experience.

Although limited to a short set, Sniff 'n the Tears turned in a creative and well-executed performance. Displaying a knack for adventurous, street-smart lyrics and a driving yet tastefully structured sound, the band played nearly their entire debut album while effectively generating excitement and substantial audience approval. Highlights of their set were the haunting "Nightlife" and the rousing "Driver's Seat."

But from the moment he hit the stage, it was clear that this was to be Kenny Loggins' evening. Backed by an enormously talented group of musicians, Loggins moved, inspired and electrified the crowd. Exhibiting a style and persona that has established him as one of the most respected and versatile singer-songwriters of the day, Loggins presented a captivating collection of new and old material. It was obvious to all that this man had indeed come a long way from his early days as Jim Messina's protege.

The complete development of Kenny Loggins, as a performer and a musician, is on continuous display throughout his presentation. The genuine enthusiasm and openness creates a warm and comfortable atmosphere in which the audience becomes an intimate part of the show. The striking good looks and natural stage presence make him immediately appealing. The gifted voice successfully conveys the emotions of his songs.

Loggins and his fine band performed a two-hour set consisting of songs from his three solo albums, "Celebrate Me Home," "Nightwatch" and the new "Keep The Fire," as well as some of his classic collaborations with Jim Messina. The stunning performance evoked a similar response from the audience. The crowd was exceptional, frequently singing along and consistently supportive, receiving Loggins' praise and sincere gratitude throughout the show. It was undoubtedly one of those rare occasions where the performer shared the audience's enjoyment and they, in turn, shared his satisfaction.

Stand-outs from Loggins' set were numerous. From the new album, the funky "This Is It" (co-written by Doobie Brother Mike MacDonald) and "Will It Last." From the Loggins-Messina era, the ballad "Watching The River Run," "Holiday Hotel," the Caribbean-flavored "Vahevala," "House At Pooh Corner" (during which Sniff 'n the Tears surprised Kenny in mid-song wearing vintage Pooh garb) and the classic "Angry Eyes," blending blaring saxophones with some blistering lead work by Loggins. From his two previous records, the beautiful "Everything Gonna Be Alright," "Kiss A Lucky Lady," and encores "Easy Driver," "Whenever I Call You Friend," and "Celebrate Me Home," a 15-minute audience sing-along which closed the show.

Perhaps through performances such as these and continued commercial success, Kenny Loggins will receive the notoriety which he so richly deserves. While quite popular among his fans and peers, Loggins' unpretentious, and genuine style has denied him inclusion in the media-created stuperstar category which is so often used as a barometer for success. Regardless of such mindless classifications, Kenny Loggins' tremendous talent is obvious to anyone who has been exposed to his music. His creativity and sincerity are a sparkling bright spot among the familiar and lackluster approaches to music which have recently become so commonplace.

★★★★ A Life in the Theater ★★★★

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

If you are searching for a modern play that leaves you with feelings of good will to humanity, then don't miss David Mamet's A Life in the Theater. It is a short, two character comedy depicting an older actor (Robert) and a younger one (John), their relationship, and their lives in theater. Mamet called it a sad comedy, and it certainly has a depth which makes it far more than pure enjoyment. Its subjects are serious, but they are presented in such a way that their importance increases the depth of your happiness.

The setting is a repertory company, where we watch John and Robert play to an audience at the back of the stage with their backs to us. These short scenes of plays within the play often involve technical problems which make them hilarious. The lines are all ridiculous so that our attention is focused on the offstage relationship between Robert and John.

At first, John is eager to learn and anxious to please his mentor. Robert is a grand old actor who loves to teach John about the theater. Often, he pompously ponders the meanings of traditions in the theater, or the ridiculous lines of their scenes before the empty audience. Robert's constant talk is a defense, as if he is afraid to stop for fear of hearing something that would upset his world. Usually, he says very little with his words. For him, words are a shield with which he protects himself, not a means of communication. John on the other hand, is quiet. Initially he responds to Robert's talk with a fair amount of conversation in an effort to be agreeable. Thereafter, he only speaks when spoken to, or when he has something to say. Unlike Robert, John uses his words to communicate himself directly.

As John develops a sense of himself in the theater, he no longer needs Robert. However, the older man has become dependent on him. He is very concerned that John follow what he sees as the traditions of theater, so that theater as he knows it will not die with him. He is a frightened man, clutching at his world for fear of breaking it. For John, theater is new, moving, full of life, and growing all the time. Robert cannot face this constant movement and change. He needs to feel that his world is not so ephemeral, and tries to mold John so that he will carry on the tradition. However, he learns that this is impossible. Both theater and life are always moving. This is what the rites of passage really involve — the pain of knowing that nothing lasts forever, and the happiness in knowing that life goes on.

All in all, the play is a gem. It is not only entertaining, but also gently thought provoking. A Life in the Theater will be at Annenberg Center until November 4.

Styx

Going through the motions

By JERRY ARTH

The show had already started by the time I was seated. April Wine was in the midst of warming up the audience, and they are doing a solid though not very flashy job of it. The five-member Candian band was on the first night of its Fall tour, promoting its second U.S. release, "Harder . . . Faster." You may remember that they had a hit single, "Roller," on their first album. Well, that and a song from their new opus, "Tonight's the Night," were the only above-par performances. Being basically a three-guitar band, April Wine performed with intensity, though they seemed to be something you could hear in any good club, and probably aren't destined for stardom. Except for drummer Jerry Mercer. Outrageous-looking with his bald head, the man had a fantastic jazz-influenced solo that brought a little more than mucho applause from the crowd.

However, the rafters were shaking when Styx appeared and went into "Borrowed Time," one of the finest songs on their new "Cornerstone" lp. It should have set the tone for the evening, but as it turned out, there was no real theme to the concert — what it actually was was a mish-mash of all the Styx' songs that were known note for note, line for line. Most of the fans did not appear to mind this approach at all; they screamed and stomped at "Fooling Yourself," swooned and went into orgasmic ecstacy during "Lady," and sang out for the finale, "Come Sail Away."

The way in which the show was staged was passable, but left a lot to be desired. The use of a fog machine at the end of "Suite Madame Blue" was exceptional, as was the lighting. But the film of the sky during the finale was trite and cheap-looking, and the patter between songs was certainly cliche. For example, guitarist Tommy Shaw said that Philly fans were the only ones who made enough noise to drown out the music. He also said that in New York.

At the end of the concert, though, the 20,000 were cheering and shouting "We want Styx!," and the band returned to play one

In Concert
with Jethro Tull

By STEVEN COMBS

Jethro Tull displayed quite a flair for theatrics in their show at the Spectrum Oct. 16, 17. In town to promote their new album Stormwatch, the group faced an audience that had high expectations. This was evident by the polite but subdued response to the very tight, professional performance of U.K.

Eddie Jobson was dazzling on electric fiddle in the opening number. It was Jobson who carried the show. John Wetton's vocals didn't come across with much more than a low growl.

U.K.'s new live album Night After Night provided much of the material for their show and is doing a good business in response to their performance.

Ian Anderson must have realized that this audience would demand a knockout show because he provided nothing less. His appearance on stage was similar to Merlin the magician as he swirled his cape and gestured hypnotically towards his waiting flute.

The theatrical atmosphere was most apparent in the production of Stormwatch. Props included rain, [illegible] coats, weather maps, sea gulls, red metallic snow and David Palmer (keyboards) in a bear suit. The climax came as Anderson wielded a sword to cut down cargo nets hanging from the lights.

The costumes and gimmicks were unnecessary in the case of musicians with Jethro Tull's talent. But the audience had expected it and seemed pleased.

Aqualung brought the entire crowd to their feet with a brilliant display by Martin Barre on guitar. Later, a drum solo featuring Barriemore Barlow was riveting as lights inside the drums shot to the ceiling.

Tull played songs from their Heavy Horses and Song From the Woods lps but the crowd was most responsive to Thick as a Brick.

The first encore began with Too Old to Rock and Roll and then Cross-eyed Mary from the Aqualung album which caused an eruption of wild applause unlike any Spectrum show I've seen.

The second encore featured Minstrel in the Gallery and, of course, Locomotive Breath. No other Tull song packs the driving energy of this classic show stopper. The audience [illegible] much and gotten more

The mythical, magical world of the unicorn, phoenix, and griffen will be one of the topics of an illustrated lecture at Villanova University on Tuesday, November 6, at 3 p.m.

Sponsored by the department of modern languages and Villanova's chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, the program will be held in 215 Tolentine Hall on the Villanova campus. Dr. Alan D. Deyermond, a professor at Princeton University and Westfield College, London, will present the program titled "The Bestiaries in Medieval Literature." The British professor is an expert in the history, literature, and language of the Middle Ages, particularly Spanish, and is an extensively published author on the subject.

Written in the Middle Ages, bestiaries are descriptive and sometime imaginative books about the birds and animals associated with that time. They comprise a fairly complete compilation of all the facts and legends known then, and are believed to represent the earliest works written on natural history.

In them are discussed both the mythological creatures around whom intricate and fascinating tales have been weaved, and the actual birds and animals which lived at the time.

Some of the tales have fable-like qualities. Says Dr. Harriet Goldberg of Villanova's modern languages department, "Many of the medieval authors tended to moralize and so it was natural that some of the bestiary authors would do likewise. But the primary purpose of the books was to give a physical, factual description of the animals."

Teaching the bible in today's scientifically-oriented world presents a great challenge to religious educators. Recognizing this shifting societal emphasis, Villanova University is sponsoring a workshop titled "Biblical Interpretation and Religious Education" on Friday and Saturday, November 16 and 17.

Sponsored by Villanova's religious studies department, the workshop will run from 4 to 9 p.m. on Friday and from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Mary C. Boys, S.N.J.M., assistant professor of theology at Boston College, will lead the workshop. A pubished author, her most recent work Biblical Interpretation in Religious Education will be published by Religious Education Press in spring, 1980. Dr. Boys holds a M.A. in curriculum development and an Ed.D. in religious education from Teachers College, Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary.

The workshop is designed for religious education teachers and persons in other areas of ministry interested in integrating the bible more fully into their work. Some of the questions to be addressed are: how do people educate or minister with the bible in light of historical-critical methods? what are guidelines for interpretation? how do they function in a community of faith?

Through lecture and discussion, participants will be invited to wrestle with these and other questions.

New In Sound

Santana

Judas Priest

By STEVEN COMBS

Sanatana's new release Marathon combines uninhibited jazz with some powerful rock and roll and a touch of Latin rythm for a joyous explosion of musical variety.

The first cut, Marathon, is a short dance of percussion followed by Lightning in the Sky. If there is such a thing as 'typical Santana', then this is it. A driving rythm, soaring vocals, and a melody that flows, swirls, and crashes like a mountain stream.

Aqua Marine is clearly the best piece on the album. The keyboards of Alan Pasqua exhibit complete freedom to wander across the space of the mind. Each vibrant note seems to drift past, propelled by its own spirit. Devadid Carlos Santana also takes this opportunity to remind the listener of his expressive ability on guitar. It is downright depressing when the gentle experimentation of Aqua Marine is followed by a sure fire top 40's hit You Know That I Love You. It isn't that bad a song but it is a considerable step down from the heights reached a moment before.

All I Ever Wanted finishes side one with a blaze of guitar that sounds suprisingly like the Outlaws jamming out a southern love song.

Side two starts off with Stand Up, a rousing prelude to bassist David Margen's Running. His flying fingers are, of course, featured.

Summer Lady is an appealing love song that has 'FM hit' written all over it. It is not hard to tell which songs the group has geared specifically for airplay and which ones are closer to artistic expression than commercial success.

Stay (beside me) borders on disco. It is very danceable but has more musical variety, a lighter touch, and obviously more talented musicians than the repetitious drivel that is usually passed off as dancing music.

The album closes with some solid rocking in Hard Times. Santana's usual reserve is dropped to pound out their frustrations.

Marathon is a very professional work that carries a sense of excitement and celebration through every song.

By STEVEN COMBS

If you think that all Japanese live albums sound like Cheap Trick's throng of twelve year olds, don't believe it. The audience recorded for Judas Priest Unleashed in the East is almost undetectable. Unfortunately the band does not follow their lead.

Little can be said about Judas Priest beyond noting that they are worse than Van Halen. The one saving grace of overloaded heavy metal groups such as Van Halen and Aerosmith is the ability of the lead singer to cut through the din with a clear vocal range and some interesting lyrics. This ability is completely lacking in Judas Priest.

Most of the songs sound the same with lead guitarists Glenn Tipton and K.K. Downing thundering out unidentifiable electronic screeches and squeals. The vocals of Rob Halford do little more than suggest the title of the noise in question. The only thing that caught my attention on side one of the album was a particularly annoying piece of feedback between Running Wild and Sinner.

For a moment Diamonds and Rust promises a more interesting second side. While it is an improvement, it is not enough to warrant any excitement.

Halford's only attempt at actually singing comes during Victim of Changes. Even the guitar riffs sound more inspired.

Genocide returns us to the banality that is characteristic of Judas Priest's material. Like many not-quite-famous hard rockers, they are capable guitarists but lack any differentiating style or message. The droning sound of continual whaling away is far too monotonous to carry even one song, much less an entire album.

Molly Hatchet

By MARK WERNER

Molly Hatchet, the south's latest contribution to rock n' roll, has released their second album on Epic records entitled Flirtin' with Disaster. Side One of the disc opens with "Whiskey Man." Immediately one recognizes the guitar sound of Molly Hatchet, raucous, distorted riffs, complimented by impressive bass runs and tight drum work. Danny Brown, lead singer for Hatchet, displays some nice harmonica work, typical of southern rock. "It's All Over Now," the only non-original cut on the album, introduces the listener to the solo work Hatchet is known for, fast, clean and distinctive of no one but themselves. "One man's Pleasure," possibly one of the best songs here, features a very unusual opening rhythm section that might even be called funky! The middle of "Pleasure" displays what Hatchet does best — jam! Simple, straightforward, yet effective, this guitar break is Hatchet's vehicle for Dave Hlubek, Steve Holland and Diane Roland to simply turn on and let loose. Here they succeed sound complex, multi-textured and entertaining to the ears. "Jukin' City" is a guaranteed crowd pleaser, complete with sing-along choruses and handclaps to boot. Side One closes with the most impressive song Molly Hatchet has ever mustered up, "Boogie No More." Written by the entire ensemble, it could be their twenty minute tour-de-forde, their "Freebird." Watch for this one in concert.

Side Two, though not quite as roudy as the first side, does offer a few good tracks. The title track is actually as mean musically as the title implies. Zeppelin-like guitar riffs lead into the southern rock sound Hatchet is used to playing. Bruce Crump, the percussionist, offers some tight highhat cymbal action here. "Good Rockin" and "Gunsmoke" are the biggest disappointments of the album. Basic, hard rock bar chords, characteristic of the early sound of Kiss (Gasp!), open each song. The sound just never seems to move, though some pretty harmonic guitar duets do stand out. "Long Time," the closet Hatchet gets to a ballad here, is chock full of good picking and back and forth solo work, highlighted by Hlubek's Wah-Wah pedal. The final song on this side, "Let the Good Times Roll" (not the Cars' version), offers basically the same kind of guitar work, but with a catchy chorus.

Molly Hatchet's Flirtin' with Disaster is hardly "true southern rock" and will probably be enjoyed most by many who like true southern rock least.

of the evenings few really energetic songs, "Miss America." But that was the only encore they did, and what's worse, they walked off the stage to a tape of "The Grand Illusion," a song performed earlier in the show. The whole event seemed to be lacking in direction and performing energy, leading me to think that staying home and listening to their live album would have been better.

Women's Tennis

By BRUCE MURRAY

Since losing their first two matches of the season, the Netgals have strung a winning streak of fifteen consecutive matches. In doing so, the Netgals broke the Villanova school record for the most consecutive wins.

The most recent in the string of victories have been against LaSalle (5-0), arch rival St. Joseph's (4-1), Glassboro St. (7-2), Delaware County Community College (5-0), Swarthmore (4-1) and previously undefeated Drexel (4-1). The women's tennis team finished the season with a 15-2 mark — the best record in their ten year history at Villanova.

On Homecoming Weekend, Villanova hosted the PAIAW Division II, a Tennis Tournament which the Netgals went on to win. Villanova compiled points from placing several winners and second placers. Freshman Carol Harrison won the number two singles championship, and freshman walk-on Dawn Fisher won the number three singles championship. The number two doubles team Jeanne Regnante and co-captain Colleen Nolan also won a tournament championship.

The number one doubles team (Bonnie Stokes and Diane Cappuccio) finished under a talented Lafayette duo and junior co-captain Diane Williams also finished second in the top seed singles competition. Williams lost to a rival St. Joe's ace but three days later in the Villanova-St. Joe's match, she got revenge as she dealt the senior Hawk her second loss in her collegiate career.

"Everyone had a good fall season," commented Coach Langran on his team, "and we're looking forward to a successful spring. This team has a lot of promise." He added, "As most are freshman and sophomores, all should be returning next year."

year when the mayor of San Francisco was murdered on the day that ABC arrived to broadcast a 49ers game (in other words, two disasters struck the Bay Area in one day). In his pre-game wind-expulsion, Howard expressed his emphatic horror at the situation and remarked that a mere football game seemed unimportant in light of such a tragedy.

For once, I agreed with him. I turned off the set.

Why did I ever turn it on again?

Basketball Season Nears

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

That season is close at hand where the drummer plays his beat, the cheerleaders stomp their feet and unguided streamers rocket out of the crowd. Doesn't sound like a change from Autumn to Winter because it's not. It is the change from the Autumn season to the basketball season.

As last year, the Wildcats will take the court early and play St. Francis Xavier University from Nova Scotia. Though an exhibition game, this will be the Cats first step toward a hopefully successful year. Also, this will give the fans an opportunity to see Villanova's new highly recruited freshmen.

The St. Francis team has eight lettermen returning from a squad ranked team in Canada. The 1978-79 X-men notched twenty wins for the second year in a row, including big wins over Richmond and Boston College. The Canadians are counting heavily on 6'1" Gil Green, the shcool's all-time leading scorer and 6'2" Varouj Grunlian, a member of the Canadian Olympic team. Up front, 6'5" leaper Pat Adrien and 6'8" strongman Tom Sullivan will be looked to for leadership.

Coach Massimino looks towards the game with much optimism. "I'm sure we should be ready for our encounter. Without playing, we don't know exactly how good we are. It's taxing on the players to face one another every day. There's no substitute for game situations."

Any student purchasing a ticket before November 8th will only have to pay $1.50. Tickets purchased after that time are $2.00 for every one. All tickets are general admission. Another ticket-purchasing incentive allows one free ticket for every five tickets purchased at regular price.

There will also be a sign contest with a $15.00 prize. The theme is "Wildcats, welcoming the Canadian team." All entries are due on November 14th in the basketball office. Head Trainer Jake Nevin will be the official contest judge.

Ruggers Salvage Record

By ROBERT L. P. WALSH

After a dismal start, featuring a 1-4 record, the Villanova Rugby Team is experiencing a renaissance in the second half of the season. The Wildcats have captured four wins in their last five matches to lift their record to 5-6 and they are now in a strong position to close with a winning season.

Villanova travelled to Lehigh University this past weekend to participate in the Eastern Pennsylvania Rugby Tournament and to enjoy the parties on "the hill." Bolstered by recent victories over St. Joseph's (14-8) and the Villanova Law School, the ruggers were ready for a successful weekend of rugby.

On Saturday, Villanova opened with a 10-6 win over West Chester, a team which had previously beaten the Wildcats. The ruggers showed their character in this game by rallying from a 6-0 deficit. Villanova finished the day by shutting out Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine 6-0 to gain a berth in the semifinals against Delaware.

Delaware and rainy weather proved to be too much for Villanova to overcome on Sunday as Villanova succumbed 12-0.

The last rugby home game will be this Saturday against Delaware (winners of last weekend's Eastern Pennsylvania Rugby Tournament). Game time is 1:00.

Volleyball

By SARA KELLY

On Tuesday, October 16, the Women's volleyball team faced off against Drexel University. The close match lasted through all five games, but Drexel came up on top. The Wildcats lost 9-15, 15-8, 12-15 and 1-15, establishing a respectable record of 6-2.

On Thursday, October 18, the Cats crushed Kutztown by scores of 15-1 and 15-4, and later went on to beat La Salle 15-10, 15-7, 13-15, 15-10 and 15-9.

On Tuesday, October 23, the teams met at St. Joseph's College. The varsity team got off to a slow start but exploded in the fourth match to conquer St. Joseph's by scores of 9-15, 15-7, 7-15, 15-1 and 15-3.

Ice Cats — Tomorrow Night

The Ice Hockey team is looking forward to its best season with an army of veterans returning. Last year's top five scorers return along with the whole defense and a pair of top goaltenders. Coach Skip Probst feels that the Cats have an outstanding chance of overthrowing last year's champion, the Penn State Nittany Lions.

It is hard to find a weak spot on this year's team. Last year's team leading scorer Chip Kenney (16 goals, 22 assists, 38 points) is back with linemate Tom Curran (11 goals, 22 assists, 33 points). Senior Mike Kane (15 goals, 22 assists, 33 points), sophomore Bill Quinlan (14 goals, 15 assists, 29 points) and senior Assistant Captain Vito Canuso, (11 goals, 11 assists, 22 points), round out the teams top scorers.

Senior Captain Mike Fitzgerald leads the defensive troops this year. Other top returnees are sophomores Jim Femia, Paul Lofond and Joe Mitchell. Coach Probst feels that the experience and depth on defense make this the Ice Cats' strongest area.

Mike Alegado and Tom Margiotti will be in the nets this season. Alegado, last year's MVP in the Spectrum game, seems ready for another season while Margiotti will be trying to prove himself to the Ice Cats. Margiotti is a transfer from the Belgium "A" division hockey league where he won "Rookie-of-the-Year" honors.

The team opened last night against Textile and will play Penn tomorrow night.

Homecoming Victory

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The Wildcats couldn't have asked for better football weather when they took the field versus Holy Cross on Homecoming Day — sunny skies with a high in the upper 70's. And they couldn't have left the field on a happier note, a 29-14 victory over the Crusaders before an estimated crowd of 9,700. As in the Delaware game the previous Saturday, Villanova scored the first 10 points, leading at halftime 10-0. Unlike the Delaware game, however, the Cat offense kept mounting points on the scoreboard while the defense held the opponent to two touchdowns in the second half.

The second half began similar to the first. Villanova began by scoring a TD on their first drive, a Don Ziesel one-yard run around right guard. Unfortunately Chuck Bushbeck's point after was wide and the score stood at 16-0. Later in the third quarter, Mike Gold ran in from the five yard line and boosted the lead to 22-0. On the next play Gold's two point conversion failed.

Although Holy Cross scored on runs of three and five yards in the fourth quarter, Shawn Passman's 46-yard run after an onside kick by Crusader placekicker Jim Cobb, with 3:16 remaining in the game, clinched the Wildcat victory.

Maree Wins Two Cross Country Meets

By RAY ENGLER

Sydney Maree, the junior from South Africa, returned to the Villanova Harrier scene with a vengeance, winning the last two (and the only two) he has competed in, the Big 5 meet and the IC4A Cross-Country Championships.

Maree was credited with the individual title at the Big 5 meet, despite a virtual draw with teammate Amos Korir, the junior from Kenya, at 25:11 on the 5 mile Belmont Plateau course on Saturday, October 20.

The following week Friday, Oct. 26, Maree, who had missed much of the season with tendonitis of the foot, put on a display of gutsy running. Losing his shoe about 1 mile into the 5 mile race, Maree was forced to stop and retie it, which cost him about 15 seconds and many places in the race. Upon recovering, Maree found himself in 50th place but, showing good mettle, rebounded to take the race in 23:59.4. A new course record. Maree nosed out Korir (24:01.4) and Manhatten College's Marty Ludwikowski (24:03.6) on the Sunken Meadow Cross-Country course on Long Island. According to Maree, "If I hadn't been able to see Amos (after recovering from his shoe problem), I probably would have just dropped out." Had Maree quit, it would have hurt Villanova's chances of winning the team title. As it turned out, all worked out well for the Harriers.

Villanova dominated the meet. Senior Carey Pinkowski, the most recent "Budweiser Athlete of the Week" in the Villanovan, finished a solid seventh, despite a flu-like virus and a strained arch muscle (suffered during the course of the race) and ran 24:36.0 for the 5 mile course. Villanova's fourth finisher was senior Don Paige, running his first race in 3 weeks because of a bad anke sprain suffered the day after the Lehigh Invitational. He finished 13th overall, with a time of 24:52.9. Villanova's final scorer was senior Dean Childs from Canada, who took 22nd place in 25:21.4.

Villanova, by virtue of these high finishers, won the IC4A title for the ninth time in 17 years, easily winning by 45 points. Their closest competitor was Georgetown, who scored 99 points. Third went to Manhatten College (101), fourth to Fairleigh Dickinson University (112) and fifth to St. Johns (123).

Villanova now has a rest until next Saturday, November 10, when they try to win the NCAA Regional Championship at Lehigh University. The top 5 teams in this meet qualify for the NCAA National Championship at Lehigh Monday, November 19 at 11:00 a.m.

Cats Insult Irish

By DAVE DEAR

Losing streaks have been common for Villanova soccer teams of the past. This year's squad has broken that tradition by producing an undefeated string of six games.

The high point of the series was last Friday night at U. Penn's Franklin Field. In front of several hundred chilled fans the Cats battled the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame to a 1-0 victory.

The game had all the makings of a Flyers hockey match from the start. The astro-turf had players skating rather than running, and the fouls, 34 combined, resembled some of hockey's best checking.

Assistant coach, Karl Moehlmann, attributed the win to, "being more determined, and better overall physically blocking their offense at midfield. The fullbacks played excellently in the second half, defending the 1-0 lead. Rodney Lane played excellent, everybody had a good game."

The Fighting Irish brought a 16-8-1 mark into Friday night's Soccer Seven doubleheader nightcap. Jirak and Bill Schamp shared halves as most of the game was played at midfield. Radnor's Briar Barr netted his fourth goal out of a scramble near the Notre Dame goal at 59:58. Forward Clint Grimes assisted.

Moehlmann commented that, "Dave McHugh, Steve Frey, and Barr have made the difference in the last few games, offensively, more offensively than usual. By winning a couple games in a row, they gained confidence."

The streak began against St. Joe's, who owned a 10-2-1 edge in the decade long series. But the Hawks had not expected the type of game the Cats had in store. Revealing a new lineup, with McHugh at forward, and Lane at midfield, Villanova took an offensive role and won the match 2-0.

October treated the Cats well providing victories over Georgetown (3-1), Swarthmore (0-0), Trenton State (4-1), Eastern (3-1). But all good things must come to an end.

In 1975, Villanova had a 6-10-1 record for its most wins in its 15-year history. Villanova plays at Rutgers-Camden this Saturday, before ending the season with three home games: La Salle, West Virginia and Temple.

The team is still looking for the playoffs. With wins against Rutgers tomorrow (away at 2:00) and La Salle at home next Wednesday (3:00), the future appears bright.

This past Wednesday visiting Drexel spoiled the hopes for a longer undefeated streak by sneaking two shots past the Cat defense. The first half started with 11 guys dressed as soccer players. The team seemed to be going through the motions and doing nothing more. The second half offered some excitement as the Cats realized their situation and came on strong to play a fine game. But the effort was not enough Drexel won 2-0.

Triple Threat Carries Teams

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

It takes a special type of athlete to play a varsity sport in college, especially those of the caliber of Villanova. Nowadays, it's rare to hear about someone playing two varsity sports. Well, playing on three different teams is perhaps out of the question except for one athlete who happens to wear the Villanova blue and white, Karen Clabbers.

Two years ago, Karen came to Nova to be a nurse, not play sports. One meeting and three teams later, she's now one of the women's most versatile athletes. "I knew Villanova had sports, but I was coming for the academics," she told. "But my freshman year I saw a sign about soccer so I went to the meeting." So, along with impressing her coaches with her soccer talent, she also went out and made the women's varsity basketball team, as a walk-on, and the women's softball team.

As we all know, those teams other than the major varsity clubs don't exactly receive news headlines. This factor is often difficult for the athletes who participate in them. "Sometimes I think people forget we're a varsity sport (soccer) but we try," noted the Wildcat booter. Because of this, motivation is often hard. "Without some recognition, it's hard to push, I think I'm a tough competitor and I try to push my hardest," Karen explained. "The team has a self-motivation to be good, we're pretty dedicated."

Since basketball and softball are still a ways off, Karen made an optimistic evaluation about this year's soccer team. "We don't score much, defense is our strong point. But to win we must score."

She continued, "Even though our skills are sometimes weak, dedication and a drive to win keeps us going."

As for setting goals for the season, Karen felt that each game was a stepping stone towards a winning year. "To be able to know that after each game, it was worthwhile to play, I think it's an accomplishment. When I play good, I feel good," said Karen.

The basketball point guard found it difficult to find a highlight in her young career. But, her scoring the only two goals in a shut-out against Swathmore in soccer seemed to stand out. "I never played so intense. I'm like two different people, when I play, I'm agressive on the field but off the field I'm kind of timid," she mentioned.

With half of this year left and two more full years to go, at least three of the women's teams will have a promising backbone. And with Karen's obsession to play, those teams will be guaranteed a dedicated athlete. "I don't know what I would do if I wasn't active. It's an addiction. I would feel down if I wasn't competing at something," concluded Karen.

The town of Huntington, West Virginia was not very happy once again as the hometown Marshall University Thundering Herd dropped their seventh straight loss of the season at the paws of the Villanova Wildcats. This win was the first victory on the road for the Wildcats and the third versus five losses this season. Villanova disappointed 12,132 Homecoming fans with their 24-14 victory.

The game was to be exciting from the very outset. After the opening kickoff, four parachuters decided to make their appearance with the game-ball two plays late. When the silk and smoke cleared, play resumed. After a first down, two running plays and a five yard penalty, Villanova's Pat O'Brien found Willie Sydnor streaking downfield on a post pattern. O'Brien threw a perfect strike to Sydnor, who had two steps on the defender and the rest was a footrace. Five plays and 2:29 into the game, Villanova was up 7-0.

Marshall took the kickoff from Chuck Bushbeck 61 yards to the Villanova 35 where the Thundering Herd took over, first and ten. Marshall ran four straight plays and got nowhere, so Villanova took over possession first and ten on their own 28.

Pat O'Brien engineered a masterful 72-yard, eight-play drive capped off by an exciting 35-yard keeper around the right end. O'Brien used the second leg of his triple option around right end on that play. He took the ball and gained as much as he could on the right before he cut across the grain and went the rest of the 35 yards totally unmolested. Villanova spread its lead to 14-0.

At the end of the half, Villanova had the final possession. The Cats drove to the Marshall 33 with 12 seconds left. Chuck Bushbeck was summoned to try a 49 yard field goal. Chuck missed what would have been his career longest field-goal by three inches and the score at the half was 14-0 Villanova.

Villanova kicked off to Marshall to start the second half. A strong opening drive was aborted when safety Bernie Hober intercepted a Dan Wright pass at the Wildcat 45 yard line. Hober returned the ball to the Marshall 18.

Villanova took the ball with a first down on the eight. Don Zeisel took the ball up the middle from his fullback position for eight yards and a touchdown. Zeisel went in untouched and Bushbeck's extra point made the score 21-0 Villanova.

Marshall took the ensuing kickoff to their own 39. The Herd had only gotten to their 40 on third down, but a roughing the passer penalty helped them keep their drive going. The drive was capped off by a three yard run by tailback Ron Lear. The drive took 16 plays and ate 8:30 of the third quarter.

Both teams exchanged punts and with :57 seconds elapsed in the fourth quarter, Villanova took the ball and used 5:55 and 14 plays to score a 42-yard Chuck Bushbeck field goal. The score was now 24-7 Villanova.

Leading performances were turned in by quarterback Pat O'Brien who passed 6-13 and 128 yards. He also carried the ball 16 times for 74 yards, the best rushing performance of the day. Tim Robinson also had a good day, receiving three catches for 46 yards. Defensively, Bernie Hober had a fine day with four tackles and a 37 yard interception.

The Villanova Wildcats take on the Spiders of Richmond tomorrow afternoon.

Cosell's Irritating Incompetency

By PATRICK FLYNN

Jack Buck, here I come. I've had enough. From now on when the set goes on, the volume goes down and I listen to the radio on Monday nights.

I've reached the threshold of my tolerance for Howard Cosell. I mean really reached it. The man has given me an ulcer. I'd rather listen to the melodious tones of the construction of the Connelly Center all night than hear that man's voice for another instant. I've had it.

It's not just the fact that he's obnoxious. Personality-wise, he's as lovable as a tapeworm, but that doesn't give me a right to condemn him.

It's not that he's a hypocrite — praising the fans of Baltimore during the World Series after calling them "the worst fans in America" only a year before. I can tolerate frontrunners.

If the problem was just Cosell's personality, I wouldn't be so bugged. What bothers me is his incompetence.

I can't understand how a major network can dole out mega-bucks to broadcast sporting events and then entrust their investment to a man who violates all the basics of broadcast journalism. The rankest amateur knows not to constantly interrupt his fellow announcers smack-dab in the middle of a sentence. Howard does it all the time and it sounds awful.

The rankest amateur researches before a broadcast, gets to know a little bit about the teams that he covers. Not Howard. He learns the bare minimum and makes up the rest. And he mispronounces names (remember John "Lowensteen")?

The rankest amateur gets the story straight before digging up "pertinent" stories from the past to interject into a broadcast. In Howard's case, there was the time that he recalled how he felt in 1951, sitting in the stands at Ebbets Field when Bobby Thomson hit the shot-heard-round-the-world. He must have felt stupid, or at least very lonely. The game was played at the Polo Grounds.

I'm not going to take the easy way out and accuse Cosell of being biased in favor of the Pirates over my beloved Orioles in the Series. That would be a cop-out and, besides, I really don't think that he did. But how can this over-educated, egotistical carrier of high blood pressure dare to second-guess Earl Weaver, only the finest manager ever to field a team? Weaver's decision to let Lowensteen swing away in game two, which was explained and quite justified, was referred to over and over again as the vital point in the downfall of the O's. That's not objective. That's not even fair.

In all justice, Cosell started out all right. He's the best boxing announcer around and he wasn't so bad at football when it all started. But today he's too much of a personality — he wants the limelight, even at the expense of stealing it from the players, the coaches and the fans. He's over-exposed. He's out of control.

I realize that the ratings are good. ABC uses that as its rationale for feeding the American public a steady diet of Cosell, Cosell and more Cosell. I don't deny the fact that people watch, but they tune in for the same curiosity that has made hangings and freak shows popular for centuries. The games don't matter; it's the side-show that's packing them in.

The responsibility lies in the hands of sports executives, not network officials, to end this insult to American Athletics. Ball games used to be fun and relaxing. With Howard and all his fabrications, his half-truths (like failing to mention that the burglary of Willie Stargell's hotel room in Baltimore was an inside job, accomplished by a member of the Pirate's own traveling family), his gripes about a parasitic "print media," his interruptions and his ego, Cosell turns out to be about as calming as a Monday morning zoology mid-term. Help!

I remember the incident less

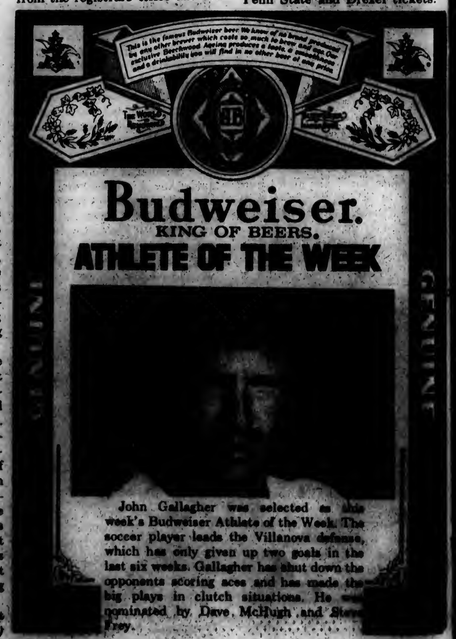
New Basketball Ticket Policy

Ticket manager Bud Murin has announced a new policy for basketball ticket sales which will limit each student to two tickets. "We've noticed a remarkable increase in demand for basketball tickets in the last couple of years and feel it is only fair to start limiting sales," states Murin.

Students will be required to present both a student ID and a matriculation card when purchasing tickets for Fieldhouse games. The matrix card which is issued to each student in the beginning of the semester will be punched for each game. Students receive the cards through the mail from the registrars office and are instructed at that time to retain the card for functions like basketball games.

This new policy will also limit ticket sales to two for employees and faculty. Basketball tickets are $5.00 for adults and $2.50 for students, children, faculty and employees.

There is a season ticket plan for the seven field house games which costs $35 for adults and $17.50 for students. "The season tickets are a good way to watch the games since you are guaranteed the same seats every year and usually we can improve them," states Murin. He expects a large demand for Penn State and Drexel tickets.



John Gallagher was selected as this week's Budweiser Athlete of the Week. The soccer player leads the Villanova defense, which has only given up two goals in the last six weeks. Gallagher has shut down the opponents scoring aces and has made the big plays in clutch situations. He was nominated by Dave McHugh and Steve Frey.

SGA Canvasses Graduation Views

By MARK STIEBER

The Student Government Association recently began to piece together plans for graduation ceremonies for the Class of 1980. The initial step was a survey issued recently to all students who will be eligible to receive their diploma next May.

"Our concern is to question every single senior to get an idea of how the majority would like their graduation ceremony to be run, stated H.J. Winterhalter, S.G.A. president. Survey forms were made available to seniors from teachers in the department of their major last week.

The results will be referred to Father President Driscoll who expressed a desire to be made aware of the general student feeling toward graduation. Specifically, Father Driscoll is interested in why some feel graduation should be delayed one week following final examinations.

Commencement for the Class of 1980 is currently scheduled for May 12 and 13 in the Fieldhouse. Students from the Colleges of Commerce and Finance and Nursing would graduate on Monday May 12, while members of the Colleges of Liberal Arts and Sciences and Engineering would participate in a Tuesday, May 13 ceremony.

In the questionnaire, students are asked to indicate whether they would prefer two ceremonies or one, with all four colleges participating. A single ceremony might be held outside in the football stadium or on Mendel Field, or inside at the Philadelphia Civic Center. The Civic Center proposal would rule out any inclement weather problems.

The form also polls prospective graduates as to who they would like to speak at commencement.

Campus Theft, Assaults Reported

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Sometime between Saturday night, November 3 and 12:00 p.m. Sunday, November 4, a vandal or vandals broke into Falvey Hall.

The vandal broke into room 103 of the building and entered the basement of the Falvey Memorial Library by forcing a lock on a door which connects the two adjacent buildings.

The vandal then approached the rare book room, shattered a narrow panel of glass above the door and entered the second floor library repository.

A glass case was then forced open and a 16th century tankard (once presented to a Lord Mayor of London) was stolen.

"The tankard was donated to Villanova by a collector, stated Rev. Louis Rongione, O.S.A., librarian. "Intrinsically the tankard's estimated value is $2000; however, its value to a collector is considerably higher."

According to Captain Joseph Cunnane, head of Villanova security, the case is now in the hands of Radnor police.

Fingerprints have been taken and as yet no suspects are being held.

In other unrelated events, the last two weeks marked a series of assaults, harassments, and disturbances on campus.

Early in the evening of October 31 a female student was assaulted in front of the Connelly Center by a man described as wearing "a long, black cape." Villanova security responded to the incident and the girl was treated at the Villanova infirmary for scratches and later released.

Villanova Security also responded to a call from residents in O'Dwyer Hall at approximately 1:30 a.m. the following morning where four males entered the girls dormitory and began slamming doors and creating a disturbance. Radnor Police and campus security were notified and the intruders were chased off of the premises.

As a result of another disturbance during the night of October 29 two area youths were taken into custody by Radnor police. The incident occurred in Sullivan Hall and involved a resident assistant.

Cunnane explained that two teenagers were apparently fooling around in the building; one youth was wielding a knife.

Tony Martin, assistant dean of men signaled night officers at the North Ithan gate to notify Radnor police. Both Radnor police and campus security responded to the call.

Suspects were apprehended by police at approximately 12:05.

The identities of both youths are known by police. There were no prosecutions. Cunnane explained that Security's primary concern was to get the youths off campus.

Amtrak Renovates Tunnel

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

Amtrak began repairs on the tunnel walkway underneath the Paoli local railroad tracks last week. Representatives from Amtrak promised to make the renovations at a meeting with Villanova officials Oct. 11.

"We put in a blacktop floor with a slight crown so that the water will run out the sides," said a man from the Bridges and Buildings department of Amtrak who was working on the construction.

There will be two drains on the north end of the tunnel. These should prevent flooding, said the construction worker, "as long as the drains don't block."

The masonry work should be done by today, he said. "Then a cleaning crew should be out, and plumbers to make sure the drains are open," he said.

At the Oct. 11 meeting, Richard Pinkham, director of transportation and commuter services for Amtrak, said the major renovation in the tunnel will be the enlargement of the catch basins and drains below it.

"We can make the catch basins and under the tunnel bigger so that it takes more debris to stop them up," he said.

Father John Deegan, vice-president for Student Life proposed at the meeting that a new lighting system in the tunnel also be implemented. "The tunnel is not passable at night because of the darkness. A lot of students are unwilling to go into it," he said.

The Bridges and Buildings department of Amtrak also worked this week on renovation of the drainage system of the parking lot adjacent to the railroad. The lot is owned by Amtrak, but leased to Auto Park, Inc. in Devon.

"We are reconstructing the drains so they don't block up," said the construction worker. "We'll also move the dirt out of the lot, and put up bumper posts so the cars don't run into the drain."

The tunnel renovations come after freshman Dorothy Zimmerman was fatally injured, Oct. 1, as she attempted to cross the railroad tracks. The tunnel was flooded at the time of the accident.

Senate Studies Sports Funding

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

A special meeting of the University Senate will be held next Monday, November 12, at 4:00 p.m. in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The purpose of the meeting will be to hear the Board of Trustees' proposals on new athletic facilities for the campus.

University Trustee Thomas Labrecque is scheduled to present the specifics of the Board's athletic complex plans, including costs, funding, design, location, and date of completion.

Details of Labrecque's presentation to the Senate were not available beforehand although the Senate is expecting to receive a summary of his remarks prior to Monday's meeting.

The construction of new athletic facilities and improvements of existing ones represents the second phase of the Covenant Campaign, the first phase being the construction of the Connelly Center.

The sole purpose of Monday's Senate meeting is to receive the Board of Trustees' presentation regarding plans for a new athletic complex; regular Senate business will not be conducted.

All interested persons are welcome to attend this special meeting; those who are present will have the opportunity to pose questions to Labrecque after the conclusion of his remarks.

Connelly Center Plans Develop

Liquor License Uncertain

By TRISH NAGER

Villanova does not now have a liquor license to sell liquor to be used in the Connelly Center or anywhere else on campus. University lawyers are attempting to locate one, which is a difficult task as Fr. Deegan, vice-president for Student Life describes. "We are looking for a "free" license, one which is up for sale. No new liscenses will be issued in Radnor Township since the population only allows for fourteen and there are eighteen presently in circulation. The extra four were issued before this law went into effect."

A license was offered by an independent agent to Villanova from another township, but was rejected due to the price and the amount of bureaucracy involved in transferring a license from one township to another. The asking price of the license was $85,000. Villanova is looking more in the range of $45,000 to $50,000, said Deegan.

If and when the University gets a license, The Rathskeller, which is no longer called the Rathskeller because the name no longer applies to the restaurant, coffee-house type atmosphere of the area involved, will serve beer only as an alternative to the other non-alcoholic beverages offered.

Rathskellers are usually found in European cities in the basement of City Hall buildings functioning as local pubs. The area involved at Villanova will not function as a bar. "It will be a gathering place to aid in the communication between students and

Student Union Sole Office To Move

By KATHI IANNOCONE

The Villanova Union administrative offices are the only student activity offices which will move to the Connelly Center, according to Marc Tuchman, director of the Connelly Center.

Scheduled to open this March, the building will house a game room, lounges, a travel office, rathskellar, music room, Tuchman's office, and the offices of Tony Alfani, assistant director of the center, and Food Service and Sales Manager Greg Chamra. The scheduling information bureau also will be in the center.

The Villanova Union, which will maintain its office on the second floor of Dougherty, will move its administrative offices to the center. Lucy Gorski and Jack O'Brien, moderators of the Union, will each have a private office surrounded by one large area for the co-ordinators of the eight Union committees and the general union officers. Union posters, flyers, and layouts will be done in the Dougherty work area. Henry Klehm, president of the Union, commented "The office in the new center and the work space retained on the second floor of Dougherty will allow the Union to carry out its function on campus on a more expanded basis."

Other student activity organizations have use of the Connelly Center only when they reserve a room for their meetings or planned programs. The clubs will still operate from their present areas.

Student Rights to be Outlined

By JANET McGARRIGLE

The Catch-19 committee of the S.G.A. is presently working to develop a Villanova student Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights will be designed to concisely and completely outline the rights of the Villanova citizen.

"Past S.G.A. administrations have attempted to give Villanova a much needed Student Bill of Rights," said S.G.A. President P.J. Winterhalter. "But problems have arisen concerning the writing and precision of the document."

"The issue is presently in limbo. This administration has already finalized Villanova policy on drinking and visitation. What we are attempting to do now is to work with the Catch-19 committee to clear up the Bill of Rights issue."

The Catch-19 committee has, in the past, attempted to coordinate Villanova student, administration and faculty effort to better deal with the alcohol policy in Pennsylvania. The Bill of Rights is Catch-19's next major project that will, according to Winterhalter, require that long, hard work in order to meet with formal approval from Father Driscoll, said Winterhalter.

The issue is presently in the communication phase. The S.G.A. is trying to go get student feedback on the goals, needs and desires of the Villanova community by developing a questionnaire through the lobby and opinion poll. However, the S.G.A. also urges the students and senators to make a responsible effort in discussing ideas and desires for the Bill of Rights, according to Winterhalter.

The Student Bill of Rights will cover everything from admission policy to graduation. The main body of the document will concern itself with academic and student affairs, and the general rights of the student as a citizen of the university.

The main guideline that has been used in the past for development of the bill is the joint Statement on Rights and Freedom of Students of 1967. The Statement was drafted in Washington, D.C. by joint committee comprised of representatives from the American Association of University Professors, U.S. National Student Association, Association of American Colleges, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors.

The present S.G.A. administration hopes to compile the outlined policy of the Joint Statement along with prior Villanova student rights documents of 1975, 1976, and 1977 in developing a complete Student Bill of Rights.

"The Bill of Rights will actually be a compiling of present University policy," said S.G.A. vice-president James Agnew, "Presently, the rights of the Villanova student are outlined in the Blue Book, the rules of the Student Activities office and the rule of the Vice-President for Student Life.

Agnew continued, "The student Bill of Rights will centralize the rights of the Villanova citizen and it will hopefully clear up any arising controversy."

The plans for developing a Blue Ribbon subcommittee for the study and drafting of the Bill of Rights are now under way. After it is completed, Catch-19 will present what it considers a proposal to the Student Caucus. The motion will then be introduced on the Senate floor of the Student Government.

Color Studio Equipment Bought

By WILLIAM ROCK

The University has recently purchased more than $80,000 worth of communications equipment in an effort to improve its audio-visual services.

The purchases were predominantly geared toward transforming the previously black and white studio in the basement of Falvey Memorial Library into a color studio.

Mark Asteris of the audio-visual department explained, "In order to make such a switch, a variety of equipment was needed. We bought two color studio cameras, two monitors, a new video switcher, and assorted other units with titles too technical to explain.

"This entire system itself cost a little more than $80,000, but that was only half the work. The problem was that to install this new equipment; the entire studio control room had to be rewired. To do that took more than four months, and cost several thousand dollars."

The new color studio will be used for the Speech Department's Radio/Television Production workshop and for any other Villanova activities interested in taking advantage of it.

Asteris concluded, "The primary function of the studio is to serve the University community. We do, however, do outside programming if it does not conflict with our Villanova schedule, and if we are paid for it. It is a good means of bringing money to the school."

teachers," explained Mark Tuchman, Director of the University Center. "Our primary purpose is to provide a safe and meaningful atmosphere to students staff etc."

The unnamed area holds a capacity of 260 people, has a dining area, tables and chairs on six different levels surrounding a dance floor, a well designed sound system, stage and fireplace located in the heart of the building. If and when a liquor license is bought, beer will be served in this area and will be restricted as to who drinks and how much is consumed. The area will have a deli, salad bar, pizza, soups, possibly some type of continental breakfast and numerous types of non-alcoholic beverages.

If Villanova buys a license numerous precautions will be taken to preserve that license. No one under the age of 21 will ever be allowed to drink any type of alcohol. "We are looking for a license for all types of liquor because the events would be geared mostly to faculty, alumni, those type of things; cocktail parties. Students of 21 years of age may be invited depending upon what the event is. For example, homecoming, students of age would be invited, I suppose," stated Fr. Deegan.

The programming board of directors that would define and enforce these rules and regulations has not been set up yet. According to Fr. Deegan the board will be set up just before the opening of the center in March and would most likely be composed of faculty, alumni, administrators and students.

Auto Insurance Bill Debated

By KIM RUSHTON

Pennsylvania State Senator Freeman Hankins, the author of new auto insurance legislation, the Hankins Driver Insurance Bill, was the guest speaker of the Villanova Political Union meeting last Tuesday evening.

The Political Union debated the following topic: This House favors the Hankins Driver Insurance Bill in place of the current No-Fault Policy.

Senator Hankins began his presentation by noting the present No-Fault policy is expensive, insufficient (25% of Pennsylvania drivers do not comply), and unenforceable. Furthermore, he believes No-Fault to be very discriminatory, especially regarding young drivers. Current rates for new drivers range from $300 to $1,200 or more per year.

The new legislation addresses many of these problems. A main advantage of his bill, Hankins explained, is the fact that drivers will be insured, not cars. "After all," he stated, "drivers cause accidents, not vehicles."

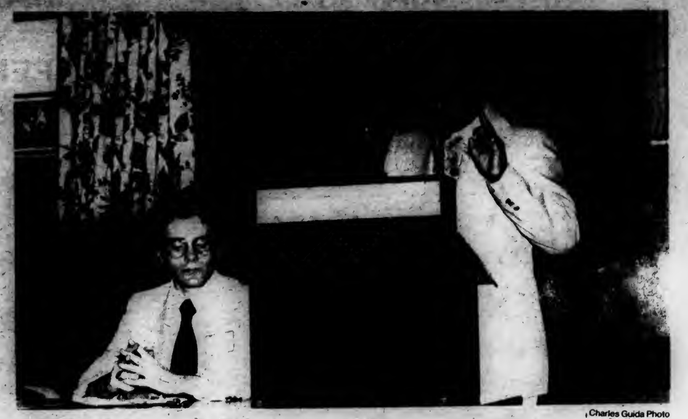
The bill would require every driver to pay $50 per year when a license is purchased. After three to five years, good drivers would receive "credits" and poor drivers would have to pay surcharges. All discriminatory criteria would be abolished.

Insurance benefits would also be increased by the Hankins Act. It provides for coverage of up to $20,000 per person for personal liability and $50,000 per accident. No-Fault presently provides $15,000 in medical compensation and $5,000 in property damages.

Hankins sees advantage in the fact that there would be a guaranteed revenue of approximately $400 million a year since the insurance is compulsory. Evasion would be almost impossible since the insurance must be purchased in order to purchase a license.

Senator Hankins attributes the low cost to the fact that 40% of every insurance dollar paid to insurance companies goes to company expenses, such as advertising, promotion, and legal fees. The bill would require no advertising and would pay no taxes. The state performing its own legal defense would save high legal fees. Court cases would decrease because of state arbitration of claims, thereby eliminating small or minor court cases.

When asked about the loss of business to insurance companies, Senator Hankins replied that collision insurance would still be sold by the insurance companies. To this question of this becoming another corrupt state beauracracy, he responded that the responsibilities would be spread out to different professional agencies.



Charles Guida Photo

Pennsylvania Senator Freeman Hankins speaking in favor of his Driver Insurance Bill.

The most strenuous objection was government intervention in business. Many viewed this as a violation of free enterprise. Others felt that although the bill has good intent, the objective could be carried out by effective insurance reform legislation, thereby eliminating the need for government takeover.

Those in favor of the bill stressed the great potential of the bill and the urgent need for auto reform. The abolishment of discriminatory criteria was highly praised. Very good structure and intent were also mentioned in favor of the bill.

Senator Hankins concluded his speech by saying that he thought the bill was the most effective way to give all Pennsylvania drivers inexpensive, effective, and fair auto insurance. He stressed the fact that students have much to gain from the bill and encouraged all students to investigate, to take a stand, and to let their views be known.

GOP Sweeps Tuesday Elections

Hahn Retains Seat

Villanova Political Science Professor Jeff Hahn, winner of Fifth Ward Commission seat in Tuesday's election.

By RON TRIOLO

Dr. Jeff Hahn, assistant professor of Political Science, was elected to the office of Commissioner of the fifth Ward of Radnor Township in the polling which took place Tesday.

Hahn, who ran unsuccessfully against Villanova alumnus John Alden for State Representative from the 167th district last year, won the contest handily by a margin of over 200 votes.

In a county where Republicans enjoy a 2 1/2 to 1 voter registration edge, the outcome of the fifth Ward race was exceptional. Hahn, a Democrat, was the only non-Republican from the four Wards under contest to be elected Township Commissioner.

Republican candidates were victorious in almost all of last Tuesday's races, in many cases by ratios of almost 2 to 1. In Delaware County, incumbent Republican County Council members Charles C. Keeler, and Faith Ryan Whittlesey, as well as their running mate Francis J. Lynch, captured council seats, defeating Radnor resident and incumbent Democrat William Springer.

Republican candidates swept offices races in both Chester and Montgomery counties. A. Russel Parkhouse and Paul Artic, both Republicans took most of the Montgomery county votes for Commissioner. Democrat Rita Banning, of Pottstown will be minority party commissioner.

Montgomery county elected three Republicans for judge, William Nicholas, Anthony Scirica, and Samuel Salus.

As the GOP tradition continues in the suburbs, the city of Philadelphia will have four more years under a democratic mayor, William J. Green. Three fourths of the one million voters are Democrats, in the city which hasn't elected a Republican mayor since 1947.

Green easily defeated opponants, Republican David Marston, and black independent Lucien Blackwell, who ran on the Consumer Party ticket.

Grenn is a former congressman with close ties to the Kennedy clan. He ran unsuccussfully against Frank Rizzo for the Democratic mayoral nomination in 1971.

Green defeated Marston by slightly less than a two to one margin. Marston, the former Philadelphia prosecutor, unsuccessfully ran against Richard Thornburgh for the Republican nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania.

The Philadelphia Democrats retained their overshelming madority in City Council as they won 14 of the 17 available seats.

Committee For Kennedy Formed

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

Three first year Villanova law students, Jeff Lutsky, Dan Gibson, and Fred Gilbert, along with faculty and undergraduates have formed a steering committee to elect Senator Edward Kennedy (Democrat-Massachusetts) as the 39th president of the United States.

The committee, which has been officially recognized by Stephen Smith, Kennedy's campaign manager, will now take on the task of trying to actively involve Villanova University in the Kennedy campaign, acquainting voters with the Massachusetts Senator's ideas and views.

If the committee can arouse sufficient interest there is a good possibility that Kennedy will visit Villanova sometime during the Spring, 1980 semester.

"It is estimated that Senator Kennedy will be in Philadelphia area between eleven and fifteen times, stated Lutsky. "We are hoping that he'll visit sometime in April (the closest date to the Pennsylvania state primary)."

"Kennedy will address the Law School on criminal code revision and if sufficient interest is present, he'll speak to the entire Villanova student body."

The committee, which now numbers some 150 members, will spend the rest of the Fall semester organizing; supplies will be provided by headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Gibson and the other law students pointed out that the committee is expanding and eager for more involvement.

Plans for next semester include a series of debates and a strong push for voter registration.

"We want to stress voter registration and may enlist the support of the League of Women Voters, explained Gilbert. "If successful, we'll expand our operation to Rosemont and Bryn Mawr."

Lutsky also pointed out that their group has the support of the Villanova Student Bar Association and its president, Bill Weber.

"The 1980 race is a watershed election, continued Gilbert. "It is the most critical election since FDR. The economy is out of control and the standard of living and productivity has dropped.

The committee members pointed out that Villanova must respond to the economic difficulties which will eventually affect us all: "The campus must address itself to these problems, stated Lutsky.

All members of the committee, when asked for some reasons why they supported Kennedy, cited the Senator's leadership capability, experience, and comprehensive health care plan as major factors.

Congress Course Offered

As never before in our educational system, students are involved and increasingly concerned with the politics of elected officials. THE 96th CONGRESS is a new Honors course for students interested in Congressional politics. Dr. Joseph Thompson of the Political Science Department will lecture and lead discussions germane to the understanding of the American Congressional activity. The course will be offered in the Spring semester, 1980.

A major focus of THE 96th CONGRESS will be the spring break trip to Washington D.C., to participate in the legislative activities of the U.S. Congress. The week of March 2-8, 1980, will have the class interacting with the members of our national Capital. In conjunction with the Washington Congressional Foundation, Dr. Thompson will arange a daily curriculum activity for the class, tentatively including dialogues with members of Congress, informal conferences with Senators and Congressmen, and seminar classes offered by administrative and legislative assistants. To defray the additional expense of the Washington week, a deposit of approximately $175 will be required from each student.

Interested students must register in the Honors Office, Corr Hall 101. Additional information on the course is also available there.

petition run by the Vice-president of Student Life, a student speaker was selected to represent their college," the S.G.A. president said. "We would like to use the same format this year."

Another alternative would be the selection of a prominent dignitary to address the student body. Graduates are asked to nominate someone they feel to be noteworthy.

The graduation surveys are presently being collected and evaluated by the Student Government Association.

"We are hoping that they will give each graduate the opportunity to participate in the planning of their ceremony," Winterhalter concluded.

Starvation and Death in Cambodia

By SUZANNE TAVANI

A second Holocaust is taking place in Cambodia! Seven million people lived in Cambodia in 1975, today only three and one-half million remain, the rest either killed during the Khmer Rouge regime or died of starvation. At this very moment two million are in immediate danger of death — by starvation. The remainder suffer from extreme forms of malnutrition.

Next week will mark "World Hunger Awareness Week" at Villanova, an institution not plagued by the immediate danger of starvation. While you sit eating an ice cream cone, can you relate to the starvation of an entire nation half way around the globe?

Students of Dr. James Bean's Social Psychology course do relate to it as caring human beings. But most others suffer from apathy, the disease which gnaws away at the American society.

In an effort to "motivate the campus," and "raise consciousness," the members of this class will sponsor a rally and vigil in Kennedy Mall, Thursday, November 15 at 12 noon to include both students and faculty members as speakers.

Bean, assistant professor of psychology, contacted OXFAM, the Oxford Famine Relief Agency, in response to what he termed his class's, "feelings that humanitarian concerns are more important than concerns of national sovereignty," which is what stops most government and United Nations (UN) organizations from air-lifting food to the starving masses.

While you sit eating an ice cream cone, can you relate to the starvation of an entire nation half way around the globe?

OXFAM-America, a non-profit international development agency funds self-help programs in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, neither solicits nor accepts funding from any government source and depends entirely upon private contributions for the support of its programs.

Jim Howard, OXFAM's chief technical officer and international disaster expert, headed a team to Cambodia and describing the situation "horrific . . . what we face now is literally the extinction of a nation."

OXFAM reports that 80 per cent of Cambodia's children are suffering from malnutrition in this International Year of the Child, for every birth in Cambodia there are 10 deaths, and only 20-30 per cent of the remaining adult population is dying — CAMBODIA IS DYING!

The Boat People of Southeast Asia.
Fast for a World Harvest, November 15.

OXFAM was the first organization in the world to ship food and medical supplies more than 1,200 tons to Cambodia disregarding political interests. Over $1 million from OXFAM has been donated, but much more is needed. Send any donations to,

World Hunger Awareness

By DAVE McMENAMIN

As early as Sept. 10, the Committee for World Hunger Awareness has been meeting to organize a schedule of events for World Hunger Awareness Week which, this year, will be Nov. 11 through Nov. 17.

The week's activities will be sponsored by Campus Ministry in conjunction with Bread for the World, a nationwide Christian citizens' movement.

The goal is heightened awareness in the University Community to the plight of man's physical and spiritual hunger throughout the world as well as here in our own country. Concentrating on the domestic aspect this year, Bread for the World is working to bring about a survey by the Federal government to determine the extent of the hunger problem in the United States.

Three major events highlight this week. The first is a RUN FOR HUNGER to be held on Tuesday, November 13 at 3:00 p.m. in front of the library. Student volunteers will run as many miles as they can around a one-mile course starting from the Library. Other students and teachers are asked to pledge a runner for each mile he/she runs. Proceeds from this run, co-sponsored by the Wildcat Running Club and Campus Ministry, will go to various Bread for the World funds.

The next event is a FAST FROM LUNCH which everyone can participate in. Sign ups will be held in the various cafeterias at lunch time on November 11 and 12. The fast will be held on Thursday, November 15. The money received from the lunches given up will also go to Bread for the World funds.

Finally, a concert featuring DANIELS, MASON AND GALLAGHER, will be held on Thursday, November 15: admission is a can of food! Canned food will be on sale in Dougherty on November 14 at lunch time and on November 15 at dinner time. The concert starts at 7:30 p.m. and will be held in the Day Hop until midnight. Enjoy an evening of good music, made even better by the fact that your admission will go to some needy people.

Every night during Hunger Awareness Week, there will be a discussion or film at 9:00 p.m. in the Main Chapel before the 10:00 p.m. Mass. All films and speeches will center around the theme of hunger in the world. In addition there will be a week-long library display and various letter writing opportunities to Washington, D.C. asking for action and help for the impoverished areas of the world.

Only through action can help for the hungry be obtained. Please join us in our week of activities. Further information can be obtained in the Campus Ministry Office, basement of St. Rita's Hall.

Delano Participates In Faculty Exchange

By SUZANNE TAVANI

Dr. Sterling F. Delano, assistant professor of English, will teach at Biscayne College in Miami, Florida for the Spring, 1980 semester as part of a faculty exchange program between Biscayne and Villanova. Filling Delano's position will be Mr. Richard Raleigh, professor of English and dean of the Humanities Division at Biscayne.

Specializing in American literature, Delano has taught at Villanova since 1969 and will return to full-time duties in the Fall of 1980. Raleigh, at Biscayne for 13 years, holds the distinction of being the only professor in that school's history to win "Best Teaching" award two consecutive years, and will teach Survey of American literature and freshmen English courses while at Villanova.

"Faculty exchanges are valuable experiences," says Delano, "they allow the faculty an opportunity to interact in a different academic environment." Assigned to teach a seminar in Modern American Poetry, Delano expresses enthusiasm in going to Biscayne, describing it as "different from Villanova since it's a smaller academic community."

Arts And Sciences Council

By JUDY TOMCZYK

The Arts and Sciences Council is a new organization on campus, presently in the formative stages, which will attempt to address the particular needs and problems of the A & S student. The council will open a channel of communication between the students, the Dean and the faculty, and thus provide students with an opportunity to speak out on major issues concerning their education.

The council will not function as a petty grievance committee, but rather as a board where students can propose solutions to problems that concern the majority of the community. The council has held two meetings so far this year and discussed some pertinent issues such as minors, graduation, concentrations to be changed to majors, students' teacher evaluations and the future of Arts and Sciences. When resolutions concerning these issues have been adopted, a report will be submitted to Father O'Malley, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, to be reviewed and discussed at later meetings.

The organization, rules and agenda will be controlled by the participating students. General meetings, held monthly, will be open to the public and anyone wishing to address the chair may do so.

Student interest, participation and cooperation is the key to the success of the Arts and Science Council. Interested students, related academic clubs and departments may contact the council's co-chairmen David Dear and Mark Zappy in the SGA office, 204 Dougherty.

Amnesty International

On September 3, 1979, Eduardo Urreta Vizcaya, former president of the Argentinian University Federation, believed to be a human-rights advocator, unwillingly joined the swelling ranks of approximately 15,000 prisoners held by security forces in Argentina since the March, 1976 military coup. Those who have not died are believed to be subjected to "systematic brutality" in secret detention camps.

In September, 1979, the Argentina government "passed a decree permitting missing persons to be declared dead — either at the request of a relative or the state," which cuts off the constitutional rights of the missing person's family to investigate the disappearance.

This chilling report comes via "Amnesty International," (A.I.). This organization "opposes by all appropriate means the imposition and infliction of death penalties and torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of prisoners or other detained or restricted persons whether or not they have used or advocated violence."

Each month, A.I. sends its members an "Urgent Action" report concerning an oppressive condition in a country, requesting that letters of protest, respectfully worded, be sent to officials of this country.

If you would like to join members of the global family who speak out for their silenced brothers and sisters, I urge you to contact A.I.'s on-campus representative, Allen Dresher, at Austin Hall, room 55, or contact Fr. Fittipaldi, Religious Studies Dept. "Dead men tell no tales." We who live must shout it out for all the world to hear.

Cambodia's Population

A Nation Faces a Slow Death

Looking back on the issues which have motivated students on this campus to take action, to voice concern, to work for change, we have seen a variety of causes, some worthy, some questionable.

Next week, however, as Villanova prepares to take part in Hunger Awareness Week, our attention will be focused upon an issue much broader in scope, much heavier in import, than any we have seen before.

While we sit complaining about the quality food in the Pit or in the Pie Shoppe, an entire nation of people, are dying a lingering and cruel death — starvation and brutal disregard for human life. Battered by years of imperialism and war, Cambodia's beleagured population stood at some seven million in 1975.

Today, that number has been cut in half. And tomorrow, more will die. Figures provided by OXFAM, an international hunger relief organization, warn that two million Cambodian people are in immediate danger of death from starvation. The remainder of the population, the organizations warns, suffer from extreme forms of malnutrition.

Regardless of their political orientation or alignment, human beings are in need of help. We cannot help but fear that we are indeed witnessing, as others have labelled the Cambodian situation, "A Second Holocaust."

Here, halfway around the world from the horror, we wonder what we can do to assuage the pain and the death. We have seen film of the fly-infested hospitals were emaciated children languish; we have heard the reports of the corruption, the disregard for life.

In a way, however, we can understand the passive response of the general public to the situation. It is distant, it does not touch us. And as long as the physical and separation between issues such as Cambodia and ourselves remains, we will focus our attention on local and much less critical, issues.

For now, we can only support the Cambodian people through prayers, donations and, perhaps, through a letter to a Congressman. How many lives will we save?

We hope that we will not have to be personally affected by a situation similar to Cambodia's before taking action.

School Spirit

Dear Villanova Community:

As the basketball team prepares to embark on another season, I would like to briefly express my feelings about the lack of student support. There were many times last year when I went down to cheer on the Wildcats at the Palestra where to my distraught, I found very few Villanova students. There is no excuse for such student apathy! Villanova is a major basketball powerhouse in the East. Last season, the hoopsters were the most overpowering team in their league (Eastern Eight). This year, the Cats are hoping to win the Big Five, not to mention possibly breaking into the nation's Top Twenty. The school has recruited three talented players in 6'8" John Pinone, 6'7" Mike Mulquin, and 6'2" Stewart Granger, who should all solidify an already potent team.

It is you, the student body, who should stop making the excuses for not supporting your teams. For one thing, you can't beat the price of a game — for you students it's $2.50 at the Fieldhouse, and $3.50 down at the Palestra. Secondly, the games are great social events, filled with lots of fun and excitement. It's a chance for some of you to make a little noise — for a change — in the positive direction! There is the color of the streamers and the liveliness of the Villanova pep-band to get you in the mood for some loud cheering. And then, of course, there are the cheerleaders, who always give 100% in order to get us actively involved in the game. Many of you don't realize how much the players both appreciate and react to your support.

How many of you loyal fans can forget that stirring comeback we made last year against Pittsburgh? Defeat seemed inevitable being down by eleven points with little more than a minute left in the game. But the Cats roared back, aided by the great enthusiasm exemplified by the student body.

This season's squad is by far the strongest that Villanova has had in many years. Don't allow yourself to be labeled as one having "No School Spirit." Come out, have a good time, get R-O-W-D-Y, and cheer on your team!

Better Security

Dear Editor,

Every time one walks down to O'Dwyer or Simpson Halls, the same complaint is heard: why aren't there lights on this path or why isn't the infamous tree cut back? Van Service or its lack thereof is another much maligned topic. Girls would like to be able to get a ride from the library to Good Counsel at night, but this is not always possible. With increased visitation hours this year and the possibility of further extension in the future, dorm security becomes a major issue. Everyone complains about security, but what is being done about it?

In answer to what we thought was a real concern about security, the RSA formulated an ad hoc security committee in order to research current problems and to submit proposals to Fr. Deegan for further action. Fr. Deegan was very receptive to the idea and I hoped, as head of this committee, that the residents would be too. Why then did we get back dorm security questionnaires with amusing but not very helpful answers? For those who answered seriously thank you. Why did no one attend the meeting on Tuesday night after it was announced in the paper, at Campus Council, and in Sheehan Hall? With such a lack of response, it would seem that students really are as one answer on the questionnaire stated "indifferent."

We hear the complaints and have some very viable plans for better security on campus. The problem is that we can not get them going without your help. Complaints alone will not do the job. Action is imperative. The administration is waiting for us to take the initiative. Is security a problem or should we drop the issue altogether?

For those who would like to see increased van service, better lighting (which is in progress at this time), better dorm security or any other problems taken care of, there will be another security committee meeting on Monday, November 19 at 6:00 in the RSA office.

Villanova students have often been characterized as apathetic. The Villanovan, wanting to discern just how far apathy extends, wandered about campus Election Day, Tuesday, November 6, and inquired: "Did you vote today? Why or Why not?" Here are the responses we received:

Yes, I will vote later tonight. Voting is a privilege.

Gino Mastascusa,
Senior Economics major

No, because I don't have the time. I didn't have time to register; I'm from Jersey. Besides, I really don't want to vote. My votes won't make a difference.

Joe Lucas,
Freshman Business major

No. I didn't renew my registration.

Lauri Castillo,
Junior Finance major

Yes. I belong to the country, so I should help influence its political situations. I feel that if I don't vote, who else will. If I don't vote then we could wind up with a bunch of idiots in office.

Maureen Humphreys,
Freshman English major

No. I don't think I'm allowed to vote here, I'm from New Jersey. I never voted yet; I was never home for elections and I never applied for an absentee ballot.

Mark Armelino,

Concerned

To The Energy Conscious:

Has anyone else noticed that upon entering the majority of the buildings on campus, one begins to perspire profusely? In these days of an alleged energy shortage, does Villanova University feel it can ignore the call of the President of the United States to set their thermostats at 65 degrees? It seems like a selfish attitude for Villanova to in effect be saying to the rest of the population of the United States, "Freeze your nostrils off while we revel in the tropical atmosphere of a Tolentine Hall!"

Furthermore, in these days of near proportional increases in tuition and heating oil, it seems obscene to maintain this stifling climate in our learning environment.

Yellow Journalism

Editor,

Although we, as readers, appreciate The Villanovan and the efforts of its staff, we, as sports fans, feel obligated to comment on the shoddy journalism promoted by sportswriter Pat Flynn. We feel that Flynn's constant negativism and sarcastic nature have no place in sports journalism, which should be totally objective in format. Flynn's writing are frequently filled with emotionalism which belongs in a dramatic writing rather than in any form of journalism. This emotionalism smacks of cheap yellow journalism which does not belong in a fine college newspaper like The Villanovan. One more thing that cannot go unnoticed is Mr. Flynn's very obvious bias. This biased nature makes objective journalism impossible.

On the positive side, we'd like to commend Mr. Flynn's attempts at exploring the sidelines of sports, but again, we'd like to see these articles written in an objective light in order that credibility be lent both to the article and to the newspaper.

In conclusion, Mr. Flynn shows promise as a writer, but his style would benefit greatly were more attention paid to objectivity.

Editor's Note — Although Mr. Flynn covers some sporting events for The Villanovan, his work also appears in the sports section as commentary on events in the sporting world. If any of Mr. Flynn's work has been mislabeled or has led you to believe that it was intended as "straight" reporting on sports, we apologize for the oversight.

A Mundane Letter To Milo

(Editor's Note: While looking through some vintage issues of The Villanovan (circa 1976), we came upon this "Letter to a Friend" and were immediately struck by the profound truth of that old adage "The more things change, the more they stay the same." Maybe it's a comfort to know that ole V.U. will always be a static institution. Anyway, we thought our readers would enjoy this letter.)

Dear Milo:

I have been at Villanova for two weeks, three days, seventeen hours and forty-one minutes, so I figured it was about time I let you know how things were at Wildcat City. It's really hard to describe Villanova to you, as you are a non-Catholic, and thus a mindless pagan doomed to eternal damnation or so my religious studies instructor said. Villanova is a really fun place — sort of a Boys Town for the idle rich; but I guess it beats living at home and commuting to Harvard on the Hill, Morris Community College.

My first day at this place was really bizarre. Getting rid of Mom and Dad was an experience in itself. This is how it went: Dad shook my hand and said how proud of me he was. He said I should work hard but also have a good time; he also added that he would break my ribs if he found out I smoked marijuana. Mom was totally hysterical, just like Ida Lupino at the end of High Sierra when the cops shot Bogart to pieces. She also made me promise to look up some skank of a girl named Thelma Lou Van Ostenbridge, whose mother she had met at her Japanese cooking class. As you can see parting is not always sweet sorrow.

After Mom and Dad left things really started to collapse. I went for a walk around the campus and the first thing I noticed were a bunch of nerds walking around in yellow tee-shirts with writing on them. At first I thought that I had stumbled on a convention of Polish fashion designers; but after observing that they were without bowling balls I decided my opinion needed revising. I asked one of the yellow peril what his function was and he replied that he was an orientation counselor, and his job was to show the freshman what a hip, groovy, boss, neats place Villanova was (those are his words not mine). After experiencing orientation I suddenly have a new understanding of the old adage, "Talk about the blind leading the blind".

My O.C. was a real character — his name was Hector, but everyone called him Skip. He looked like a cross between Tony Dow and all those guys you see in the New York Daily News, you know the type quiet conscientious students and churchgoers who one day goes bonzos and shoots sixteen people in the local Dairy Queen. Skip gave us a royal tour of Villanova and explained some of the more unusual aspects of life at Villanova. The most peculiar feature is something called parietals. I had never heard of them before and thought that maybe they were some kind of local food or maybe the name they give the special guards at Villanova.

What I found out was that "parietals" is just a fancy word, (maybe in Latin), for visitation between the sexes, which is forbidden at Villanova. I know you might find this hard to believe, especially as you go to Bard, but boys and girls are not allowed to visit each other's rooms. I thought that this would bother me at first, but none of the girls will talk to me because I am a male freshman, a status akin to being a Black in Rhodesia. The hot rumor on campus is that we may soon get visitation on weekends only, which is o.k. by me because I turn into a sex fiend on Wednesday afternoons, and I wouldn't want anything on my conscience. Just in case though I'm growing a mustache and getting a pair of painters pants and topsiders, so people will think I'm a stud or at least from Garden City Long Island.

Another hard thing to get used to is my room which is in some renovated hovel for sheepherders called Corr Hall. This place is really foul and every time I go into it I come to a meeting of minds with myself, sort of like the first time you go alone into the upstairs men's room in the New York Port Authority. Another thing which doesn't help is my roommate, Ray, who is a real swack from some hick town outside of Scranton. The other night we bought two six packs of Colt 45 from some leporus laneo that Ray knew from home. I don't think Ray ever drank much because after three cans he turned a dull green, br maybe khaki, and later he did a technicolor yawn in the bathroom. It was a real grossout and the next day the floor counselor, a real fascist, and probably bed wetter named Lester made me help Ray clean it up. The whole time we were doing this Ray was saying what a great time he had last night.

Well I could tell you a lot more Milo, but right now me, Ray, and a couple of other guys are going to walk to this girls college called Harcum; where they say that all the girls act like Ann Marie Squadladucci, except they don't have mustaches. Well Milo these guys want to get going so I'm gonna have to stop here. I'll write you another letter when I get the chance.

Remember what they say Don't take it easy, take it anyway you can get it.

An Athletic Complex Or Not

To build an athletic complex or not, that is not the only question.

For the past ten years there has been quite a bit of time spent on pondering whether or not to build some type of sports complex here at Villanova University. Everyone knows that the current facilities (the field house, the football stadium, the track) are far from adequately satisfactory concerning the particular demands of Villanova students. There is an extreme need for improvements. What should these improvements entail? How far should Villanova go? How much should the University spend to improve the programs and facilities? The big question to the student of today, is that if this program for athletic improvements in policies and facilities is to be implemented, and if this program is for the betterment of the future Villanova community, how much is this going to effect the tuition of each student, how much will I have to pay.

On Monday, November 12, 1979 at four o'clock in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall this problem will be the topic of discussion again. At this time, Mr. Thomas LaBreque, the executive vice-president of Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, a Villanova Board of Trustees member and currently chairman of the Trustees' ad hoc committee on athletics at Villanova University will make public and seek the approval of the Villanova University Senate on the ad hoc committee's proposal for a new athletic facility. What exactly is to be included in this proposal is unknown at this time. If you are interested you are more than welcome to attend this presentation by Mr. LaBreque.

This situation is not new to the University as was mentioned previously. Approximately five years ago the Board of Trustees faced the same question. At that time it was proposed by that University governing group to investigate athletics over a five year period. This action took place in 1974, and now the time has come. The day of reckoning is upon us. The future of athletics at this University is to be decided today. Will these proposals effect tuition? If it will, how much?

There are a lot of questions which need to be answered. There are a lot of questions which Mr. LaBreque will have to face. The answers are soon forthcoming. We will have to see.

The Senior Survey

This afternoon, a report was handed to Father President Driscoll as to how the seniors at this University would like their graduation to be held. The information was gained for this report by conducting a survey of the entire class of 1980. Hopefully, you as a senior took advantage of this opportunity and voiced your opinion as to how the festivities should be conducted.

The student government association, the student caucus and the office of student body president ran the survey with the assistance of Rev. John Deegan, Vice President of Student Life. This group felt that the best method of conducting the poll would be to run it through the classrooms on the departmental level. Hence, most seniors should have received a survey in a class of their major. With the cooperation of the Deans of each college and the departmental staffs this methodology was made possible. These aren't the only people who went out of their way to implement the survey effectively. Student Senators Mignon Miller of Nursing and Mark Zappy of Arts and Science did more than their fair share of work.

Because of the hard work and diligent efforts of all these people combined made the survey very successful. A strong sense of appreciation should be awarded to these few people who really helped out the class of 1980.

To graduate from an institution which you knocked yourself out to put up with the exams and day after day after day routine classes, with the Friday, Saturday, and Sunday morning queasy hangovers, with the acceptance of people you could not stand and the luck of meeting the friends you truly love, you deserve this university in style. We are trying to make this possible for you. We thank you for partaking in the survey and sharing your voice and opinion as to how graduation should be. (The results of the survey will be published in next week's Villanovan.)

The ACS

Who Participates in the ACS?

Even though you've recently completed mid-terms, I have a quickie quiz for you. It's not really tough because I'll even give you the answers.

Question: Who participated in the A.C.S.?

Answer: Almost nobody.

Big joke, right? Wrong! The A.C.S. (formerly known as the A.N.S.) has long been considered a joke on campus. For one reason or another, commuters consider the A.C.S. a dormant group. The A.C.S. has been considered to be so even though it is the only organization on campus that is specifically formed for the commuter population. The active members are sincerely trying to improve the commuter situation at Villanova. We presently have what is probably the most active executive board in the group's history. The only element missing is support from the commuting population at Villanova.

It is of no use to be complaining about problems commuters face among themselves. If you want the parking situation straightened out, you can not do it alone. If you want more commuter oriented programs on campus, you can not do it alone. The A.C.S. offers you the vehicle to accomplish these and other goals. The biggest problem we seem to face is that the commuter doesn't realize that they comprise over 60% of the student population at Villanova. That is a significant number, a majority in fact. Alone, one can not make changes. As a group, the University is forced to listen.

How is this accomplished? Each goal has to have its start. The first step towards the goal of cutting through the red tape at Villanova is to attend a general meeting of the A.C.S. As a group, we can make things happen. But we need your support. We need to show the University heirarchy that all commuters are behind us. We need new, innovative ideas that only you can bring.

We are not asking for a lot of time. It really doesn't take a lot of time. Meetings are Tuesdays at 12:45 when you probably aren't doing anything anyway. Time spent on committees averages out to be about one hour a week. With this minimal amount of time we can accomplish so much. It also wouldn't hurt to stop up at the A.C.S. in 213 Dougherty. But it takes you, the commuter, to take the first step. It is up to you. Are you going to sit there and complain about the commuter situation, or are you going to do something about it?

Parking

Parking for commuting students has long been considered a problem at Villanova. The biggest complaint has been about the cars without parking stickers taking up parking spaces that rightfully belong to those students who paid to park. Now, security has finally decided to do something about the problem. Towing has begun to take place in the main lot.

The security department has informed me that they plan to tow on a regular basis, especially when complaints come in. Security needs your help. When you see these illegally parked cars, report it. You paid for a sticker; why should you have to suffer because of a car parked illegally. I commend security for finally taking action.

Also, one last note. Did you know that if you park in a driving lane not marked as a parking space you are liable to receive a ticket? You are parking in a fire lane and you can be ticketed. The local authorities patrol the parking lot for this reason. So the next time you want to park a little closer to Bartley than a parking space will allow, don't be surprised if that little slip of paper on your windshield is a ticket.

LEO KOLETAS

— The next A.C.S. meeting will be in the North Lounge of Dougherty, Tuesday, Nov. 13 at 12:45. Refreshments will be served. Come on in and munch out. All commuters are invited.

— Intramural sign-ups are now taking place for basketball and women's volleyball. Sign up at the next meeting or in the A.C.S. office located in 213 Dougherty.

DEADHEADS

A Night in the Life

By STEVEN COMBS

"I don't think anything is for everyone." (Jerry Garcia) . . . unless it's a Grateful Dead concert . . . 18,000 once and future Deadheads at the Spectrum Tuesday night . . . The band starts late and takes a long time tuning up on stage . . . bits and pieces of half-familiar melodies flit into the darkness . . . the crowd becomes insistent . . . songs take form from wandering notes . . . there's no need for smoke machines and lasers now.

It is difficult to talk about the Grateful Dead without talking about their fans . . . the enthusiasm and warmth of the audience is tremendous . . . many have painted the band's logo on their face . . . or stitched it on their clothes . . . Deadheads usually wear a lot of clothes . . . living on reds, vitamin C and cocaine . . . Mom, when I grow up I wanna to be the Grateful Dead . . . All a friend can say is "Ain't it a shame?"

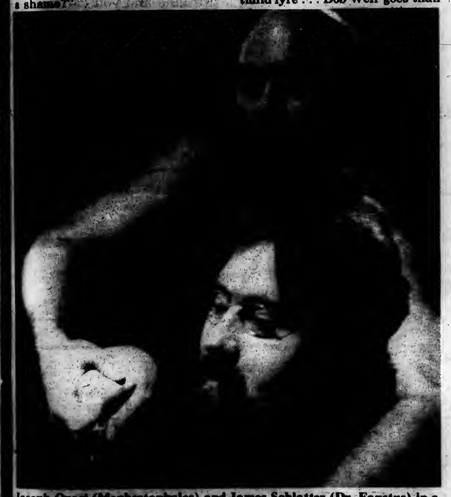
"Mexicali Blues" . . . quick punches of electric sound thrown at the night . . . "Looks Like Rain" . . . Bob Weir's vocals are shattering crystal . . . The extremely long pauses between songs are like commercials, you can talk and recover, but you don't have to listen to some fool try to sell you a blowdryer . . . each song is a concert in itself . . . don't you let that deal go down . . . the audience and the band dance and sing as one . . . At intermission it is already the best concert I've ever seen.

Their new album is called The Grateful Dead Go To Heaven, by the start of the second set, most of the audience has followed them . . . "Terrapin Station" . . . the beat pumps along with effective percussion . . . giving way to heaving pillars of sound . . . the music's intricate texture is a swirl of power and beauty.

"Playing In The Band" . . . popping, fluttering guitars . . . Garcia's hand's wringing notes from a timid lyre . . . Bob Weir goes thundering down to an inaudible frequency . . . I feel the earth move . . . Drumming duo Mickey Hart and Bill Kreutzmann . . . pounding on any hard surface they can find . . . big drums, little drums, all God's children got drums . . . the music takes on a strange style . . . either the band is getting a lot of high power feedback or these savage, howling tones are meant to be music . . . it is a primitive, emotional sound.

"Gooding Loving" wakes up the crowd . . . a celebration of singing and clapping . . . the band says goodnight . . . but no one is ready to quit . . . only one encore . . . "You can call this song the United States Blues" . . . and you can call this band America's best.

"The dead is bigger than all of us." Phil Lesh



Joseph Orzel (Mephistopholes) and James Schlatter (Dr. Faustus) in a dress rehearsal of Vasey's Dr. Faustus.

The Curtains Rise For Dr. Faustus

Villanova University Vasey Theatre will present as its final offering of the fall season Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus. The show will run from November 14 thru 17, 28 thru 30, and December 1; show times are at 8 p.m.

Marlowe's classic plunges us into the cauldron of man's soul. Seething with lust and passion, we see a tale of man's appetite for power, riches, and love. Faustus immerses himself in a world of demons and ghouls that tempt and tantalize, finally culminating in a vicious battle between good and evil.

The production is being directed by department chairman James J. Christy, whose last production, Shakespeare's As You Like It, won for Vasey critical acclaim as the very best theatre on the Main Line. For this production, Christy has brought together an ensemble of actors, and a stunning directorial conception that promises to bring new light to the play.

Vasey Theatre is located on the Villanova University campus, at Lancaster and Ithan Avenues. Parking is free, and reservations and information can be obtained by calling the box office at 525-6288.

Sound Waves

By MICHAEL BRODE and MARK WERNER

Latest reactions to some new albums: Tom Petty's "Damn The Torpedoes" has been labeled a gem by the top critics in the music biz. It appears that Petty's long-standing critical acceptance is finally being matched by commercial success; "Nightout", the first album from Ellen Foley, ex-Ian Hunter back-up and Meatloaf's dashboard light companion, has raised some eyes in the record industry. The album enjoyed surprisingly good sales and its release, and the single "Stupid Girl" is receiving wide-spread airplay on FM stations around the country; this same kind of success is being enjoyed by Shoes, a group from Illinois who have been labeled by one popular rock critic as "the band of the 80's", with their album "Present Tense" . . . It has been reported that The Cars will go into the studio (possibly in Paris) in January to begin work on their follow-up to the phenomena "Candy-O" lp. In the meantime, band leader Ric Ocasek is keeping his skills sharp by producing the new album from Suicide . . . Elton John's show at the Tower Theater last weekend will undoubtedly be considered one of the year's highlights. removing the frills from his presentation, John provided a nostalgic collection of classic material with emotion and sophistication . . . Look out for the new Santana (at the Tower Nov. 30) single "All I Ever Wanted Was To Be With You". The song is an absolute scorcher, featuring Carlos Santana's speed-of-light leads . . . Speaking of singles, Blue Oyster Cult's "Dr. Music" has all the right ingredients. The band hasn't been able to click on FM since that infectious spooker "Don't Fear The Reaper", but this one could be headed for the mark . . . It seems that Greg Kihn was offered the Springsteen song "Rendezvous" (which appears on Kihn's new "With The Naked Eye") when Bruce heard his version of "For You" at a recent concert . . . Looking at the bright side of the moon, Pink Floyd's long-awaited new album "The Wall' should be out late this month. A March tour is in the works . . . On a somewhat more somber note, Neil Young's ex, actress Carrie Snodgrass, has charged record producer Jack Nitzche of raping her with the barrel of a pistol. The case, in which Nitzche is charged in a five-count complaint with assault with intent to commit murder, is one of the first filed under California's new "rape by instrumentality" law . . . And Beatlemania, the Broadway show not the epidemic, is finally coming to Philadelphia. For information about the highly-acclaimed event call the Shubert Theater at 665-8051. The show runs for 6 weeks beginning Nov. 23.

Led Zep seems to be in a comfortable position these days considering that at the time of this writing their new LP, "In Through the Out Door," is still ranked No. 1 best selling album and sold a modest 2 million copies in the first month of release. Watch for a tour in June.

F. Mac's "Tusk," selling at $15.98 list, is considered to be a risky move in the midst of what some experts perceive as shaky times for the record business. But, their "Rumours" is still selling a healthy 20,000 copies a week.

Aerosmith has a new album soon ready for release entitled "Night In the Ruts." Steven Tyler commented, "We had to get back to raw guts sound; and musically it's somewhere between Toys in the Attic' and 'Rocks.'" Watch for an A-Smith tour in November.

And just when you thought you hated Kiss just enough to drive them out of your life, the Bally company has created a Kiss pinball machine, a year and a half development effort. For a quarter, even if you don't win, you get a strobe light show, a 120,000 point "Ultimate Bonus" memory feature and Kiss belting out two of their hits ("I Wanna Rockin' Roll all Night" and "Shout it Out Lord") during the game. And just so you don't forget that this is still the music business, Kiss gets a royalty on every machine sold.

Scalpers were asking (and getting) an unbelievable hundred bucks a seat at the Garden shows for the Who.

Unbelievable: It was two years October 20 that the Skynyrd Plane Crash occurred taking the lives of Ronnie Van Zant, Steve Gaines, and his sister Cassie.

Peter Townshend is now putting the finishing touches on his first Atco solo album. Watch for the disc around the first of the year.

Attention R.O.T.C. students! I'm sure you'll be glad to know that a former Marine, 22 year old James Stare, broke the Guinness World Record for marathon dancing by nearly 3 hours. The serviceman boggied for a remarkable 332 hours (14 days) before finally giving his feet a breather.

While the departure of John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd from SNL may have seemed a blow to some, the show has hired no less than 6 writers by way of compensation.

Foreigner's new lineup now includes bassist Rick Wills. He replaced Ed. Gagliardi. By the way, their last album, "Double Vision" went five times platinum.

Watch for the new Steve Martin movie coming at X-Mas when Universal pictures will release The Jerk, his first starring role in a feature-length film.

And finally, NBC-TV will debut a new rock show dubbed "Rock World" beginning January 5. The rock will be aired at 3 a.m. in the east following Don Kirshner's "Rock Concert."

Elton John Lit The Tower

By JOHN ZAGARELLA

When Elton John and the piano [illegible], it is like the most intimate dialogue between the best of friends. The man simply pours life into the music, and together, they provide incredible power and emotion. When Elton John and the piano meet, they take you on their melodic flight to where the sound is skillfully laced with feeling, you can reach out and touch it.

Last Friday and Saturday evenings, Elton John performed at the Tower Theatre. This was the first time since July of 1976 that the short, chubby piano player had appeared in this area.

To say the least, a lot has changed in three and a half years. All of the flamboyance that was the musical wizards' trademark has now been reduced to only slightly exotic clothing and contact lenses. There is no longer an entourage of musicians to accompany him. Instead, Elton's only touring partner is the remarkably brilliant percussionist Ray Cooper. Cooper has been associated with John for many years — he has also done work with many other artists including Carly Simon and Rod Stewart. Now, Elton John travels light — side from Cooper's presence, there is simply the man and his music, which has never sounded so rich.

In 1976, Elton John was still the biggest name in the pop/rock music circle. Now, his fans have diminished in number, and unfortunately, radio stations practically ignore him. Yet Elton remains a great artist and a great stylist. In fact it is completely obvious from the two sold out appearances last weekend, that he still remains a cut above the rest.

Going through a generous catalogue of over thirty songs, Elton John exhibited more talent and class in two and a half hours than most popular acts today could merely dream of exhibiting in the entire context of their career.

The first half of the performance was completely a one man show. With tremendous integrity, Elton tackled such gems as "Your Song," "Daniel," "Goodbye Yellow Brick Road," "Candle in the Wind," "Skyline Pidgeon," "Rocket Man," "Don't Let the Sun Go Down On Me," and a relatively obscure single released approximately two years ago, "Ego."

Midway through his performance, the opening piano chords rang out the death toll of the classic "Funeral For a Friend." As the stage became engulfed in smoke, Ray Cooper emerged on a platform laiden with an impressive array of percussion instruments. Instantly, as unprecedented one man show became an insurmountable two man orchestra. Together, they pounded out "Bennie and the Jets," "Sorry Seems to be the Hardest Word," "Crazy Water," "Saturday Night's Alright for Fighting," "Better Off Dead," "Idol," "Pinball Wizard," and his latest gold single, "Mama Can't Buy You Love." There were times when the duo's combined efforts where so crystal clear, so beautifully arranged, that the melody swept over you like a rippling wave rolling onto the shore. Two such instances were when they performed the haunting "Tonight" from the Blue Moves Lp, and "Song For Guy" on the A Single Man Lp.

Of course, there were the encores — three of them. The last was a mini rock and roll revue consisting of three Beatles tunes, a Chuck Berry number and his own "Crocodile Rock." It then became apparent that this multi talented superstar had given all he could, and all too soon, the performer regarded by some as a legend in his own time, was out of sight.

Throughout the evening, Elton John and Ray Cooper were both displays of perfect precision. Not a note was off key, not a key misplayed. Elton with his friendly and warm rapport, and Cooper with his sometime menacing stares and slapstick antics both proceeded to entertain in a dazzlingly unique manner. For two men to successfully execute musical compositions that were originally recorded with choirs and orchestras is no easy task. John and Cooper were so effective, the choirs and the orchestras were not even missed.

Ravi Shankar has perhaps been more responsible than any other person for bringing the music of the East to the West. His concerts and recordings with violinist Yehudi Menuhin have received critical acclaim. His composition for orchestra and sitar with the London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Andre Previn brought the sitar to the orchestra of the West. His influence on the Beatles and western pop music are well known. He has arranged and composed for the cinema and the ballet. Ravi Shankar's scope is so wide that the New York Times says of him "virtuosity in as high a class as anything this century has heard."

Ravi Shankar's performance is being sponsored by WXPN radio and produced by Goldfarb-Delfiner Productions, Ltd.

And Justice For All

By PATI NASELLA

And Justice For All is a film which exploits the corrupt judicial system, which in turn exploits the honest man. If it was a court case it would read the system vs. justice with Esquire Arthur Kirklyn (Al Pacino) as the defense attorney.

In the judicial world full of crazy lawyers, suicidal and perverted judges, one man, a lawyer, tries to survive and strives to maintain whatever threads of justice exist. It has a Serpico motiff, one which never grows old.

The beginning of the film foreshadows the ultimate and hopeless end, not only of Kirklyn's career but the end of justice. In the opening scene we find Pacino in jail for contempt of court and leaving on bail. He took a swing at one of the most powerful judges in the city, Judge Fleming (John Forsythe), thus resulting in the most predominant and symbolic hate relationship in the movie.

Kirklyn has been a lawyer for 12 years. Fleming has been in law for 30 years. The only difference is the latter is corrupt. Ironically, Kirklyn is requested to defend Fleming in a rape case for political purposes. He unwillingly does so, or else . . .

Judge Raffert, the suicidal judge, is a daredevil who luncheons on his window ledge with the pigeons. At first, he seems pleasantly eccentric but after many flirtations with death it becomes merely kind to say he's suicidal. A more appropriate word is mad. Pacino's partner is an unjust defense lawyer but something that sets him apart from the rest of them is his sensitivity. Gail, the lawyer Arthur lives with, is just as corrupt as the others. For the sake of Kirklyn's career and reputation and to save him from being disbarred, she tries to convince Kirklyn to defend the sadistic Judge Fleming. Fleming believes that the "concept of rehabilitation is a farce," yet he'll sentence a man without a fair trial because he is poor, black, white, wealthy . . .

Kirklyn cares about the little man getting his constitutional rights, not just the man with the money. He's a lawyer who cares about the "nickel and dime people" as one of his associates describes them.

The only long scene where Pacino is at his best, is towards the end. He presents his opening statement for defense of Judge Fleming with his eloquent dramatic monologue. His emotions flow with this presentation and work their way inside the viewer. You can't help but hate Judge Fleming yourself.

Through the excellent direction, the film took on a realistic approach with the exception of a classic shot of Pacino questioning an eye witness. It was a long shot viewed from down the street of identical row houses in an exceptionally spotless neighborhood. Al and the witness are in the frame discussing the man's passivity which is like everyone else. They don't want to get involved.

The film presents a clear picture of today's judical system. As for Arthur Kirklyn, if there are many honest ones left it's hard to tell. One has to wonder how many innocents are in jail today, being raped, beaten and eventually taking their own lives because — there were no Kirklyn's to help them. It's emotional. True. Cruel. Hopeless . . .

New In Sound

Yipes!

By JERRY ARTH

Recent months have brought a revival and proliferation of the 1960's sound in music, especially evident in bands like The Knack and the numerous other imitators they have spawned. Yipes!, a group making its debut as the first major act on the budding Millenium/RAC label, is such a band. With their first album, also entitled "Yipes!," they prove to be worthy of being called a competitor to a super-group like The Knack, not merely an imitator.

The band's sound — melodic, high-intensity pop-rock-is solid, but is not what distinguishes it from the rest of the post new wave pack. What sets the Yipes! apart from most others is the sense of cynical, jaundiced humor contained in their songs. Underneath the cutesy, almost breezy arrangements are pessimistic, hardened songs where life is not all surfing and beach parties.

The best example on Side I of the jaded Yipes! music lies in "Out in California." Reminiscent of the early Beach Boys' sort of "everything's groovy" music, the cut is really a bitingly satirical look at the so-called "good life," where everyone lies around the pool "and just as soon as they inspect their tan lines, they got a billion other things to do." "Good Boys," a song about youths who've gone astray, is a solid rocker, well sung by main songwriter, vocalist, and keyboard player Pat McCurdy. The rest of the side is rounded out by "This is Your Life," "Me and My Face," and "Girls Get in Trouble," a quite depressing ballad about girls who run around with married men, drinking Singapore Slings and dying young.

The songwriting abilities of McCurdy and guitarist Andy Bartel are really highlighted on the second side of "Yipes!." "East Side Kids" is a good potrayal of the poor's sometimes frustrated and resentful attitudes toward the rich as an East Side punk loses his girl to a West Sider and vows to "bust some heads." But the finest tune on this record, next to "Out in California," has to be the cryptic "Russian Roll." Opening with a funeral dirge, this song has the classic guitar of the 1960's, but its strength rests on the validity of its lyrics, particularly "I don't care if the A-bomb falls . . . Its okay 'cause it will all be that way in spite of me." How true. Noteworthy among the remaining tunes are "Hangin' Around," a tale of a man's exclusion from the disco world for being white, and "The Ballad of Roy Orbison," a Freddy Fender-type song about two lovers who can't speak the same language. But watch out — the mariachis could make you ill.

All in all, the Yipes! solidly put together and extremely well written debut should garner them many sales and fans, as well as ensuring a demand for more

Rock And Roll RETROSPECTIVE

The entertainment staff of the Villanovan has taken upon itself the task of selecting the 'best' 10 albums of the 70's. No greatest hits albums, soundtracks, or live albums will be judged. The term rock implies no disco, no jazz, no Barry Manilow. But if you don't know for sure what rock and roll is, then you don't have any business in this contest anyway.

Nomination forms will be used for just that. The final decision is up to us. The nomination sheet that most nearly reflects the decision of our only slightly biased and certainly trivial selection process will be declared the winner. First prize will be the winner's choice of any 10 single albums released after January 1st 1970.

The 'best' 10 albums of the 70's will be re-viewed three weeks from now. Nomination forms can be left in the Villanova office on 2nd floor Dougherty.

The Nutcracker

Pennsylvania Ballet's lavish production of The Nutcracker will be presented December 18 to 31 at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia. Twenty-three performances of the classic holiday favorite are planned this year, including presentations at 10:30 a.m., 2 p.m., 3 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Featuring an unusual Russian motif by set and costume designer John Conklin (a Tony award nominee for his Broadway production of Au Pair Man), The Nutcracker draws on his extensive research in decorative folk art and folk painting. Pennsylvania Ballet's highly praised new production was seen for the first time last year.

Over 392,000 people have seen Pennsylvania Ballet's The Nutcracker, far more than any other production in the repertoire. Choreography and staging in Act I are by Artistic Director Benjamin Harkarvy. The Snow Scene choreography is by Robert Rodham. Act II features divertissements by George Balanchine with additional choreography by Benjamin Harkavy. Lighting design is by Thomas Skelton. The music by Tchaikovsky will be performed by the Pennsylvania Orchestra under Director Maurice Kaplow.

As they have for many years, the All-Philadelphia Boys Choir, an organization of youngsters eight to thirteen years old from area public and parochial schools, will take part in The Nutcracker. Under the direction of Dr. Robert G. Hamilton, this group has travelled and performed internationally, most recently in China.

Children and apprentices appearing in the production are students at the School of the Pennsylvania Ballet.

Ticket information is available at (215) 978-1406.

Three Frosh Add Depth to Hoopsters

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Having a good basketball season year after year doesn't just happen. A coaching staff must work year-round to see who is available in the high school pool and then determine what they need to replace graduating seniors. Villanova is no exception and, this year in particular, the coaches have come up with three of the most sought after high school products in the East.

With the basketball season just a few weeks away, the coaching staff would like to introduce the three new freshmen players whom they feel have strengthened the team at various positions.

Six-foot, eight-inch John Pinone, from South Catholic High School, was the top high school senior in Connecticut with over 250 college offers. He scored 2,174 points and had 1,899 rebounds in his scholastic career. In his senior year, he averaged 28 points per game and 18 rebounds per game.

John Pinone

Pinone is a physical type of player who plays like the early days of banging basketball. His goals for the year are simple. "I want to contribute to the program so we can win." An easy going type of person, John is looking forward to the college competition. "Road games should be a challenge, everyone's against you. We must prepare ourselves mentally and be ready to play. If we can do that, we can overcome anything." Pinone is obsessed with confidence but he's not cocky. "I hate to lose, I strive to be the best at everything. The pressure people talk about isn't really there. The only pressure a player has is what he puts on himself."

Joining Pinone in the front court is 6'7" Mike Mulquin, an all-state forward from Georgetown Prep in Rockville, Maryland. Mulquin comes with the fine credentials of 22 points per game and 15 rebounds per game in his senior year. Mike, an all-round athlete, feels to measure the season's success, you have to see where you end up. "Our goal is the NCAA. From there, we'll take it game by game." Unlike Pinone, Mike is more a finesse player who probably will be used as a shooting forward. Presently, he's just looking forward to getting started. "I want to bang on someone else. We're a good team, we're talented and work hard. It's going to be fun when we win." One thing Mulquin hopes to shed during his college career is the "jock status." "As an athlete, I'm a hoop player but I'm not all basketball. People put pressure on you because you're supposed to contribute all the time. But after practice, I'm another regular student. I want to be known as a basketball player and a regular person."

Mike Mulquin

Rounding out the three recruits is one of the top high school guards in the East, Stewart Granger from Nazareth High School in Brooklyn, N.Y. Another well-rounded athlete, Granger averaged 18.8 points, 6 assists, 6 rebounds, and 5 steals per game during his senior year. Assistant Coach Pete Gillen was given credit by Stewart for his coming to V.U. "He coached at my high school, I knew he would take care of me." A very relaxed person, Stewart just wants to contribute. "This year I want to learn and win. With some experience, then I'll have something to base my goals on." The role which Granger will fill in the Wildcats' plans this year will probably be point guard.

Junior Alex Bradley leads the basketball toward its hopes for a Eastern Eight Crown.

Coach Massimino is very anxious about his three prospects. He described Mike Mulquin as "a slasher." Being used as a outside forward, he plans to use Mike also to help rebounding. "Mike is a very tough, aggressive player who's improving every day," Coach Massimino analyzed.

Stewart Granger, according to the coach, is trying to fit his abilities into what we're trying to do. Massimino paid Stewart a great compliment by saying, "Stewball is very good on defense. He will eventually become a better passer than anyone to ever come out of our basketball system."

Finally, Coach Massimino hopes John Pinone will put his aggressiveness to work on his rebounding skills.

All in all, the three freshman fit into the mold of the student athlete at Villanova and should add to the Wildcat's optimism for the future.

Women Harriers Take EAIAW Crown To Gain National Berth

By BOB CONWAY

The Villanova women's cross country team surprised everybody but themselves as they conquered the regional title in the EAIAW meet held at West Chester State College last Saturday. The victory qualified the team for the AIAW National Championship meet which will be held at Florida State November 17th.

Coach Jim Thompson had his team primed and ready for the Division II competition which featured such powerhouses as West Chester State, Providence and Boston College. Thirteen schools competed for the right to go to Florida.

Brigid Leddy continued her fantastic year with another brilliant performance. She completed the hilly course 100 yards ahead of her nearest competitor while turning in a time of 17:50. The seemingly easy victory for Leddy was a sweet one, as she handily outclassed West Chester State's Eileen Hornberger on her own course. Hornberger and West Chester State had given Villanova trouble in earlier meets.

Sue Shea was also superb for Villanova. She completed the three mile course in 18:29 which was good enough for 3rd place. Much improved, Carol Gilsinger ran the race of her life as she came out of nowhere to finish 9th. Her performance enabled Villanova to capture three places in the top ten.

The good news doesn't end there though. The top seven members of the women's cross country team ran a sound race. Darya Varaitis, Beverly Reilly, Nancy Gallagher and Amelia Cain also were instrumental in this big victory.

The team is looking forward to participating in the upcoming championship meet held in Florida. The competition will be strong. Amelia Cain said, "We will work hard and do the best we are capable of doing."

Icemen Split in Openers

By JIM FEMIA

The Ice Cats had two strong performances this past weekend but came out at the short end of a one-goal contest at the University of Pennsylvania. Hard hitting action marked each game as the Cats trounced Textile 7-1 and then dropped a tough 3-2 decision against Penn.

Last Thursday the Cats opened up the season against Textile and literally blew them off the ice. After one period the score was 2-1, but from that point on the Cats were in control. Assistant Captain Vito Canuso and linemate Barry "Killer" Whitaker each had two goals while Tom Curran, Steve Carr and Ken Downing added single tallies. Goalie Tom Margiotti had a strong debut, stopping all but one Textile threat.

Saturday afternoon, the Ice Cats traveled to U.Penn. and lost an action-packed game. The Ice Cats took an early lead on a goal by Curran but were held scoreless till the closing minutes of the game when Chris Mancuso brought the Cats within one. During the final minutes of the game Villanova stormed the Penn goal but the Ice Cats could not score the tying goal. Margiotti was brilliant again in goal, and defensemen Jim Femia, Paul LaFond, Mike Fitzgerald, Brian Emmrick, and Ken Downing all played outstanding hockey.

Villanova has a pair of away games this weekend. Friday night the Cats travel to Delaware and Saturday to Lehigh. The next home game is Nov. 29 when the Ice Cats hook up against the Dragons from Drexel.

Net Gals Post Best Record Ever

By SARA KELLY

This year the women's tennis team finished the fall season with a very impressive record of 15-2, a great improvement from last year's 12-9 record. Tennis, unlike football, is very difficult to play as a team because there is never more than one or two people playing at a time. In the case of football and baseball the team performs as one unit to succeed. The main reason why the women's tennis team is so successful is that they are all good friends. Freshman Dawn Fisher summed it up, "We all get along very well on the court as well as off. We're like one big family. I can always count on one of my friends. We help each other with any problem, socially or scholastically."

The women's tennis team has another large asset; talent. Dawn Fisher, No. 2, and Carol Harrison, No. 3, show great promise of improving during the season. Being that they are both freshmen, they will inevitably develop into two of the best women tennis players in the team's history.

According to Coach Langran, "Dawn is an excellent player and a very nice person. Several times during the year, she had to substitute for an absent team member, and almost always won. Thanks to her I never really had to worry about losing a singles match. I'm expecting three winning years with Dawn."

In an interview, Dawn stated, "Playing tennis in my freshman year was the best thing that ever happened to me because I got to know people very quickly."

Diane Williams, a junior from Syosset, N.Y., is rated as the number one player on the team. Diane only lost two matches out of fifteen this season. "Diane is a team player. She doesn't worry about her personal record. She is a very tough competitor and won't give up till the last point is lost," explained Dawn Fisher.

The only member of the team who will not be returning next year is Captain Colleen Nolan. "Colleen played very well this year. She is looked up to by all the other players. Colleen demonstrates good sportsmanship and a winning spirit which she passes on to the younger players," stated Coach Langran.

Coach Robert Langran is a unique coach. All the players look up to him. "He really takes an interest in us. He manages the team very well and is a very nice man," said Diane Williams. Dawn Fisher stated, "Coach Langran does not put too much pressure on us. He wants us to enjoy playing and than worry about winning."

When asked to reflect back on her tennis career at Villanova with Coach Langran," Colleen Nolan said, "I have known Coach Langran for four years and he has always gone out of his way to help me in any way he can and he is an excellent coordinator."

With only one player graduating and the remaining players improving, next year's team is expected to be outstanding. Margaret McGlynn, an exceptional sophomore team member, stated, "We lost our first two games early in the season before we had a chance to practice sufficiently, but then we went on to win fifteen games straight."

IC4A Champs Run For Regional Crown

By RAY ENGLER

Tomorrow morning, the IC4A Champion Wildcats will attempt to put their best foot forward in the NCAA Regional Championships held at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. The race starts at 11:00 a.m.

Villanova — boasting such strong talent as IC4A Individual Champion Sydney Maree, defending Regional Individual Champion Amos Korir, consistently high-placing (and former All-American) Carey Pinkowski, World-class miler Don Paige, gutsy Canadians Dean Childs and Kevin Dillon and steady Irishman John Hunter — will face stiff competition for the team title from such strong schools as always-tough Penn State, led by Larry Mangan and Alan Scharsu; Manhattan College, sporting such high IC4A individual finishers as Marty Ludwikowski and Luis Ostolozaga; Georgetown, featuring John Gregorek and Kevin Byrne; and Fairleigh Dickinson, with Solomon Chebor. Other potentially troublesome schools for the harriers are Bucknell, Cornell, Navy, Penn, Rutgers, St. John's, Syracuse and West Virginia.

The top five teams in this meet qualify for the NCAA National Championships held on Monday, November 19 at Lehigh, the starting whistle blowing at 11 a.m. that day. Try to make it up there that day, if you can, because it is rare that the NCAA National Championships are held this close to Villanova.

For those of you interested in driving up to Lehigh to cheer our harriers to victory, the directions are simple. First, get on the Pennsylvania Turnpike North. Go off on the Northeast Extension, until you reach the exit for Route 663. Follow 663 until you reach Route 309 (towards "Center Valley"), then turn on route 378 north (towards Bethlehem) and follow through about a mile to Seidersville Road, where you turn right. Go about 1/2 mile, until you reach a "Y" intersection, and bear left. Go another 1/2 mile to a 4-way stop sign and make a right. The parking lot and cross-country course are to your left.

ASME Volleyball Champs Approaching

By CHRIS DANTOS

The ASME-sponsored Coed Intramural Volleyball League will close out its short season next week, putting an end to six weeks of exciting volleyball.

Under the guidance of league organizer Tom McHale, the ten team league overcame many problems and became a source of enjoyment for many.

Bob Gordon's "Eleven-Ups" are going into the playoffs undefeated and will be up against either Don Wallace's "Blood, Sweat, and Beers," or "Nestor's Molestors," led by Nestor Maksymowych.

Mark Zimpleman's "CE Senior A" will be up against Mark Barbarino's "Marmadukes" in a tough match. Also in the playoffs will be Tim Murray's "Great Whites." Bill Albertus' "CNT," and "SPTOA" led by Brian Hannon.

Throughout the season, there were hard-fought close matches and a lot of talent was displayed on the court.

Those teams eliminated from the playoffs were Pat Walsh's "SSC" and Bernie Zimmovan's "CE Seniors B."

The semi-finals will be played on November 13th. The championship game on November 16th will bring the season to an end.

The league would like to thank the referees: Nestor Maksymowych, Jim Sicari, John Petisich and Ken "Amazing" Guirlando.

Laxmen Journey to Happy Valley

By BRUCE MURRAY

Over the Homecoming weekend the men's lacrosse team journeyed to Penn State to play what would prove to be a long day of lacrosse. Villanova was one of eight teams invited to the annual Penn State Fall Lacrosse Tournament which was won by Towson State (a division II powerhouse from Baltimore). Host Penn State finished second and Kutztown State third. The Cats finished the day with a 1-2 record and a seventh place finish in the tournament. They lost in the first round to a tough and talented Bucknell team (14-3), and then to Lehigh in the second round (13-9) before finally beating Montclair State (9-8).

It must be mentioned that most of the teams invited to the tournament, including Bucknell and Lehigh, play a full fall schedule similar to their formal spring schedules; in other words, lacrosse has become a year-round sport at many other colleges. Whereas at Villanova, men's Lacrosse practice is held informally one or two days a week through the fall.

"Overall it was worthwhile playing in the tournament," explained Coach Lee Stevens, "as it gave us a chance to see how other teams look this year — namely Lehigh and Montclair State who are both on our spring schedule. It was a chance for me to see what our potential is for the spring season, and what our capabilities might be. I had a chance to juggle the lineup and try out key people at different positions. The freshmen got a chance to see how our system works as they split time with the starters and upperclassmen."

"We're looking forward to a good year," commented co-captain Frank Giorgio, "and depending on how the midfields come through, how they respond to pressure, we could have a banner year. Our returning veterans have excellent stickwork on and off the field," added Giorgio, "and potentially the freshmen could come in and help us a lot."

Football Schedule Changes

Villanova athletic director, Dr. Ted Aceto, has made changes affecting three football games for the upcoming 1980 and 1981 seasons.

Temple and Villanova have agreed to switch home and away games for 1980 and 1981. The 1980 game will be played at Villanova Stadium on Saturday, November 22, and the 1981 game will be hosted by Temple at Veterans Stadium on Saturday, September 5, the weekend before Labor Day. That contest was to be held on Saturday, November 28.

Also, the Wildcats have changed the date of their Maryland game next season. They will meet the Terrapins on Saturday, September 6 instead of Saturday, October 4, in College Park, Md. The Villanova-Maryland game will begin the 1980 season for the Wildcats.

Villanova lost to Maryland, 24-20, in the opening game for both teams this season.

Booter Gals Play Strong Defense

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

The women's soccer team has shutout their opponents in all of their victories.

The solid defensive standouts, halfbacks Nina Wiezcorek and Karen Clabbers, captain Robin Glackin and freshman Denise Reid have worked with goalie Susie Stroud and the entire team to defend the Wildcat territory.

Stroud, a senior, has protected the V.U. goal with 12 saves against Rutgers, three against Lehigh and eight against Penn. These three games were a string of wins for the booters. The Cats took Franklin and Marshall 2-1 and both Lehigh and Penn with tallies of 1-0.

The Wildcats met Penn on the astro-turf of Franklin Field and adjusted well to the new texture.

Wieczoreck, a defensive standout has also demonstrated her offensive talents, scoring the lone goal against Rutgers and assisting forward, Donna Lohr in the Lehigh game. Lohr also scored the single goal against Franklin and Marshall.

The booters ended the season with a 4-6-1 record.

Meet The Wildcats

Tonight there will be a "Meet the Wildcats Nite" in the North Lounge at 6:30 p.m. Those attending will have an opportunity to talk to the players and coaches. There will also be a Big Five Highlight Film shown. Refreshments will be provided.

Intramurals

Last Thursday, under clear skies and 70 degree temperatures, the annual Villanova Golf Tournament took place at the Valley Forge Golf Course.

The temperature was not the only thing in the 70's that day as junior business student Thomas Crossin from Forty Fort, Pennsylvania played an incredible round of 79 to win the tourney.

A distant second was senior Al Forte and six strokes off Al's pace was third place finisher Lou Cascantano.

Three Frosh Add Depth to Hoopsters

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Having a good basketball season year after year doesn't just happen. A coaching staff must work year-round to see who is available in the high school pool and then determine what they need to replace graduating seniors. Villanova is no exception and, this year in particular, the coaches have come up with three of the most sought after high school products in the East.

With the basketball season just a few weeks away, the coaching staff would like to introduce the three new freshmen players whom they feel have strengthened the team at various positions.

Six-foot, eight-inch John Pinone, from South Catholic High School, was the top high school senior in Connecticut with over 250 college offers. He scored 2,174 points and had 1,899 rebounds in his scholastic career. In his senior year, he averaged 28 points per game and 18 rebounds per game.

John Pinone

Pinone is a physical type of player who plays like the early days of banging basketball. His goals for the year are simple, "I want to contribute to the program so we can win." An easy going type of person, John is looking forward to the college competition. "Road games should be a challenge, everyone's against you. We must prepare ourselves mentally and be ready to play. If we can do that, we can overcome anything." Pinone is obsessed with confidence but he's not cocky. "I hate to lose, I strive to be the best at everything. The pressure people talk about isn't really there. The only pressure a player has is what he puts on himself."

Joining Pinone in the front court is 6'7" Mike Mulquin, an all-state forward from Georgetown Prep in Rockville, Maryland. Mulquin comes with the fine credentials of 22 points per game and 15 rebounds per game in his senior year. Mike, an all-round athlete, feels to measure the season's success, you have to see where you end up. "Our goal is the NCAA. From there, we'll take it game by game." Unlike Pinone, Mike is more a finesse player who probably will be used as a shooting forward. Presently, he's just looking forward to getting started. "I want to bang on someone else. We're a good team, we're talented and work hard. It's going to be fun when we win." One thing Mulquin hopes to shed during his college career is the "jock status." "As an athlete, I'm a hoop player but I'm not all basketball. People put pressure on you because you're supposed to contribute all the time. But after practice, I'm another regular student. I want to be known as a basketball player and a regular person."

Mike Mulquin

Rounding out the three recruits is one of the top high school guards in the East, Stewart Granger from Nazareth High School in Brooklyn, N.Y. Another well-rounded athlete, Granger averaged 18.8 points, 6 assists, 6 rebounds, and 5 steals per game during his senior year. Assistant Coach Pete Gillen was given credit by Stewart for his coming to V.U. "He coached at my high school, I knew he would take care of me." A very relaxed person, Stewart just wants to contribute. "This year I want to learn and win. With some experience, then I'll have something to base my goals on." The role which Granger will fill in the Wildcats' plans this year will probably be point guard.

Junior Alex Bradley leads the basketball toward its hopes for a Eastern Eight Crown.

Coach Massimino is very anxious about his three prospects. He described Mike Mulquin as "a slasher." Being used as a outside forward, he plans to use Mike also to help rebounding. "Mike is a very tough, aggressive player who's improving every day," Coach Massimino analyzed.

Stewart Granger, according to the coach, is trying to fit his abilities into what we're trying to do. Massimino paid Stewart a great compliment by saying, "Stewball is very good on defense. He will eventually become a better passer than anyone to ever come out of our basketball system."

Finally, Coach Massimino hopes John Pinone will put his aggressiveness to work on his rebounding skills.

All in all, the three freshman fit into the mold of the student athlete at Villanova and should add to the Wildcat's optimism for the future.

Women Harriers Take EAIAW Crown To Gain National Berth

By BOB CONWAY

The Villanova women's cross country team surprised everybody but themselves as they conquered the regional title in the EAIAW meet held at West Chester State College last Saturday. The victory qualified the team for the AIAW National Championship meet which will be held at Florida State November 17th.

Coach Jim Thompson had his team primed and ready for the Division II competition which featured such powerhouses as West Chester State, Providence and Boston College. Thirteen schools competed for the right to go to Florida.

Brigid Leddy continued her fantastic year with another brilliant performance. She completed the hilly course 100 yards ahead of her nearest competitor while turning in a time of 17:50. The seemingly easy victory for Leddy was a sweet one, as she handily outclassed West Chester State's Eileen Hornberger on her own course. Hornberger and West Chester State had given Villanova trouble in earlier meets.

Sue Shea was also superb for Villanova. She completed the three mile course in 18:29 which was good enough for 3rd place. Much improved, Carol Gilsinger ran the race of her life as she came out of nowhere to finish 9th. Her performance enabled Villanova to capture three places in the top ten.

The good news doesn't end there though. The top seven members of the women's cross country team ran a sound race. Darya Varaitis, Beverly Reilly, Nancy Gallagher and Amelia Cain also were instrumental in this big victory.

The team is looking forward to participating in the upcoming championship meet held in Florida. The competition will be strong. Amelia Cain said, "We will work hard and do the best we are capable of doing."

Icemen Split in Openers

By JIM FEMIA

The Ice Cats had two strong performances this past weekend but came out at the short end of a one-goal contest at the University of Pennsylvania. Hard hitting action marked each game as the Cats trounced Textile 7-1 and then dropped a tough 3-2 decision against Penn.

Last Thursday the Cats opened up the season against Textile and literally blew them off the ice. After one period the score was 2-1, but from that point on the Cats were in control. Assistant Captain Vito Canuso and linemate Barry "Killer" Whitaker each had two goals while Tom Curran, Steve Carr and Ken Downing added single tallies. Goalie Tom Margiotti had a strong debut, stopping all but one Textile threat.

Saturday afternoon, the Ice Cats traveled to U.Penn. and lost an action-packed game. The Ice Cats took an early lead on a goal by Curran but were held scoreless till the closing minutes of the game when Chris Mancuso brought the Cats within one. During the final minutes of the game Villanova stormed the Penn goal but the Ice Cats could not score the tying goal. Margiotti was brilliant again in goal, and defensemen Jim Femia, Paul LaFond, Mike Fitzgerald, Brian Emmrick, and Ken Downing all played outstanding hockey.

Villanova has a pair of away games this weekend. Friday night the Cats travel to Delaware and Saturday to Lehigh. The next home game is Nov. 29 when the Ice Cats hook up against the Dragons from Drexel.

Mark Zimpleman's "CE Senior A" will be up against Mark Barbarino's "Marmadukes" in a tough match. Also in the playoffs will be Tim Murray's "Great Whites." Bill Albertus' "CNT," and "SP-TOA" led by Brian Hannon.

Throughout the season, there were hard-fought close matches and a lot of talent was displayed on the court.

Those teams eliminated from the playoffs were Pat Walsh's "SSC" and Bernie Zimmovan's "CE Seniors B."

The semi-finals will be played on November 13th. The championship game on November 16th will bring the season to an end.

The league would like to thank the referees: Nestor Maksymowych, Jim Sicari, John Petisich and Ken "Amazing" Guirlando.

Laxmen Journey to Happy Valley

By BRUCE MURRAY

Over the Homecoming weekend the men's lacrosse team journeyed to Penn State to play what would prove to be a long day of lacrosse. Villanova was one of eight teams invited to the annual Penn State Fall Lacrosse Tournament which was won by Towson State (a division II powerhouse from Baltimore). Host Penn State finished second and Kutztown State third. The Cats finished the day with a 1-2 record and a seventh place finish in the tournament. They lost in the first round to a tough and talented Bucknell team (14-3), and then to Lehigh in the second round (13-9) before finally beating Montclair State (9-8).

It must be mentioned that most of the teams invited to the tournament, including Bucknell and Lehigh, play a full fall schedule similar to their formal spring schedules; in other words, lacrosse has become a year-round sport at many other colleges. Whereas at Villanova, men's Lacrosse practice is held informally one or two days a week through the fall.

"Overall it was worthwhile playing in the tournament," explained Coach Lee Stevens, "as it gave us a chance to see how other teams look this year — namely Lehigh and Montclair State who are both on our spring schedule. It was a chance for me to see what our potential is for the spring season, and what our capabilities might be. I had a chance to juggle the lineup and try out key people at different positions. The freshmen got a chance to see how our system works as they split time with the starters and upperclassmen."

"We're looking forward to a good year," commented co-captain Frank Giorgio, "and depending on how the midfields come through, how they respond to pressure, we could have a banner year. Our returning veterans have excellent stickwork on and off the field," added Giorgio, "and potentially the freshmen could come in and help us a lot."

Booter Gals Play Strong Defense

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

The women's soccer team has shutout their opponents in all of their victories.

The solid defensive standouts, halfbacks Nina Wiezcorek and Karen Clabbers, captain Robin Glackin and freshman Denise Reid have worked with goalie Susie Stroud and the entire team to defend the Wildcat territory.

Stroud, a senior, has protected the V.U. goal with 12 saves against Rutgers, three against Lehigh and eight against Penn. These three games were a string of wins for the booters. The Cats took Franklin and Marshall 2-1 and both Lehigh and Penn with tallies of 1-0.

The Wildcats met Penn on the astro-turf of Franklin Field and adjusted well to the new texture.

Wiezcoreck, a defensive standout has also demonstrated her offensive talents, scoring the lone goal against Rutgers and assisting forward, Donna Lohr in the Lehigh game. Lohr also scored the single goal against Franklin and Marshall.

The booters ended the season with a 4-6-1 record.

Meet The Wildcats

Tonight there will be a "Meet the Wildcats Nite" in the North Lounge at 6:30 p.m. Those attending will have an opportunity to talk to the players and coaches. There will also be a Big Five Highlight Film shown. Refreshments will be provided.

Intramurals

Last Thursday, under clear skies and 70 degree temperatures, the annual Villanova Golf Tournament took place at the Valley Forge Golf Course.

The temperature was not the only thing in the 70's that day as junior business student Thomas Crossin from Forty Fort, Pennsylvania played an incredible round of 79 to win the tourney.

A distant second was senior Al Forte and six strokes off Al's pace was third place finisher Lou Cascantano.

Football Schedule Changes

Villanova athletic director, Dr. Ted Aceto, has made changes affecting three football games for the upcoming 1980 and 1981 seasons.

Temple and Villanova have agreed to switch home and away games for 1980 and 1981. The 1980 game will be played at Villanova Stadium on Saturday, November 22, and the 1981 game will be hosted by Temple at Veterans Stadium on Saturday, September 5, the weekend before Labor Day. That contest was to be held on Saturday, November 28.

Also, the Wildcats have changed the date of their Maryland game next season. They will meet the Terrapins on Saturday, September 6 instead of Saturday, October 4, in College Park, Md. The Villanova-Maryland game will begin the 1980 season for the Wildcats.

Villanova lost to Maryland, 24-20, in the opening game for both teams this season.

Main Line Nautilus of Bryn Mawr

Trains Villanova's Finest Athletes

Jumbo Elliott has the advantage.

"We looked for a total conditioning program for our athletes to prevent injury, increase flexibility, and build strength and stamina. We chose Main Line Nautilus in Bryn Mawr to train our team. The results have been very successful."

Head Coach of the Villanova Track Team.

As you know, an athlete must concentrate the majority of his time and effort into the complete development of his skill in whatever sport he might be participating. This requires many hours of practice.

But a good athlete also requires a background of supplemental strength training. This training should help to build strength, flexibility, speed and cardiovascular endurance, but should not subtract from his regular practice time.

That's why many professional athletes have found the Nautilus Program to be the best supplemental training program available. With just two brief high intensity workouts each week, an athlete can develop the strength and stamina that will help greatly in his performance.

Jumbo Elliott, head coach of Villanova's NCAA Champion Track and Field team has found Roger Schwab's Main Line Nautilus in Bryn Mawr to be the perfect training center for the entire team.

George Haines, head coach of the United States Olympic Swim team also found Main Line Nautilus to be an outstanding facility for building strength and endurance.

With 35 Nautilus machines for 3 complete cycles, Main Line Nautilus is the only Nautilus center on the Main Line able to train an entire athletic team at one time!

The staff at Main Line Nautilus is trained to understand the needs of each individual athlete. Each trainee is given personal guidance throughout the entire program.

If you're a coach who's looking for a total conditioning program for your team, whether male or female, you should call Main Line Nautilus today. Main Line Nautilus offers special rates to athletic teams. Ask about them. It could be the beginning of a winning season!

The only Wildcat touchdown was likewise set up by the defense. Junior defensive end Tom Jensen recovered a fumble from quarterback Gregory on the four yard line with a little more than half of the fourth quarter remaining. But the Cat offense took three downs be-

...ble recovery which set up the Villanova score.

Head Coach Dick Bedesem remarked that, "I knew it was going to be tough, but not that tough. We moved the ball, but had good plays called back."

The Wildcats have this week off, which will give them plenty of time to prepare for the last two games: next week at Rutgers and the final game against local rival Temple.

Maulers Establish Playoff Tradition

By ED McASSEY

EDITOR'S NOTE; This is the first in a series of articles examining individual intramural flag football teams. There is no prejudice concerning what teams will be covered. Selection is made on the basis of which teams will make an interesting article.

For the third year in a row it looks as if the Maulers are going to be in the flag football playoffs once again. During the past two years they have gone undefeated in the regular season, losing in 1977 to Win Lose or Draw in the finals, 7-6. Last fall they fell to a strong "Jaws" team, 6-0, in the semi-final round of competition.

"We've only gotten to play two games this year. Three of our wins were forfeits. We really haven't had much to practice for," states junior co-captain Al Donadio. Both wins this season have been blowouts, as they downed the Executioners 25-2 and the Gators 24-0. There was a five week idle period between both wins, with only a 20-6 scrimmage win over the Sunkings. The Gators were previously the number one ranked team.

"We started out as a bunch of guys on Stanford 5B that wanted to play football. As people started to graduate, we branched out to include people outside of the wing," explains senior Joe Foley who was last year's captain. "Last year was a rebuilding year for us. This year we're ready for it all," continues Foley. He expects tough competition from "The Force," "Wally's Gators," "The Mountain Men" and the fraternities.

"We're pretty strong overall.

Al Donadio

Our weakness at the moment lies in the specialty team. We haven't been covering the kicks well," continued Donadio. "Our passing game has improved tremendously. The running game still remains strong," said Donadio.

The offensive backfield is loaded with veterans, which makes for a balanced attack. Steve "Zoid" Bongiorno (the other co-captain) is the quarterback. He can either handoff to Jay Gebauer or Fran Grandieri. His favorite targets are Al Donadio, Phil Matulucci and Dave Faw. Bongiorno receives more than enough protection from Artie Leucheunic, Mike Grozier, Boe Britton and Tom Gallagher.

The defensive unit is equally deep with Kevin Brown, Gallagher and J.B. Bongo on the line. Walt Hanley, Leucheunic, Donadio and Pete Parenté are the linebackers. Joe Foley and Kevin Cassidy fill the cornerback spots in the Mauler's 3-4-2 coverage. Foley doubles as the kicker.

Scheduling has been a problem. They have been trying to make up for idle periods with practice. "There is a need for better organization in the way that the league is run. There's been a lot of problems this year with refs and teams not showing up for games," remarks Foley. He continues, "The refs do a good job in the game. It is a tough job to do. You can't take that away from them."

The Maulers also field a team in softball during the spring. According to Donadio they plan to field an even better football team next fall despite some graduation losses.

"We really take it seriously now. When we first started the team we did it to have a good time. When we found out that we were half-decent we really started to get serious," admits Foley.

This week's Budweiser Athlete is Donna Lohr of the Women's Soccer Team. She is a senior that leads the team in goals. She broke her leg in practice last Monday, October 29. She was nominated for this award by Patty Misle and Marybeth Mezza.

Driscoll Agrees to Graduation Delay

By LARRY WOEHRLE

Graduation will be delayed until Saturday and Sunday, May 17th and 18th, according to Father John Driscoll, University President, in an announcement to the University Honors and Awards Committee Tuesday.

P.J. Winterhalter, student body president and member of the committee, stated that "the delay is a direct result of the SGA survey."

Survey forms were made available to current seniors two weeks ago to determine how they would like their graduation to be organized. The survey revealed that 70 percent of the seniors felt that graduation should be delayed one week from the original dates of May 12th and 13th.

Also revealed in the survey was the desire of 95 percent of the respondents to invite a prominent dignitary to address the class of 1980.

"There will be an attempt," said Winterhalter, "to reach Senator Edward Kennedy, President Carter, former President Gerald Ford, and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, along with other prominent dignitaries."

As of now, the NROTC Commissioning will take place on the morning of Saturday, May 17. The nursing college graduation will take place later that day in the early afternoon. At 10:00 a.m. on Sunday May 18, two undetermined colleges will graduate together. Another two colleges will have a combined commencement at 2:00, and the Law School and University College will graduate at 8:00 p.m.

The SGA survey revealed that 34 percent of those questioned would want one graduation ceremony outside on campus; 31 percent wanted two separate graduations in the Fieldhouse; and 26 percent wanted two separate graduations outside on campus. Of those who wanted an outdoor ceremony, 75 percent wanted the graduation held in the Football Stadium.

Winterhalter said that "graduation will not be held outside but in the Fieldhouse. But it will be delayed, as the seniors wanted."

Forty-nine percent of those questioned wanted all students names read aloud during the ceremony, 28 percent wanted only the names of those graduating with honors read, and 23 percent answered that no names at all should be read. Winterhalter reported that only the names of those with academic honors will be read at this year's ceremony.

Alcohol, Iodine Mixture Explodes in Campus Room

By KATHI IANNACONE

Stanford Hall was the site of two unrelated acts of vandalism last weekend — one incident involving a broken window and another, involving a chemical explosion.

Approximately 5:00 Sunday morning a ground window in Stanford Hall (4 x 8 feet) was broken; Villanova Security is not yet sure what caused the damage; however, stones were found in the dining room of the men's dormitory.

The chemical explosion which took place at approximately 8:20 Saturday evening in Stanford Hall, room 326, was the result of combining ordinary alcohol and iodine. The mixture was left under a lit lamp causing the contents to expand and explode.

The student's purpose for mixing these chemicals, according to Assistant Dean of Men, Tony Martin, was to create small explosions for fun. Martin noted that this is a common practice among students.

The chemical reaction that occurred, exploded in the Stanford student's face. The student was then rushed to nearby Bryn Mawr Hospital where he was treated and later released with no extensive injuries.

Damage to the students' dorm was minimal. Observers described the condition of the room as "messy and splattered with chemicals."

One student assigned to the room was home for the weekend at the time of the incident, and the resident who entered the room at the time of the explosion did not live in the room.

"The student responsible for the act is known and will be spoken to at great length," stated Martin. "I am just relieved that there were no serious injuries. Martin also added that costs for damages will be relayed to the student responsible.

Indoor Sport Center Proposed

Athletic Report Seeks Reduction of Football Program

Thomas Labrecque, chairman of the board of president of Chase Manhattan Bank and Villanova trustee, addresses the senate.

Doug Cooney Photo

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

An ad-hoc committee of the Board of Trustees studying Villanova's athletic life will recommend the construction of a multi-purpose indoor athletic center, it was announced last Monday.

Seating capacity for the proposed center is currently projected at between six and seven thousand, while preliminary estimates of its cost point to a maximum figure of $8 million.

The athletic center plans represent the major proposal in the committee's report on campus athletics as presented by trustee Thomas G. Labrecque, chairman of the ad-hoc committee, to a special meeting of the University Senate.

Besides the athletic center, other recommendations call for:

1. The varsity football program to be downgraded from NCAA Division I-A to Division I-AA.

2. Twenty additional athletic scholarships to be awarded to women.

3. Allocation of between 3.5 and 5 percent of the University budget to athletics. (The present percentage stands at 3.5).

4. Formation of a board-level committee on athletics.

5. Guaranteed on-campus housing to all athletes with tuition-only scholarships.

6. Conversion of the football stadium into an all-weather, year-round facility, with modifications including better drainage, an NCAA specification track, an all-weather playing surface, and the installation of lights.

7. Additional all-purpose athletic fields on the Morris Estates land.

These recommendations, which the Senate plans to discuss at its next regular meeting, will be submitted next month to the Board of Trustees for their consideration. Final approval rests with them.

Cost estimates for the proposed facilities are not final, but Labrecque did reveal that at present, if the Trustees approve the recommendations, the renovation figure for the football stadium is targeted at $1.2 million, and the construction of more fields on the Morris Estates is expected to cost $465,00.

An additional 20 athletic scholarships for women would constitute an expenditure of $124,000, based on current figures.

The total sum of these estimates is $9,789,000.

In terms of funding for these potential facilities, Labrecque indicated that tentative plans

Professor Assesses Crisis in Iran

By SUZANNE TAVANI

"It's a very sad situation, and I'm sorry that it happened in a civilized country like Iran," stated Dr. Hafees Malik, professor of Political Science, in an interview with the Villanovan on the hostage situation in Iran.

Dr. Hafeez Malik, of the Political Science Department.

Malik, an expert in Muslem and Asian world issues added, "I wouldn't be surprised if Khomeini and his people think the Shah doesn't have cancer and it's a trick. You must remember that Khomeini isn't a man of the world. I'm sure he's not informed of what goes on in the world, for one thing he doesn't live in Tehran, where diplomatic information from all over the world is available. Actions he has taken are based on a gross misunderstanding of how the world functions."

But Malik points out that any political event must be considered in terms of its being an enduring or a transient incident projected by emotions such as this. Highly charged passions in Iran over the Shah continued to rise because for years almost every family has been personally affected by his actions carried out through SAVAK, the official secret police.

"... SAVAK killed many people during the agitation against the Shah. The bodies were thrown into open graves miles long, dug early in the morning," said Malik, "many families weren't even notified." Fear that the CIA will stage a coup d'etat re-establishing the monarchy as it did in 1953 also heightens the furor against the United States.

Malik, in assessing the situation, points out three courses of action the Shah and U.S. government should take, "1) the Shah should act like a statesman and make a declaration of no claim to the throne of Iran — a belated abdication statement, 2) as soon as the medical treatment is over and he's able to travel, he should return to Mexico, and 3) the U.S. should make a public annoucement stating that it isn't trying to stage another coup d'etat."

But the U.S. government in actions taken Monday and Wednesday has halted U.S. purchases of Iranian oil which Malik considers, "cutting your nose to spite your face, starting a new cycle of inflation."

Also, all Iranian assets in the U.S. has been frozen, with President Jimmy Carter declaring a state of national emergency. This latest action was taken after Iran said it would withdraw billions of dollars from U.S. banks. Iranian Foreign Minister, Abolhassan Bani Sadr specifically mentioned New York's Chase Manhattan Bank, headed by David Rockefeller, who was instrumental, along with John McCloy and Henry Kissinger, in getting the Shah into the country.

Malik stated that the Iranian government would have to sue the

Hunger Lecture Scheduled

Sr. M. THERESA JULIA SCHUER, C.P.S.

For those of you who give hunger in the world more than a yawn over coffee and danish, Dr. Suzanne C. Toton's lecture, "World Hunger: Educating for Justice," held on November 28, at 8:00 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall will be an opportunity not to be missed.

Dr. Toton, a professor in Villanova's Religious Studies Department and author of the forthcoming book, World Hunger: A Primer for Christian Education, says that the thrust of her talk will be to indicate the underlying source of the global hunger situation: not a scarcity of natural resources, not an overpopulated planet, but the international economic and political systems which strangle-hold the world's developing countries.

Furthermore, Dr. Toton maintains that "the presence of hunger in the world suggests a crisis in values" that calls forth a national and individual choice of "responding to human need over the needs of the market and private gain."

New Center to Employ Students

By MARK STIEBER

Completion of the Connelly Center is expected to generate many new jobs for the Villanova community. Positions will likely include a full time professional staff as well as many student workers.

"The most immediate professional position will be a maintenance supervisor to oversee the administration of the entire facility," stated Father John Deegan, vice-president for Student Life. Working under him will be a food service manager, business manager, and Director of Housekeeping.

Job opportunities for students will include the typical part-time work common on campus: information booth and art gallery attendants, game room supervisors, and food service. There may also be positions in student-run workshops and seminars.

In addition, some students will be hired as night and weekend supervisors to maintain center operations when the professional staff is off.

"We are still looking forward to March, 1980, opening date," ventured Mark Tuchman, Director of University Center.

Two Coordinators Hired For Connelly Center

By IRENE SMITH

Villanova has recently hired two people to help coordinate and run the Connelly Center. Tony Alfano, a 1974 graduate of the commerce and finance school at Villanova and Greg Chama, a Penn State business and hotel management major, were hired to oversee the accounting and business functions along with food management and retail of the Connelly Center.

Chama, the Food and Sales Manager, is concerned with the food, retail, and merchandising aspect of the Connelly Center. He is currently involved in a campus-wide survey to determine what type products student cannot buy on campus and the demand for them in an effort to provide a service for the students at minimal cost. He is also involved with plans concerning a catering service located within the Connelly Center, available to students for small groups and parties.

Alfano is Assistant Director for Business Operations. He handles items such as the budget, inventory control, fixed asset control, and payroll procedures.

A graduate of Villanova, Alfano has found the transformation from student to administrator an interesting one. He notes that there have been many changes since he was a student. Basically, things haven't changed on the exterior he said, but with the interior working of the University, there are many more activities and opportunities offered to the students today than when he was here. Alfano noted that the Student Union has grown considerably, offering a broader range of activities.

He sees the Student Union as a big plus for the students and is very much impressed by the professional way it is run he said. Villanova students today appear a lot calmer than their counterparts in the early 70's.

Alfano remarked that he enjoyed being back into a college atmosphere and that when he was a junior he had hoped to someday work for the University.

Chama looks at the student today as a more sophisticated and knowledgable concerning their diets and the foods they eat.

Student Loses Car Towing Case

By TRISH NABER

On November 8, District Court Judge Nicholas Sellers handed down a decision in favor of Radnor Garage and against William Harvey, a Villanova student who had had his car towed from the Conrail parking lot at Villanova and was fined $45. Sellers concluded that Harvey was in fact parked illegally and that the charges were reasonable.

Harvey, on October 16, parked his car in the Conrail parking lot to attend a class in Mendel Hall. Since the car in the spot next to his had taken up its space as well as half of the spot next to it, Harvey was forced to park partially on the grass. After depositing a quarter in the meter Harvey went to class.

Upon return, his car was gone and could be retrieved only by a cash payment of $45 to Radnor Garage. "I didn't have that much money in cash, so I had to turn over a Timex watch and $10.00 to recover the car," stated Harvey.

Robert West, supervisor of parking for Conrail, and a spokesman for Auto Park, owners of the parking lot, stated, "We only tow when it's absolutely necessary. Villanova University is our worst problem. The students park in the lot and don't use the train facilities. Students are not permitted to park there."

Auto Park, along with owning the lot, also authorizes and rents the services of Radnor Garage. Bryn Mawr, to two illegally parked cars. "We hire Radnor Garage, they determine the amount charged for the towing, and make whatever profit is made. In fact, we lose money because we have to contract the services of the garage," stated West.

The next step for Harvey, if he so decides, will be to make an appeal to Common Pleas Court. He contends that not only is $45 in excess of the cost to tow from Villanova to Bryn Mawr, but that it is not fair for the Garage to hold the car until a cash payment is supplied.

Harvey contacted three independent towing services to determine the average charge to two a car from Villanova to Bryn Mawr. The average cost he found was $18.00. A spokesman for Radnor Garage stated, "People call us up to tow the cars and we come to tow them, that's the story."

If Harvey does choose to make an appeal to Common Pleas Court, it may take months for the court to make a decision pending a verdict by the Superior Court of Pennsylvania which is involved in a case very similar to this one, Natalie's Towing Service Inc. vs. Henry F. Gnas.

Gnas and Harvey both argue that charging what Harvey considers an excessive fee of $45 and the fact that the car cannot be recovered until cash payment is received defies automobile statue 378 which states, "The owner of land upon which automobiles are parked without consent of owner may remove vehicle at reasonable expense of owner thereof gives landowner right to charge vehicle owner with reasonable expense of removing an illegally parked vehicle from his land but does not create a possessory lien (the right to take and hold property as security or payment for debt).

Pahlavi Foundation, headquartered in New York, in United States courts. The Pahlavi family fortune has been estimated to be as low as $5 billion and as high as $12 billion, but it is not known how much of this is in U.S. holdings. Because the question of the Pahlavi Foundation is a legal one, the U.S. can't meet this demand without judicial action.

The American public, infuriated over what is considered blackmail, international terrorism, and insane actions, has been clamoring for the deportation of all Iranian students at American colleges and universities. Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti has ordered all 50,000 Iranian students to report to immigration authorities within 30 days or face possible deportation.

Malik views deportation as only "a pressure exercised by the U.S. government in response to popular public demand. Those Iranian students are the leaders of tomorrow, deportation would only infuriate them against the U.S. in the future." What most people perceive to be blatant attacks against the U.S. government and society is really, "a protest against the U.S. as a supporter of a criminal — the Shah."

When Khomeini came to power he forbade any Iranian undergraduates from studying in the U.S. Those who have come since then, have done so "surrepticiously." "He'd (Khomeini) be getting all the undergraduates back — just what he wanted," stated Malik. He adds that most Iranian students, in the U.S., don't approve of the methods taken in Iran. But they also don't approve of the U.S. actions in harboring the Shah.

If the Khomeini government survives, Malik predicts that "it is bound to be Pro-West and Pro-American, since Russia is a traditional enemy of Iran, and Khomeini is an anti-Communist who views Russia as a godless and atheistic state."

Malik concluded the interview by commenting, "In these very emotional situations individuals become symbols of society and state. So in the eyes of everybody any Iranian becomes a Khomeini."

Ugandan Official Slated to Speak

Kanyanya Wapenyi, the Ugandan Ambassador to the United Nations, will give a public lecture on "Human Rights in the African Context" at 8 p.m. on Monday (November 26th) in the Auditorium of St. Mary's Hall.

Monday's meeting will also celebrate a change in the name of Villanova's 12-year old World Order Research Institute to Common Heritage Institute (CHI). University President Rev. John M. Driscoll, OSA and Arthur Lall, former Indian Ambassador to the United Nations, will also speak briefly. Lall will serve as Chairman of CHI's Advisory Board.

Ambassador Wapenyi's concern for human rights is very personal. His bishop and others of his friends were murdered by the tyrannical regime of President Idi Amin. From 1975 to 1979 Wapenyi and his family were in exile in New York. During those years the veteran diplomat served in the Secretariat of the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

Early this year Amin's domestic opponents combined with troops from nearby Tanzania to overthrow the dictator's government and install a new one in its place. Soon after the overthrow Ugandan President Godfrey Lukingwa Binaisa appointed Wapenyi as his Principal Private Secretary and later in the year named him Ambassador to the United Nations.

Wapenyi is an old friend of CHI Director John J. Logue. In June of 1977, at Dr. Logue's invitation, he and diplomats from eight other countries sailed from New London, Connecticut to the United Nations on the square-rigger Barba Negra. During that 3-day sail they adopted an Appeal to the ongoing Law of the Sea Conference urging that the delegates to the conference regard the oceans of the world as "the common heritage of mankind." They said they hoped their sail would "help bring the spirit of the tall ships into the Conference."

Labrecque admitted that the possibility exists for a student fee being imposed to help defray the cost of any new athletic facilities.

Labrecque based the committee's decision to recommend a reduction to Division I-AA football on what he viewed as the realities of the program.

"We should not keep running the program under the presumption of playing football on the level of a Penn State or a Texas," he said. "We are playing I-AA; we should call it that."

Should the advice concerning the football program be accepted by the Trustees, it would not necessarily mean a reduction in football scholarships. Presently, 73 of a possible 85 scholarships are awarded; Division I-AA teams are permitted a maximum of 75 scholarships.

Concerning the report's impact on non-intercollegiate athletics, Labrecque was eager to point out the prospect for use of the football stadium by a larger segment of the student population should the proposed improvements take place.

Explaining the recommended addition of 20 women's athletic scholarships, Labrecque said that the number was arrived at in anticipation of forthcoming federal guidelines on women's intercollegiate athletics.

"Our recommendations (on women's scholarships) are reasonable as compared to what will come out of it (in guidelines.)"

After hearing the recommendations, several senators raised questions as to the funding for the facilities, the impact of the committee's report on the student body, and the advantages and disadvantages of placing the football program in a I-AA level.

At one point in the question-and-answer period which followed his remarks, Labrecque criticized the tone of the Senate's inquiries.

"There is not a hell of a lot of trust around this table," he said. "I guarantee you that this money will not be misspent."

Police Commissioner Speaks

Police Brutality Examined

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Philadelphia Police Commissioner Joseph O'Neill discussed police brutality, juvenile crime and general departmental organization and tactics in a lecture Tuesday, November 13.

One of O'Neil main concerns is the charge of police brutality. "There's been a drive on brutality," he stated, "especially from one of the local newspapers. My contention is that there is relatively little brutality, though I'd be a fool to say there was none at all."

O'Neill feels that a certain amount of violence is necessary to subdue a criminal, and that most of the brutality suits stem from this.

"We've conducted investigations that show most of the charges are without foundation," he said. "Complaints are often for things like handcuffs being too tight. I don't think there's one criminal in detention who doesn't cry 'I was beaten'."

"We're sued very often. The suits are encouraged by those who used to prosecute accidents before no-fault insurance was passed. You get the same names involved all the time," the Commissioner stated. "We win an extremely high percentage of these cases."

O'Neill did admit that there are some cases in which the situation can get out of hand. "All of us lose control at some time or another," he remarked. "Emotions take over and you can get carried away. You'd never hear me say we're perfect."

"Another of the major problems from the viewpoint of the citizen is obnoxious juveniles," O'Neill said. "They raise all the hell they can, especially in the Northeast, often picking on old people. It's really no longer a problem of gang against gang. Most of the time it's gang against taxpayer."

Possible reasons for the increase in juvenile violence cited by O'Neill include a growing number of adolescents in the area, and an increase in the number of working mothers and the lack of discipline that could result from this.

One of the measures being taken to lessen the juvenile problem is the transfer of highway patrolmen from high crime areas into the Northeast. "The high crime areas suffer from this. We're forced to give a criminal a better chance of getting away with a crime," O'Neill commented.

O'Neill defended the use of mounted officers, which has been subject to controversy. "Some think all this means is more manure," he said. "But the mounted officer is a footman on a mobile platform. He has the capability to get to a situation much faster, especially in city traffic."

"One thing you have to remember is that they're all out there for your benefit."

Few Cases for Judicial Board

By TONY ONOFRIETTI

In the spring of 1978, the Vice-President for Student Life authorized the establishment of a student judicial system to enable residents of each dormitory to actively participate in disciplinary procedure. Over its two-year history, the Board has only heard five cases.

"It is a growing experience in which the student must learn to trust the responsibility of the Board," states Matthew Christenson, resident director. "In the past, not enough emphasis was placed on the Board from the Dean's Office. However, we feel we are now well enough organized and ready to function."

Procedure for action by the Board initiates with a complaint drawn by a student, faculty member, or resident assistant about an alleged violation by a resident. The complaint is submitted to the respective Dean or Board, according to the violator's decision. Should the case be presented to the Board, a hearing of witnesses' testimony and evidence is heard before a decision is rendered. The Dean, in either case, determines the verdict and issues sanction based on the Board's finding.

"The board will be effective if the student gives us a chance," said Tom Powers, member of the Sullivan Hall Judicial Board. "Last year no student came before us. If they had, we would have been fair in our evaluation of the situation."

Powers feels that the decisions rendered by the Judicial Board would probably be more strict than those rendered by the Deans' offices.

"We have to live here; the Deans do not," stated Powers. "We would be more strict, yet nonetheless fair."

Toys for Tots Underway

By KIM RUSHTON

The Villanova University NROTC is sponsoring its annual "Toys for Tots" drive from now until December 7.

The drive is an annual national effort by the United States Marine Corps to provide needy children with toys and games for Christmas.

Although the drive here at Villanova comes under the auspices of the NROTC, the actual coordination is done by Semper Fidelis. Semper Fidelis is a campus organization of brotherhood and service for people with a professional interest in the United States Marine Corps.

Mark L. Noblit (USMC), president of Semper Fidelis, said, "We all take it for granted that all children get toys for Christmas since most of us did as children, but there are many who don't get to experience the joy of receiving gifts at Christmas."

Barrels for the deposit of toys and games will be located in John Barry Hall, Good Counsel Hall, Sheehan Hall, St. Mary's Hall, Tolentine Hall, and at Rosemont College.

The toys and games collected by the NROTC at Villanova will be picked up by the Marine Corps of Philadelphia. They also repair and clean the toys and games.

From there, they will be distributed to organizations such as the United Way and Christian Services, which oversee the final distribution of the toys to needy children.

Board Serves Campus Media

By TONY CENTONE

The Communications Board (formerly the Publications Board) advises student media organizations on what will or will not be acceptable to the administration. The Communications Board is not a censory board. Its purpose is purely advisory.

Dr. DaCrema, an assistant professor in the English Department and chairman of the Communications Board, explained that the reason for the advisory position is that censorship "per se" is illegal. "If the administration feels that an article in a publication is a little too abrasive, they cannot have that one article censored. However, they can see to it that the whole publication never gets distributed. The role of the Communications Board is to see that it does not reach that point."

The various media organizations on campus — The Villanovan, WKVU, etc., come to the Communications Board if they think some of the material in a certain publication could cause a problem. The Board studies the situation and contacts certain administrators is necessary.

"The Board's role is not an easy one," Dr. DaCrema stated. It is sometimes involved in some very delicate situations where failure to arbitrate the two sides could have disastrous consequences.

The Board itself is made up of ten members, five students, one alumnus, two faculty members and two administrators. The Board convenes at regular intervals unless called in for emergency purposes. Many times there is a time factor involved and the chairman must do much of the decision-making on his own. But since his role is one of mediator and advisor rather than judge, his sole decision-making is in no way undemocratic. "It is done for practical purposes, and, in making these decisions I take into consideration the attitude of the Board as a whole," commented DaCrema.

Mr. Villanova Crowned

By LARRY WOEHRLE

Move over, Atlantic City — Villanova University is making a strong bid to become the "cheesecake" capital of the east after its highly successful "Mr. Villanova" contest held Monday night in the Day Hop cafeteria. In only its second year of existence, the RSA sponsored event treated a packed house to plenty of laughs, some questionable talent and, of course, lots of good old-fashioned flesh.

The contestants, twelve in all, each represented various girls' dormitories and were judged by several campus dignitaries and pseudo-dignitaries in formal wear, talent and gym shorts categories. A predominantly female crowd from Sheehan and O'Dwyer to Good Counsel to Klekotka (yes, Virginia, there is a Klekotka) sat apprehensively through the formal wear competition, eagerly awaiting the climatic unveiling of the dozen male bodies. Senior Kate McCarthy seemed to sum up the mood of the crowd when she said, "I can't wait for the gym shorts. Nancy will kill me if she misses this."

Physique alone, however, would not be enough to sway the judges since the ideal Mr. Villanova required stage presence and poise. It was thus the talent portion of the show which separated — and I hate to say it — "the men from the boys." Mark "Little Mac" Anderson led off this segment and thrilled the crowd with his perfect inability to play the banjo before involving the audience in a hand-clapping rendition of his original composition, "My V.U." destined to become a sing-along classic.

It was a tough act to follow but the contestants were game for anything — and I do mean anything. One land shark and a hamster love song later, the assembled throng witnessed Cary Bronson in a no-holds-barred wrestling match with a mid-term examination blue book. Although a sizeable portion of the crowd rooted for the blue book, Bronson emerged victorious. "At first I was nervous," he said, "but then everyone got caught up in it."

Next came the infamous Jeff Cohen and his equally infamous talent for Hawaiian nose humming. Undoubtedly one of the premier nose hummers in the country today, Cohen nevertheless failed to impress the judges and inexplicably finished out of the running. Mike "Stumpy" Stumph wowed the crowd with a joke that can't even be reprinted and the stage was set for one of the evening's many highlights, Shawn Passman's disrobing to the tune of "Macho Man."

It was at this point that the female spectators were driven to a frenzied peak and emcee Helen O'Rourke had to be physically restrained from presenting Passman with the crown on the spot. "My grandmother taught that to me," Passman said. "She used to be in Burlesque."

Mark "Little Mac" Anderson

Tim Ermy, though pregnant, valiantly ascended the stage next. What followed could never be adequately explained so you'll just have to talk with someone who was there. A forgettable medley of Frank Sinatra tunes were crooned by Tony Cofone however the crowd saved its biggest response for the line "and now the end is near" in "My Way." Bob Scavone closed the talent competition by "singing the blues" to the accompaniment of what could only be described as square-dance music. By closing with some classical poetry, Scavone undoubtedly sent "the Blues" in a new direction — however, no one knows in what direction or if they will ever have the courage to return.

The long awaited gym shorts competition proved once and for all that girls, too, can be animals. As the thinly clad young contestants paraded down the walkway — seeking only to honorably represent their university — they were subjected to the leers and hungry eyes of female passion gone wild. Fortunately, a security officer ringed the stage to prevent an all-out assault on the young gentlemen and no serious incidents occurred.

As the judges retired to cast their final ballots, Tom Shortell, the reigning Mr. Villanova, made his final public appearance prior to surrendering his crown and scepter. It was one of those poignant, tear-filled moments that one only gets to see if they can if they wait up until 2 a.m. to watch the conclusion of the real Miss America pageant. "It was a fantastic experience," said Shortell, "I loved it. New girls? "Of course," he smiled. "People I don't even know came up to me came up to me, even freshmen. But enough speculation. When asked for one final quote to the Villanova community as Mr. Villanova, Shortell stated, "I had a button that said 'get it on' but I can't find it."

Finally, the six judges arrived at their decision; 2nd runner-up was Tim Ermy, 1st runner-up was Shawn Passman and the title of Mr. Villanova was passed on to the ever-popular Mark "Little Mac'' Anderson. Amid the pressing crowd, Anderson graciously accepted the crown and

The situation in Iran is ridiculous. We are a large country yet we are afraid to use our power. Iran forced us to do things because of oil. We should retaliate with Food boycott. It's a non-violent action action — they have a choice. If they want food they have to start respecting us.

Joseph Squillace (Senior)

I think that it's good that they are deporting illegal aliens. I hope that the Shah feels better.

Mac Anderson (Senior)

I think the situation is very tragic. To use kidnapping to force someone (the Shah) to give up asylum in this country is wrong. I have no idea whose death that the Shah was responsible for but taking hostages shouldn't be used as a means to bring him to justice.

People are paying more attention to the hostages but there is a whole generation of Cambodian children dying of starvation. Although the situation is grave and the concern for the hostages is a primary consideration Carter should also bring political pressure on China and the Soviet Union to call off the fighting.

Dr. James Bean, psychology professor

They should continue what they have been doing so far in dealing with the crisis.

It's a bad situation. They are wrong for taking hostages. The United States should get tough on them. Our recent action with action to oil is good.

Amtrak Action

Dear Father Deegan:

Since our meeting at Villanova University on October 11, Mr. Gradel has proceeded to make the additional improvements at Villanova Station to insure proper drainage in the commuter underpass. Specifically, we have accomplished to date:

1. Repaired the two existing drains in the inbound parking lot which should prevent water from rushing down the stairway like a waterfall.

2. Enlarged the catchbasins and installed new grating in the underpass which virtually eliminates the problem of the catchbasins becoming clogged with debris.

3. Resurfaced the floor of the tunnel to provide a smooth surface, thus eliminating the problem of "puddling."

4. Cleaned the debris and drains in the concrete catchbasin type structure running behind the shelter on the inbound side of the station which provides additional water runoff.

5. Ordered new flourescent light fixtures for the tunnel and stairwells. They are expected within the next four weeks and will be installed w

Finally, we would like to correct one misunderstanding which apparently resulted from the meeting. Amtrak did not commit itself to repainting the walls of the underpass but did accept the offer and will pursue the possibility of the students painting and advise you.

I believe that the above fulfills Amtrak's commitment made at the meeting and we trust that all other interested parties have or will fulfill their commitments.

Response

Dear Editor:

I find it difficult to understand the point or the purpose of your editorial entitled "Coming Home Again: What Do They Owe?", which appeared in the October 19 issue of the Villanovan. Surely you do not believe that "the continuance and progress of a viable, quality institution of higher learning" rests solely with Villanova's alumni contributors. I truly hope this is not your point. If however, your theme is to motivate those alumni who have neglected a certain monetary responsibility to the university, you surely could have chosen a better time and method to voice your opinion. I am sorry to say that your article, appearing during Homecoming weekend, may have done more harm than good.

Clarification of an important point concerning Villanova's alumni contributions is necessary at this time. Upon graduation each student faces the harsh realization that Villanova is no longer the focal point of their lives. As time goes by, life becomes filled with greater responsibilities and complexities, placing heavier demands upon one's resources. Every alumni, young and old alike, must set priorities to determine where their financial resources will be spent. In these difficult times, a contributiott to Villanova may take a back seat to one's mortgage payments, clothes for the baby or a youngster's education.

As you can see, this situation poses a difficult and unfortunate problem for the Directors of the Alumni Annual Fund and the Alumni Office in their attempts to raise funds for Villanova. The record proves, however, that these two offices, given their own scarce resources, do an exceptional job of soliciting funds from alumni spread across the country.

I must take offense to your commentary as I feel you have attempted to alienate and divide the alumni population from the rest of the Villanova community. Perhaps your comments should have dealt with constructive ideas as to ways we can all work together to improve Villanova. In the future, I hope that you will keep this situation in mind when discussing such a vital topic!

Respectfully,

More Than a Week

To the Editor:

Soon Hunger Awareness Week will be over. Many will have run for hunger, many will have fasted, many will have donated, but what is left when the week is over? We felt like we were doing something for the good of the world, and we were, but has the purpose been served? Are we all truly aware of World Hunger? Are we ready to help the hungry and the poor at each chance in our lives? Or have we just survived another day without lunch until next November?

Each cent donated is another step towards the alleviation of World Hunger. Each time we give we let out a sigh of relief and can feel good that we gave; but world hunger takes more. We must realize it, and not forget it. We must work together in a concerted effort to help those who can not help themselves year round.

Recently, Cambodia has been ravaged with hunger problems. We've seen everyone trying to help, because they are aware of this problem. The brutal fact is that this happens daily in some nations, 10,000 people die each day as a result of hunger and malnutrition, yet we see little action to help them. Very few of us even know of these problems. The purpose of Hunger Awareness Week is to encourage us to learn about these problems.

Awareness is an on-going process. We must follow the massive and complicated structure of World Hunger. It is more than just people with no food, we must look at its causes which are political, social, and economic. Almost every world event (and many domestic events) have an effect on World Hunger. Some people are aware of World Hunger, but it is "the charge of a light brigade." It takes more than a few people to combat a problem the size of World Hunger. We need everyone to help to really cure this problem.

Hunger Awareness Week is drawing to a close and we thank all of you for making it as successful as it was; but we must now go out and educate ourselves, not only from books but from the world. We can learn of Mahatma Gandhi and his freeing of India, but we must look at India today and its starvation problem. We can learn of Idi Amin and his executions but do we stop to learn of those in Uganda facing the slow, painful death of malnutrition. We must learn of World Hunger in our on-going process of education; we must learn and we must act for the sake of the 14 people who died of hunger in the two minutes it took you to read this article.

Christ once told us that "whatever we do to our brothers, we do to Him." If Christ were our neighbor and was hungry, would we let Him starve?

— Bob Clougherty

A Look at Society

To the Editor:

The article on Hunger Awareness by Suzanne Tavani proclaims "A second Holocaust is taking place in Cambodia!" How selectively blind and deaf we Americans are.

In the years following the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, Americans have slaughtered over 7 million innocent human lives. As their government turns its back on millions, so does ours, but with little public outcry.

Our medical profession isn't using gas chambers as in Nazi Germany — D&C's, suction machines, saline, and prostaglandins work just as well. And it's so easy to pretend that the torn limbs, corroded skin, and gasping lungs aren't from a tiny human who had a heart beat at 25 days and brain activity at 45 days.

Last year there were 60,639 such deaths in Pennsylvania. Near our school, Women's Suburban Clinic in Paoli had 2,795; Women's Medical Center in Valley Forge had 2,546; Bryn Mawr Hospolitan had 146 (Penn. Health Dept. reports).

I am infinitely more ashamed about letting these deaths occur so close to home than I am about eating an ice cream cone.

Who Knows, Who Cares — Great Moments In History

Today, as a new editor-in-chief is elected for The Villanovan and members of the present staff prepare to clean out their mailboxes and turn in their expense accounts, we thought it might be appropriate to look back and review some of the highlights from that column that has brought more readers (and lawsuits) to the paper. So here they are, the greatest hits, the golden oldies, the blasts from the past, the Best of Who Knows, Who Cares . . .

Thanksgiving vacation came at a good time. It allows everyone to relax. The ambitious and/or desperate catch up on work not done, and the lazy fall further behind . . . If anything in this column offends you, let us know — we will gladly repeat it . . . Speaking of the Blue Key, as we normally do, the cocktail party was a financial success, and that's all. The liquors served were of the highest quality. Wolfman's Vodka, Abe Beame and Northern Discomfort coupled with Pantry Pride mixers made people wish they had ordered the Ripple sifted through a dirty sock . . . Pretty soon it will be winter, and the first snow will fall — how many nurses will? . . . To all of those male frosh who do their own laundry, look for a girlfriend. Even is she's a "Hoos" or a "Stru" she'd love the attention and probably you . . . If you can't find one remember not to put too much soap in the machine and never do a load by hand . . . The A & S faculty was enraged at the suggestion that they hold a Career Awareness Day "What the hell is this? Students come here for an education, not a job" . . . Did you know that: Al Capone did build the House . . . The nightly bed checks have started again, but the RA's in Sullivan are checking out the people in Sheehan . . . Chained in the catacombs are members of Whiskey Company . . . Steering Committee selections for upcoming freshman orientation is finished. Condolences to both the winners and the losers . . . Has anybody seen my roommate? He went to the drop/add line two weeks ago and hasn't been seen since . . . Perhaps the biggest unanticipated problem from construction of the Connelly Center has been the scarcity of prime chain-hanging space? . . . Residents are beginning to wonder if the food service dietician is being paid under the table by Pizza Palace . . . Best sign award from the LCB rally on Lancaster Pike goes to "Let me soak or let me toke" . . . The young but not-so-innocent sophomore nurses got capped, err, sorry, dedicated last Sunday in a ceremony of questionable meaning . . . after all, do education majors get apples? . . . do engineers get cabooses? . . . do accounting majors get audited? . . . do Italian majors get pinched? . . . do French majors get kissed? . . . at least nurses can be given credit for the innovation of the four-day work week . . . No, it's not true that Joe Cassidy is really Hop-Along . . . Have you ever noticed how organizational meetings are always disorganized? . . . Nurses and engineers got together for their dinner dance — black tie and calculator were optional . . . We've decided that the worst thing about winter is when your girlfriend has a cold and you have to kiss her goodnight and you realize you haven't seen her blow her nose in a while . . . As a handy pre-registration guide to freshmen, here's a key to some sample responses when you ask "How's this guy for English?" . . . "He's great, a brilliant teacher," means the guy cracks some good jokes, gives a take-home mid-term and final and The Joy of Sex is the only required reading . . . "He's good, really good" means class is boring as hell, but he lets his six-year old son grade the papers and if you tell him he should write for the New York Times it's a sure A . . . "He's all right, if it's the only thing that will fit your schedule" means that this class meets at 8:30 in the basement of Bartley and the teacher thinks Fear of Flying is an aviation text . . . "Change your major" means that this guy has probably died since the schedule was printed, once drooled through an entire class, and think Chaucer should replace Springsteen as the poet of the 70's . . . If you walk through Dougherty and hear screaming and crying, it's not that Schedule adjustment has started, it's the APO blood drive . . . Late note for the administration — John Connelly said he was only kidding about the $5 million . . . Going to college is standing at a party in West Wayne and watching your ride home chug his 13th beer . . . Whatever happened to Jim Main? . . . who knows, who cares? . . .

Social Action Committee

Once upon a time . . .

There was a group of people called the Social Action Committee of the University Senate. And nobody but the members of that committee seemed to know what it was and what it did.

Well, the Social Action Committee is alive and well, and working to carry out the charges mandated it in the Senate Constitution. The committee's responsibilities are twofold: First, to "recommend to the Senate changes in University policy in areas of social concern and sensitivity"; and seconldy, engage itself in "the educational process to alert the Villanova community to opportunities and problems in areas of social action and community relations."

As far as the first area, that of policy recommendations, is concerned, the committee recently has dealt with the problem of minority enrollment and retention at Villanova University. A unanimous committee resolution just submitted to the Senate Executive Committee suggests that the University adopt a policy of increased effort in the recruitment and retention of minority students, and a companion resolution presents ways of possibly implementing this policy.

A report developed to supplement and support these resolutions reveals that minority students comprise some 2.6% of the undergraduate enrollment at Villanova. This year's freshman class contains a minority element of 2.7%. The committee's report expresses its opinion that these are extremely low figures for a Catholic, presumably community-minded, university. In addition, while there are currently no figures available on minority student retention, the committee points to inadequacies in the Unversity's efforts in this direction.

In recent meetings, the committee has felt that while they have done considerable work in matters pertaining to the policy area of its Senate charge, it needs to step up its efforts in the area of education. The report on minority students indicates that a major part of the problem is the attitude of the average white Villanovan toward minority students. He tends to look upon blacks, for instance, as atheletes who are "dumb", as those who have gained admission through special means, and who are poor and not paying their own way. It is charged to the University to attempt to change these misconceptions.

To remedy the minority problems at Villanova, the Social Action Committee has made several proposals to the various branches of the University in a position to deal with the situation — the administration, the admissions office, the development office, and the registrar — suggesting ways in which their efforts to recruit and retain minority students may be augmented. Regardless, members of the committee are quick to emphasize, a large part of the problem and its ultimate resolution lie with the students themselves.

In addition to concern with minority students, the Social Action Committee looks forward this year to working in a number of areas, including the role of senior citizens as valuable members of the University community.

ACTIVITIES AND SERVICES. The Activities and Services Committee is involved in providing services and social events for the student body. One of the many services provided by this group was the voter registration drive run in September in which over 300 students were registered. There will be transportation provided to the polling places for those who are eligible to vote on election day. The committee is presently involved in a project to sell noise makers for the basketball games. The Activities and Services Committee is an active, vibrant group involved in making this University a better place to be.

PUBLICITY AND COMMUNICATIONS. The main function of the Publicity and Communications committee of the S.G.A. is the public relations that it must establish through the integral workings of the S.G.A. and the Student Body. This is done through advertising meetings, making posters, and establishing a close working relationship with the Villanovan. It is also the responsibility of this committee to provide the Villanovan with articles concerning the S.G.A. Any student wishing to submit an article or editorial for the supplement of the Villanovan is asked to leave it in the S.G.A. office.

What to do on Campus

One of the problems a commuter finds is the question of what to do on campus when you're not in class. A great place to start is to attend activities that the Villanova Union sponsors.

The Villanova Union sponsors special events, usually around lunchtime, small talks and game shows. All events the Union sponsors are widely publicized. You can find out about them through flyers on campus, the Union calendar, the Union page in The Villanovan, or you can stop in the Union office.

If you feel like just sitting back, relaxing and listening to an album, you can go to the audio-visual room in the basement of the library. They have a wide selection of albums, and there is certainly something for you. All you need is your I.D. card.

Another place to go in the library is the periodical room. Here you can get magazines and newspapers to read.

If you are athletically inclined, Villanova also offers athletic facilities for you. Spread throughout the campus are tennis courts and basketball courts. We also have weight rooms and gymnasiums available to us. If you feel like going for a swim, there are pools in St. Mary's and the fieldhouse. There is also a pool room in Dougherty Hall.

A good place to find other things to do is the Villanova Blue Book. This is a publication put out by the office of Student Life. Copies are hard to find but are available in the Student Life office on the second floor of Dougherty, the Dean of Men's office, and the Dean of Women's office. The facilities are available, so put them to good use next time you're sitting around and bored.

LEO KOLETAS

Locker Revision

The Association of Commuter Students represents the commuters on campus and attempts to solve the problems they encounter. For the last two years the A.C.S. has examined the locker situation in Bartley Hall, and the overall consensus has been that there is a need for definite improvement. The A.C.S. locker proposal has been accepted and the commuters will maintain the facilities starting January 1980.

After the lockers are prepared for occupancy and the A.C.S. has developed a recording system, registration will begin. For the first two weeks of the Spring semester during posted hours, the lockers will be distributed. The student's name and year of graduation will be taken and the combination will be given. The student has the option of putting another lock on the issued locker. Lockers this year will be issued for one semester; however, next year they will be issued for the entire year.

The individual has the option of reserving a locker from year to year; however, after a certain date at the end of the year, must remove any additional lock put on the locker. This will enable proper maintenance of all lockers. With this system, accurate records will be kept which will enable students to obtain lockers and the full potential of the locker facilities will be realized.

"Little Mac" Crowned Mr. Villanova

Before a standing room only crowd in the Dayhop Cafeteria on Monday night, Mark "Little Mac" Anderson was crowned as Mr. Villanova 1979 by his predecessor, Tom Shortell. The hour and a half long event which consisted of suit, talent, and gym short competitions was very well received by an enthusiastic and vocal crowd. 2nd runner-up was Tim Ermi and 1st runner-up was Shawn Passman.

Special thanks to Rose, Marsico, Leslie Carranza, Beth White, and M. C. Helen O'Rourke for their hard work which made the event such a huge success. Congratulations to all of the contestants. Proceeds from the event will be donated to World Hunger.

Clean-up Campaign

Faustus Repents

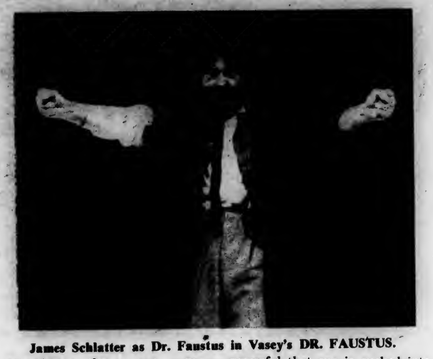
By EILEEN McCAFFREY

Dr. Faustus is the story of a man who damns himself by selling his soul to Lucifer in exchange for all the knowledge of the world. This is a psychological drama depicting the mental conflict and pain he undergoes as he nears death. Faustus is a learned man who knows all the university can teach him but who will not be satisfied until he knows the ultimate secrets of the world. Despairing of finding these in conventional knowledge, he blasphemes God and turns to necromancy. After summoning Mephistophilis from hell, he offers his soul to Lucifer in exchange for the right to command Mephistophilis for the rest of his (Faustus') life. When Faustus is weak in his resolve against God, spirits from heaven haunt him, urging him to leave Lucifer. Simultaneously demons threaten to tear him apart if he thinks of God, sometimes bringing him before Lucifer. At other times, Faustus questions Mephistophilis on the origin of the world. The spirits warns Faustus not to ask questions that go against the kingdom of Lucifer.

Faustis and Mephistophilis travel the world, performing miracles for royalty and spreading Faustus' fame. When they return, Faustus' death is near. After many torturous attempts at repentance, haunted by the spirits of his mind, Faustus gives up hope that he could ever be forgiven and is carried off to hell.

The entire play is really a projection of Faustus' mind, and this is emphasized by the absence of physical props. The stage is a large white mat set on an angle, with no standing props on it at all. The only colors are black and white. Actors portray Faustus' books, the seven capital sins, and the spirits from heaven and hell. Thus, all you see is actors on the stage. One is very aware that the actors alone create the play on a blank canvas, out of nothing. Although this is always true, it is especially noticeable here. There is nothing to remind you of the external world or the time and space in which the play is set. The absence of an external world concentrates all the audience's attention on the central conflict.

The entire play is so concentrated, intense, and starkly powerful that one is sucked into Faustus' world and feels deeply involved with it from beginning to end.



James Schlatter as Dr. Faustus in Vasey's DR. FAUSTUS.

Cayuga 30

By PATI NASELLA

Lunchtime always seems like the most boring meal of the day, especially if it's Pie shoppe food. Cayuga 30, located on Lancaster Pike in Wayne, has changed all that. Anytime between 11:30 and 2:00 you can have a delicious crunchy salad from their elegant salad bar or Half-Pound Burgers with great toppings like chili or cheese and mushrooms, and, of course, you could order seafood. And all their lunches are under $4.

Cayuga 30 has a warm, cozy atmosphere with dim lighting, sort of like Joshua Tree, but the service is better. You don't have to wait long for your order while you sip on an afternoon cocktail. Unlucky for me, we both ordered a Pina Colada which was a bit too strong for my discriminating taste, but my friend thought it was great!

Anyway, the food was delicious. We ordered the Broiled Fresh Flounder (3.50) with lemon butter, and Quiche Lorraine (3.25) which we highly recommend. Both came with spinach casserole and Potato Cayuga.

We were so full after this gourmet delight that it was very doubtful if dessert would follow but alas, my eyes caught a glimpse of the cornucopia of sweet things sitting in a dish at the next table. It was Cayuga's Fresh Tropical Fruit Platter which was not dessert at all and with it you get your choice of sherbet or cottage cheese for $2.95. We immediately ordered Cheesecake (1.50) and the English Trifle (1.50). Now cheesecake is cheesecake and theirs was good, but for $1.50 you get much more for your money with the Trifle which is made with Brandy, cream, short cake and other goodies, yummm!

I guess you can tell we give this place 1/2, I would go all the way to a 4 star rating but I didn't like my drink. Maybe I'll get lucky next time when I see you there.

Mr. Frick, world's funniest skating comic, will be celebrating his 41st anniversary with Shipstad and Johnson Ice Follies when traditional holiday show appears at the Spectrum Dec. 26 through Jan. 6.

The Erin Pub

By STEVEN COMBS

I've never cared for typical 'Nova parties where you're jammed up against everyone, desperately clutching a warm beer and unable to speak or hear above the din. Likewise, I never enjoyed V.U.'s favorite hangout, Kelly's, where the same atmosphere prevailed. In my search for an alternative I didn't have to go far. About a block up the pike I found the Erin Pub. This little beer dive is small, cheap, and populated mostly by the class of '45.

8 oz. beers are a quarter, there is no line for the john, and you can enjoy simple pleasures like sitting and talking.

there are no mooseheads on the wall but there isn't any ex-jock bouncer at the door either.

I've always thought that atmosphere was important in a bar. That's why I used to hang out in the lounges of Chinese restaurants. Yet after a pitcher or two, you can't see the dragon lamps (or mooseheads) anymore anyway. This is particularly fortunate at the Erin, since it looks like a half finished rec room.

If you're looking for lots of class, lots of people, and fancy priced drinks — look elsewhere. But if you just want to sit and talk to your friends while you get quietly bombed — this is a good place to start.

MOVIES

The Onion Field

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

The most frightening aspect of the drama that unfolds in The Onion Field is that it is true. The torment suffered by those surrounding the murder of Police Officer Ira Campbell in an onion field near Bakerfield, California, might not seem worthy of such attention in an age when the headlines mourn thousands of war natural disaster victims almost weekly. However, I would suggest you see this wrenching movie before any type of conclusion is drawn.

The plot is complex; parallels are drawn between the two officers, Ira and Karl, and the two petty thieves whom the officers at first apprehend and are then kidnapped by, Jimmy and Greg. The technique of shifting from setting to setting and character to character could easily have been frustrating had it not been handled so well. In one series, Karl arrives home at 1:00 to play poker with his wife and friends while mumbling about the life of an officer. Ira is at his well-to-do mother's house, worried about his bagpipe playing and wondering out loud if his profession is as noble as his father's, who was a doctor. Jimmy sits in Greg's home, where he is reluctantly, at first, seduced by Greg's leering, pregnant wife.

Most of the film is centered on Karl, played by John Savage, and the stress he suffers due to the guilt feelings he encounters. The scene in the onion field very effectively indicates his helplessness, yet it is obvious he feels that there must have been something he could have done that night in Bakersfield to save his partner's life. Guilt leads him to a career in petty shoplifting, which eventually forces him to resign from the police force, and to an attempt at suicide that is foiled when his youngest daughter walks into the room.

The trial is a torturous seven-year affair, with Greg and Jimmy sentenced to the death penalty they never receive. They live the rest of their lives as comfortable as prison life allows, with guards offering cigarettes and fellow inmates asking for legal advice. Karl suffers more than anyone during the trial, and the entire legal proceedings are frustrating rather than enforcing justice. In a scene in his backyard garden, Karl is wearily jamming soil around the base of a plant and mutters to himself, "Everything will be all right when the trial's over." Things appear to eventually return to normal, but I doubt if the nightmare ever really ends.

New In Sound

Quadrophenia

By STEVEN COMBS

The Who will venture into the movie business once again with their upcoming film, Quadrophenia. The soundtrack features material from the original Quadrophenia album and a lot of fifties music by various artists to give a sense of the story's time.

The album opens with "I Am The Sea." While waves crash against a rocky shore, phrases from songs drift up from the roar of the ocean. The sea is the source. Throughout the album, references are made to the ocean as the only place where you can see yourself for what you are. In the end it is to the sea that the 'hero' returns to kill himself.

"The Real Me" and "I'm One" are so laden with over-orchestration that the power of the texture of The Who's music is obscured. But on "Love Reign O'er Me" Daltrey's screaming vocals fly out of the tumultous arrangement with life and fire.

"Bell Boy" starts off side two. It is the story of a former mod motorcyclist who is forced to carry luggage and open doors to make a living. The sense of frustration at a dead end life is carried over into "I've Had Enough." The music rises, crashes and falls. "I've had enough of living, I've had enough of dying." And finally "Helpless Dancer" ends with Daltrey's scream dissolving into the sound of a passing train.

"Doctor Jimmy" shows the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde influence of alcohol and speed. With a little liquid courage, any man is a tiger. This song breaks the mold of orchestral sound that seems to mute the effectiveness of the band on other cuts.

"Zoot Suit" is the first nauseatingly nostalgic cut. The High Numbers are the band responsible. Sides three and four contain selections by The Chiffons, The Ronettes, The Crystals and so on. If you're hungry for a taste of yesterday then this half of the album is for you. Otherwise, it's a waste.

The only Who song on side three worth mentioning is "Four Faces." It is a quadrophonic lament of the problems inherent in being four people and not knowing which, if any, is the real you.

Root Boy Slim and the Sex Change Band

By JERRY ARTH

For years, rock club fans in Washington, D.C. have known about them. The band has developed into a major cult group. Even government officials attend their shows. Yet for most of the record-listening public, their sound is unknown, their only previous album being a shoddy bootleg. But now, "Root Boy Slim & the Sex Change Band (w/the Rootettes)" has arrived with ZOOM, on Illegal/I.R.S. records, and things will never be the same.

The main attraction of the Root Boy Slim & the Sex Change Band cannot be said to lie in their musical abilities. This is not to say they have no talent; rather, Lounge Lizard Kelly on keyboards, Sex-Ray Lancaster on guitar, Rattlesnake Rattles on bass, and the Root Boy with his Jim Morrison-like vocals could be replaced by any studio musicians and not be missed, musically. But what would be lacking are the band's charisma and humorously warped vocals, and these are their major draws.

Root Boy Slim possesses the ability to make almost anyone laugh. The songs are truly sick; there is, for example, "Dozin' and Droolin'," a tune about a mental institution, with Root Boy ending it with the plaintive cry, "Please don't shoot me with no more Thorazine." Now that song may not appeal to everybody, but who could resist the lure of "Dare to be Fat (Fat's Where it's At)," or "Motel of Love," where mirrors on the wall, vibrating beds, and black leather sheets await a couple of senior citizens? And if those don't grab your ear, how about a pimp song ("Sugar Daddy"), or one about dancing on your stomach ("Do the Gator")? Root Boy Slim caters to any perverse taste.

ZOOM is, to say the least, an interesting album. It represents an attempt by "Root Boy Slim & the Sex Change Band" to switch from being merely a club/cult smash to a commercial success. And as a transitional release, this record serves well in highlighting the special talents and twisted abilities of the Root Boy. I impatiently await the next one.

Mike Cross Fiddlin' Around

By MAURICE KELLY

It was so gratifying for this writer to sit back in Roberts Hall at Haverford College this past Friday night surrounded by a few good friends, a cup (or rather cups) of Jack Daniels in hand, and be able to listen to some great solo wooden music played by a fellow named Mike Cross. (Remember that name.) Traditional Scottish jigs on the fiddle, a little bit of J.S. Bach, a beautiful and original tune about the birth of a little son (Kentucky Song), and a comical ditty dealing with the appetites of a buzzard and his pal the chicken-hawk (The Lord'll Provide). This man put on one helluva show that in turn resulted in impromptu square dancing and in a seemingly perpetual call for encore after encore. Many thanks to Larry for turning me on to the albums of Mike Cross so that I was able to really psyche myself before the concert, and many thanks to Steve for supplying the spirits that helped to enhance and sustain my psyched during the show. It was a dynamite evening. I only hope that Mr. Cross brings his guitar and fiddle back to this area real soon.

Glee Club Travels

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

Do you like to sing? Are you looking for a musical club on campus? If so, the Women's Glee Club may be for you. Members perform two to three concerts each semester with different male choral groups from other colleges. Approximately half of these concerts involve traveling to the other school for the weekend. Upcoming events include a concert at the Merchant Marine Academy, the Christmas concert with the Villanova Singers December 8, and an annual competition at Fairfield University, March 14-16, at which the Glee Club won third prize last year.

"Most people don't know there's a glee club on campus, much less that we're pretty good," states Helen Alvare, the club's publicity director. "We just want people to know that it's a fun, spirited club. The Christmas concert is well attended, but the others are "just as good," says Helen.

The club is open to any woman on campus. No musical background or singing experience is necessary. An audition is required for placement purposes only. New members are welcome at the beginning of each semester.

Elie Wiesel to Speak

By Rev.
SILVIO E. FITTIPALDI

As a teenager, Elie Wiesel and his entire family were forcibly sent to the Nazi concentration camp at Auschwitz. During this experience his budding faith in God and his confidence in humanity were not simply called into question but radically destroyed. Since 1945 and his release from Buchenwald, where he had been transferred, and where he witnessed the death of his father, Wiesel has wondered about and questioned the significance of the Holocaust.

His deepest questions and pain are expressed in many novels and lectures where he even wonders if he should speak at all. But speak he does. He often shares his experiences and stories and in this sharing calls on his listeners to be more aware of their own experience and its significance.

Elie Wiesel will be present to speak on Villanova Campus in Vasey Theatre on Tuesday, November 20, 1979 at 12:45 p.m. His lectures are not only academically stimulating, but experiences of emotional depth and intellectual challenge. All are invited to attend.

Devouring Dogs — Wholesome College Fun

By BRUCE MURRAY

On Thursday, November 6, before a small crowd at the "Talk of the Town" bar and disco, Villanova's John Liszka took on the pride of Juniatta, Paul Seamen, in a hot dog eating contest. The rules were simple: the one who could eat the most hot dogs (rolls included) in one hour without barfing would be declared the winner and the owner of a keg of beer.

The match-up itself was interesting. At 6'3", 225 lbs. offensive guard John Liszka (representing the Villanova Football team), from Rockville, Maryland, appeared to have the contest won before it even started. His opponent Paul Seaman, a Philadelphia Fireman, was only 5'10", 185 lbs. Liszka had been practicing in the cafeteria under coaches Joe Makoid, Steve Duda and Lou Sigmund while Seaman made only one preparation. Thursday morning, Seamen ate a small breakfast and then a good sized lunch; two double meat Whoppers with cheese and three large orders of french fries. Seamen believes in expanding his stomach before entering serious contests. "I came here thinking I'd be sitting down eating a few hot dogs, and drinking a few beers with the guys," commented Liszka. "I was wrong, these guys were serious."

At 10:00 p.m., Liszka and Seamen sat down at opposite ends of a table and commenced eating. Seamen washed down the tube steaks with a few beers while Liszka drank milk. Fifteen minutes into the contest, the score was close; Seamen led eight hot dogs to Liszka's seven and seemed to be feeling fine. "I'm a sprinter," Seamen said, "I try to eat as fast as I can in the beginning and then pace myself the rest of the contest." Liszka, on the other hand, was feeling a little full.

Twenty-five minutes into the contest, Liszka took an 11-10 lead. The stomachs of both men could actually be seen expanding. But at thirty-five minutes into the contest, the story was a little different. Liszka was up two dogs (16-14) when an eruption started. He began breathing heavily, looked for an open space in the room, and heaved. As a result, Seamen was declared the victor, and Liszka was declared sick.

"When you die, you die," Liszka said when his wind returned. "Damn, that guy can eat." Seamen returned in saying, "You had me beat man, I'll eat with you anytime — how about teaming up with me and we'll take on some guys from the Temple football team."

Olley, the owner of the bar later said, "I know Seamen, nobody can beat him. During one Monday Night Football game, he ate 26 hot dogs in three hours and felt fine."

The contest was staged by the Talk of the Town as a promotion for their new "College Night," every Thursday night. The club is hoping to attract a regular crowd from all the local colleges. Every Thursday night will be Rock Night. Hot dogs will be sold for 25 cents a piece and beers will be five for a dollar.

Communications Board

The Board is designed to aid in improving the quality of the media as well. It operated with the goal of seeing that the media publishes the facts in the most objective way possible.

Many of its achievements have gone unnoticed, but one which stands out in particular was its influence in getting the "2090" course approved. The "2090" course is the program whereby certain student editors and publishers are given academic credit for the work they contribute to their respective publications.

In the future, the Board would like to help organize a "High School Newspaper and Yearbook Fair," hopefully in the spring. The idea would be to invite various high schools to participate in a program hosted by the Villanovan and the Yearbook staff. Advice would be given on how to organize and print newspapers and yearbooks. However, here, as in other cases, the Board would play a behind-the-scenes role, getting the sessions off the ground and seeing that things run smoothly. The goal of the Communications Board is to see that these areas function well and to see that Villanova promotes only the best in news journalism and communications media.

Mr. Villanova

scepter and waved to his adoring public before being hoisted onto the shoulders of the other contestants. "All the guys worked on this together," he said, "the crowd was psyched and it means a hell of a lot to me."

Among the judges was Dean of Men Alan Wechsler. "In nine years at Villanova, I never saw anything like it," he said. When pressed for comment on his favorite, the Dean was somewhat elusive. "The winner's a secret," he winked, "but the best man won." Who said Deans can't be regular guys?

For all those who participated and attended, the contest was a complete success and is destined to grow even larger. "I didn't think it would be as much fun as it was," said Passman. "It just proves that you can get involved with your school and have a good time." "I'm very proud and psyched to be Mr. Villanova," Anderson smiled. "This is the best damn school you'll ever see and I love everybody here. Stay psyched."

So to "Little Mac" Anderson go congratulations, a trophy, tickets to a '76er's game and almost certain mention in "Who Knows Who Cares." Special thanks should also go to Beth White, Leslie Carranza, Rose Marscico and the entire RSA Social Committee for a highly entertaining evening. Watch out, Atlantic City.

Over the past four years, defenseman Mike Fitzgerald has been an integral part of the Villanova Ice Hockey Club. Last year, the defenseman was named second team All-Star for the Middle Atlantic Ice Hockey Conference. This year as captain, under Head Coach Leslie "Skip" Probst, Fitzgerald hopes to lead the Ice Cats to a championship season.

Following his eldest brother, Fitzgerald came to Villanova looking for a good education and hoping to play hockey on the side. Being a "city boy" from Floral Park, New York, he liked the idea of being surrounded by trees and parks. Compared to the cramped environment of the city, he sees the Villanova landscape as beautiful. "I really like it here," he explained, "and I'm considering residing around here after I graduate. The area is so different from the city, yet the city is so close by." As for hockey, Fitzgerald knew he might see more playing time if he came to Villanova, and that meant a lot to him.

"I've really renjoyed my years at Villanova, "Fitzgerald commented. "I've done fairly well both academically and in hockey. I've enjoyed myself, and I'm a proud member of ETP." "In the future," he added, "I'd like to enter the business world, possibly in the area of corporate training. I'd like to administrate or teach a corporate training program."

To Fitzgerald, the most enjoyable aspect of playing for the Villanova Ice Hockey Club has been the chance to travel and see other schools. He will always remember his trips with the team to Cornell, Army and Navy. "As a team, we're close knit and we conduct ourselves in a varsity manner; but we are also a club, and because of that we're a little more relaxed. We play to win, but we also travel and play to enjoy ourselves."

Playing at Radnor Rink for home games makes all the hard work worthwhile for Fitzgerald. At Radnor, Villanova fans go wild and the opposing teams are intimidated by the fans and the rink out makes the game more enjoyable," Fitzgerald said, "We entertain the fans, and in return they fire up and entertain us." The rink itself is smaller than an official size hockey rink which most of the Ice Cats opposing teams are used to; in addition, the stands are located at only one end of the ice — behind the goal opposing teams must defend for two periods. To Fitzgerald and the Ice Cats Radnor rink is a mental and physical advantage; mentally advantageous in the aspect that opponents are subject to the Ice Cats' fans and physically advantageous because smaller rinks are more suitable to a scrappy, hard hitting team like Villanova. Fast skating teams like Penn State find themselves cramped and unable to fully utilize their speed at Radnor.

In analyzing this year's team, Fitzgerald is optimistic. "Last year, we finished second in the league as a result of a playoff loss to Delaware," noted the Wildcat defenseman. "This year we're looking for the championship, the Hannigan Cup."

It won't be easy though for the Ice Cats because the league has improved tremendously over the past few years. As a result of the Flyers winning two Stanley Cups, the Philadelphia area suffered a hockey epidemic. Philadelphians have become increasingly interested in hockey and local talent has developed by leaps and bounds. All the local college hockey teams, including Villanova, have improved as a result. In the league, Penn State may have improved the most as this year's team enters the season with extremely fast skaters.

"It is the Silver (25th) Anniversary for ice hockey, at Villanova, and I'm looking forward to a great season," boasted Fitzgerald. "Our lines are strong and well balanced and our goaltending should be exceptional. Also this year the penalty killing unit has returned. Currently the unit leads the league with the least amount of goals scored upon while being on the ice. "If we stay healthy, and hopefully my knees will hold up," he added, "we could have an outstanding year."

the early minutes but the Cats managed to rattle off four unanswered goals and beat Lehigh 7-3. Whitaker and Chip Kenny had two goals apiece while Kevin Kelly, Mike Kane and John Lamhurst had one goal each. Mike Alegardo was sensational in goal, stopping 47 Lehigh shots. The defense, led by "Big Bill" Monaco, was strong once again.

The Ice Cats have a pair of home games after the Thanksgiving break. On November 29, the Cats host Drexel and on December 1, they face Delaware in an important re-match.

Dribblers Climb To Division I

By BETH WHITE

Coach Harry Perretta recruited four promising players to aid his Wildkittens in the swing from small college to major college (Division I) women's basketball. Perretta's team finished 17-6 last year, the most wins ever for a women's basketball team at Villanova.

The Wildkitten's head coach anticipates a 75% tougher schedule but hopes to duplicate last year's winning season. "I want to do my best to improve the team," declares Perretta, "however, that improvement may not show up in the win column." He continues: "We could lose more games but still be a better team."

"This year and next are pivotal seasons for women's basketball at Villanova," explains Perretta, "because this will determine how successfully we can compete in Division I."

Perretta contributes much of his recruiting success to his assistants Dan Cassidy and Debbie McKee. "They are a great help and take a lot of the pressure and responsibility," commends the coach.

Their diligence in recruiting has paid off in the form of three freshmen and a sophomore, who will undoubtedly contribute to the Wildkittens' team goals.

Freshman Kathie Bisel leads the list of recruits. She scored 18 points per game and averaged 10 rebounds in every game at St. Hubert's High School. Perretta plans to position Bisel as "a small forward (she is 5'10") or big guard since she can handle and shoot very well. She (Bisel) is a scorer and a durable player."

Adding to the Wildkitten's offense will be two sisters, Courtney and Stephanie Vanderslice. Stephanie, an eligible sophomore transfer from the University of Delaware, was the Blue Hens' second leading scorer (15 ppg) and top rebounder (averaging 11.9 per game) as a freshman. She (Stephanie) will fill the void as a power forward," according to Coach Perretta.

Stephanie's younger sister Courtney, who is now a freshman at Villanova, will join her teammates on the court as a guard. "Together, they (Stephanie and Courtney) cover every position but center," comments Perretta.

The center slot will be supplemented by 5'11" freshman Rosemary Burke. Burke, who can be used as a power forward or as a relief substitute for Center Lisa Ortlip, is "quick and can add to our scoring," says Coach Perretta.

The head coach describes sophomore Ortlip as "a strong part of our scoring. She is a good defensive player, especially with her ability to block shots."

Junior Karen Hiznay, the all-time leading scorer in Wildkitten basketball history, will be able to have an even better year and improve her outside shooting because the freshman will take some of the pressure off of her as a point guard.

Mary Beth Gibson, whom Perretta calls a "tremendous shooter and ballhandler," will also benefit from the freedom provided by the recruits.

The Wildkitten coach will use guard Bess McGinn "as a spark plug — to begin a rally or get the team motivated if they are in a slump."

Lisa Souder, the only senior on the team, is the "epitome of a true basketball player," declares Perretta. "She always plays for the good of the whole team and is adept at any position." Her coach continues, "Lisa always hustles during practice and consistently gives 100% in every game."

"Lisa is an intelligent, all-around team player," praises Perretta.

Among the teams in the more difficult Division I schedule are Pittsburgh, Edinboro State, St. Joseph's, Fordham, Queens College and Cheyney State — all eastern regional tournament teams.

Icemen Lose Grudge Game

By JIM FEMIA

For the second consecutive week, the Villanova Ice Cats split a pair of weekend games. Friday night the Cats fell to the Blue Hens from Delaware 6-5, but regrouped on Saturday to defeat Lehigh 7-3.

After losing to Delaware in the semi-finals last season, Coach Skip Probst described the match as a "vengeance game." The Cats fell to Delaware once again, to the disappointment of Probst and the rest of the team.

Villanova broke out on top early on a goal by Mike Kane but the lead was short-lived as Delaware clawed back to tie the game. Villanova again took the lead on a goal by Chris Mancuso as the first period ended.

In the second period, the Cats managed just one goal while the Blue Hens scored two. Sophomore Tom Curran pocketed his third goal of the season on a pass from defenseman Paul LaFond, but the Hens once again tied the game by the end of the second period.

In the third period, "Killer" Whitaker gave the Cats the lead once again but three unanswered Delaware goals gave the Hens a two-goal lead with three minutes to play. Kane then tallied his second goal of the game and the Cats were within striking range of tying the game. An all-out attempt in the last minute was to no avail as Delaware skated off with a 6-5 victory.

Saturday afternoon was entirely different. The game was tied in

Ruggers Finish On Upswing

By ROBERT L.P. WALSH

With the final game against the Naval Academy and a 7-8 record, the Villanova Rugby Team can finish at best with a .500 tally. The Wildcats have improved steadily over the season after recovering from a slow start.

Last Saturday, the ruggers visited Penn and came away with a 6-0 shutout. Dave Lavery scored the only try for Villanova, while Tim McCarthy and Captain Bob Lynch were also instrumental in the win. The Penn game also marked the return of Joe White, who missed most of the season because of an injury.

Villanova's B-team was also successful in their match with the Quakers as they registered a 13-0 shutout. Al Corless had two tries and Mike Dingle capped the scoring with a penalty kick.

Captain Mark Civil has high expectations for the rugby team in the spring, partly generated by the Wildcats' fine performance during the latter part of the season. The addition of talented new players and the experience gained this year should aid the team immensely.

Coach Mike Abele and Jim Murray are seniors who will be graduating this winter. The entire rugby team joins in congratulating them as players and wishing them luck in the future.

Mountain Men Are A Tradition

Mark Zappy

Four years ago a group of St. Mary's freshmen decided to try intramural flag football. They called themselves the Red Light Raiders. That first year was disastrous, the Raiders fell to a 1-6 record.

Today the same guys are still playing ball, now under a different name — the Mountain Men. The memory of losing has driven the Men to an obsession of winning. Once again they are one of this year's playoff teams. Over the past three seasons, as the Mountain Men, they have fought to an impressive 17-2-1 tally. This year has proven to be no exception to their tradition of winning, as they rolled to an undefeated 5-0-1 mark.

When asked what the team's success can be attributed to, QB Tom Murray comments, "It's been no practices, weekends off, and Peppermint Schnapps." But surely there is more to it than that.

Experience has to be a major factor. The Men field a squad with 13 of its 17 players with four seasons of flag football behind them. A tremendous disregard for their bodies has to be considered also. The long list of injuries attests to this, but it seems as though these temporary setbacks aren't enough to keep them from playing.

The Men combine a rugged offense with a bone crushing, tenacious defense to account for their wins this year. Heading the attack for the offense is Dave Schmitt, leading scorer and Murray's main target. Kevin White and Jim Phibbs round out the backfield duties. Tight end Ted Melnik keeps the offense motivated with his clutch receiving and steady blocking. The Men in the pits are led by the aggressive play of captain Bob Hanlon. Brad Decker, Brian Scott, and Dave Dear complete the line to open the holes for a strong ground game. The offense has combined for an average 24.5 points per game and a well-balanced attack.

The pride of the team continues to be its stingy defense, which rarely allows opponents past midfield. In addition to Hanlon, Melnik, Dear, Decker, and White are some of the leagues hardest hitters — Ian Hughes, Pete Willis, and Mark Maria. Filling out the secondary are Joe Nadzak and Mark Zappy. Tom Durling, R.J. Galasso, and Bob Assuncao rotate in for certain defensive situations.

Depth has come to be one of the team's blessings. There are no real second stringers, so in event of an injury there is always someone to step in. After the knee injury to running back Bill McCarthy several players were able to substitute.

Because this is the last year for most of the team, holding back is out of the question.

Experience Key To Season

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Experience is always crucial when analyzing a new basketball season. Who graduated and how many recruits a coaching staff chooses is often the center of attention. The pre-season outlook for 1979 Main Line basketball community contains nothing but optimism with a complete return of last year's starting team.

The Wildcats have high expectations of improving last year's 15-13 record with depth at the guard and forward position for the first time in head Coach Rollie Massimino's seven years at Villanova. An excellent recruiting year should also add to Villanova's quest for supremacy in the Eastern hoop scene.

With such depth, this year's team should rank near the top of the greatest teams. 6'10" center Marty Caron, 6'8" forward Alex Bradley, 6'7" forward Aaron Howard, 6'2"Tom Sienkiewicz and 6'2" guard Rory Sparrow all return from last year's starting line-up. 6'0" guard Steve Lincoln and 6'3" Tom Bethea gained valuable experience as reserves and should play key roles for the Eastern Eight champs of last season.

Tom Sienkiewicz emerged as a pleasant surprise last season for the Cats. The "polish gunner" gained a starting position midway through the season and continued his sharpshooting with a 16.4 ppg average. All-American hopeful Alex Bradley continued to lead the team in scoring (17.3 ppg) and rebounding (7.5 RPG) for the second straight year. Alex was the backbone of the Cats' offense while providing the rebounding power the team readily needed on the defensive end.

Aaron Howard may well have been last year's unsung hero. As a freshman, the 6'7" actually logged more minutes than Bradley while being a frequent offensive spark. Hopefully, this year will be the year of big man Marty Caron. After starting all but two games last year, Caron benefitted from his playing time and could be an important pivot man for the Cats.

Four year starter and tri-captain Rory Sparrow is the floor general of the team. Coming off of only an average year compared to his excellent sophomore year, Rory is being looked upon for the leadership to guide this team to victory. His field goal accuracy is penpoint and he led the team in assists. (3.7 pg) and minutes played (31.3 mpg).

In analyzing the weaknesses from last year's squad, Coach Massimino found rebounding a major problem. The Cats hopefully solved some of their problems with the addition of 6'8" freshman John Pinone. In commenting on the needs of this year's team, the EAA Coach of the Year said, "we appear to have good depth at guard and forward. We need a shooter and the center position is up for grabs because we need better rebounding. We are not an overly big team."

Junior guard Tom Sienkiewicz will once again be called upon for much of the scoring for the 1979-80 Wildcats.

Regarding the opponents the Cats will face, Massimino feels that the Big Five is "as fierce and competitive as ever and he feels the Eastern Eight is equally balanced.

Villanova endured the most difficult schedule in the East last year, according to EASTERN BASKETBALL magazine. This year's schedule has some changes in it with the University of Baltimore, St. Peter's and Drexel being new opponents.

"The Family," which best exemplifies the type of team unity the Cats have will hopefully gel as a unit within a month. "We should really come together by mid-December," the Coach explained, "by then the vets and rookies should become comfortable with one another." A team goal hasn't exactly been made but everyone connected with the hoop program is eyeing a post season tournament in 1980.

Reflecting on major college basketball itself, Coach Massimino felt everything must be kept in perspective. "We expect our kids to maintain academic excellencies while being athletes. The fans and alumni must realize that we compete to the best of our ability and according to the framework we have to work with. Winning is more than just being on the left hand side of the ledger."

In the case of the 1979-80 Wildcats, the early predictions are pointing towards much success on that left hand side of the won-lost column. The word is being circulated again, the Cats are back!

Editorial

The NCAA is probably light years away from adopting a playoff structure. Bowl games are big businesses that extend beyond a mere sixty minutes of football. They are a tradition that will not, and should not, die easily. Also, a complicated tournament structure would raise the problem of arriving at a number of eligible teams, not to mention prolonging the season indefinitely. Moreover, it's no quick process to overthrow the prejudices and preconceived notions of the experts who hold the keys. It will take years of success to guarantee recognition.

So eastern fans will have to be content in waiting. But the 1979 edition of the Temple Owls, haunted by the memories of that maddening near-win in September against Pitt, a solitary marker shy of an incredible perfect year, will have to make do with speculation on what might have been.

Boxing

The Wildcat Boxers will face off in an Intersquad Match tonite at 8:00 in the Fieldhouse. Captains Fran Freemen and Brett Miller remarked that the team, which was ranked 14th in the nation last year, is "looking strong and will have a promising year."

The team's first competitive match will be December 7 against West Chester, Penn and Temple at 8:00, also in the Fieldhouse.

Jirak and Bill Schamp combined for a total of six shut-outs, including a 1-0 victory over Notre Dame's Fighting Irish. The Cats showed that they indeed do have an offense by out scoring opponents 26-22. They even managed a six game undefeated streak during the month of October.

The offense was led once again by junior Dave McHugh, who is the leading scorer for the second year in a row, with seven goals. Steve Frey and Brian Barr are right behind with four goals apiece.

The defense rallied behind the inspirational play of seniors Rodney Lane and John Csipo. The defense allowed a remarkable 32 fewer goals than had been scored last season. This has to be the key to the team's success. The slaughters the booters endured in past have now become even matches.

Villanova narrowly missed making the playoffs of the Philly Seven Soccer League. Two more wins against Drexel and La Salle versity the Cats suffered another defeat. Villanova was put in front by a score from Jeff Antoon with an assist by John Waraksea. With five minutes left WVU tied it up, sending the game into overtime. Steve Frey contributed the booters next goal off a RonKeusch pass, but that was not enough as the Mountainers kicked in two more for the 3-2 defeat.

The Cats should continue their winning ways next year with the loss of only five seniors, three of whom are starters.

Tomorrow...

Power Lifting

This Saturday, the Villanova University powerlifting team will host Temple University and the U.S. Naval Academy in a triangular meet. The meet will begin at 1:00 in the Villanova Field House.

This marks the first collegiate competition of the season for the three teams. Villanova has never lost in dual-meet competition and has a 45-0 record. This will be the first time that the Wildcats are involved in a triangular meet. Coach Joe Slabinski expects a close meet which would be unusual. "Temple has an up-and-coming program and the Naval Academy is always strong," explains Slabinski. Villanova expects strong performances from Senior Joe Jacono (Glenn Mills, Pa.), sophomore Vince Sferra (Raritan, N.J.) and freshman Dan Capece (Amsterdam, N.Y.).

Football

The Wildcats will try to even their 4-5 record on the gridiron tomorrow against Rutgers University. The Cats are refreshed after a 9-3 win over the University of Richmond, but will face tough competition from the Scarlet Knights (7-2) who pulled an unexpected 13-7 victory over Tennessee two weeks ago and tromped Army 20-7 last Saturday.

The Cats were off last week, a break which Head Coach Dick Bedesem feels was beneficial for the team. "The week off helped us. We had a lot of bumps and bruises, but we got our bodies back in shape for this week," explains Bedesem.

The grudge battle, a longtime rivalry in Wildcat football, will begin at 1:00 Saturday at Rutgers

Maree Clinches NCAA Regionals

By RAY ENGLER

Villanova despite some debilitating injuries suffered by junior Amos Korir (whose sore back caused him to drop out of the race about 1-1/2 miles into the race and senior Carey Pinkowski (who was still feeling the effects of a flu-like illness), was able to show enough intestinal fortitude and talent to finish in the top 5 at the NCAA Regional Championships held last Saturday morning, thus qualifying for the NCAA National Championships to be held at Lehigh University next Monday, November 19, beginning at 12:00 noon.

The Wildcats, although finishing second behind Penn State, nevertheless had some fine performances from their entrants. Junior Sydney Maree won his third straight race, keeping his current winning streak alive. He has now won all the races in which he has entered this season, and took this one with a commanding time of 30:05.3 for the 10,000 meter Lehigh Cross-Country course. Senior Don Paige, realizing that the team was in trouble due to Korir dropping out and Pinkowski's illness, showed great determination and grit in his finishing kick and placed 22nd in the field with a time of 31:34.8.

Villanova's third finisher was sophomore Kevin Dillon, who finished with a surprisingly strong kick, even though at the three mile mark he appeared to be out of the running. Dillon finished a respectable 24th, with a time of 31:35.3. Right behind Dillon was Pinkowski, who showed great team spirit by not dropping out. He was the harrier's fourth scorer and ran a time of 31:37.5. If Pinkowski had dropped out, there is a chance that the Cats might not have qualified for Nationals.

The fifth Villanova finisher (and final scorer) was senior Dean Childs, who admitted that he had been "running good at 5000 meters, but then it just got so hard to keep the legs moving. I was lucky I lasted until the end". His 36th place finish (in 31:54.3) made Villanova's point total 104 and placed the Wildcats second to Penn State. Because an early finisher, Gary Siriano, was disqualified, Paige, Dillon, Pinkowski and Childs had 1 point subtracted from their place. The sixth Villanova finisher (and 43rd overall) was sophomore John Hunter, who ran the course in 32:03.4.

The Top 5 teams in the race received the right to run in the National Championships next Monday. Those teams are Penn State (73 points), Villanova (104), Manhattan College (105), Fairleigh Dickinson (128) and Bucknell (130).

Come out to the NCAA National Championships next Monday if you can. It may be the only National Championships you could see live and in person. Some of the superior talent, in addition to our own illustrious runners, is: Henry Rono from Washington State, Mike Musyoki and Suleiman Nyambui from the University of Texas at El Paso, Rudy Chappas and Alberto Salazar from Oregon and Tom Graves of Auburn.

Commentary

No Bowl Bid For Owls?

By PATRICK FLYNN

It seems strange to be writing a column in defense of a future Villanova opponent, but the world of college sports is full of unlikely episodes. The 1979 Temple Owls' football team represents a real baffler.

Through nine games the Owls, who will invade the Main Line to face the Wildcats next Saturday, have done it all. They've averaged a whopping 36 points per game. They've rolled over powerful teams like Rutgers, Syracuse and Delaware. They've handled the pressures of regional television in winning a contest at Hawaii. In fact, with the exception of a heartbreaking, one-point defeat at the hands of 11th-ranked Pittsburgh, Temple has an unblemished record. And it's the best-kept secret in sports.

For their efforts, the Owls are rated 16th or 18th in the nation, depending on who you believe. That's not so bad. But now the bowl game talk is heating up and Temple is being left out in the cold.

Officials of the Garden State Bowl, to be played December 15 in East Rutherford, New Jersey, say that Temple rates a good shot to be invited to their party if they can knock off Penn State tomorrow and Villanova next week. Everybody else remains mum.

Now I'm not about to take a cheap shot at the state which gives the world Bruce Springsteen and Miss America. New Jersey has a lot of things going for it, but the Garden State Bowl is not one of them. Sure, it's an honor to be chosen for any post-season game. However, right now this Temple squad seems to merit a trip to a game that would offer better exposure, bigger cash and better benefits all-around for the perpetuation of its program. It's a shame to watch this team go out week after week, blast through one opponent after another and stay within one point of an undefeated slate only to see their season end palely, unglamourously and a quick bus ride away from where it started.

What really hurts is to look at the calibre of some other teams that will be heading out to places like San Diego and Jacksonville to end their seasons. Without a doubt, teams like Penn State, Notre Dame and Navy will be extended bids to better games, not on the basis of performance or success, but on account of years and years of media hype. Regardless of their seasonal records, those teams will pack the stands in any city that has ever seen the pigskin. That's a great way to ensure the economic success of a bowl program. But as a way to reward superior teams, to pit the best against the best to see who's strongest, it stinks.

More importantly, the anonymity of the '79 Owls is a symptom of an even greater disease — the identity crisis that befalls Eastern athletics in general. In basketball as well as football, powerhouses in the Northeast seem to be more reluctantly recognized by the rest of the nation's sports observers. Perhaps it is the great concentration of professional franchises between Washington, D.C. and Boston which robs college athletics of the extensive local support which it so desperately needs in order to grab the national spotlight. Perhaps there are too many other things to do in Philadelphia or New York than get worked up about a game between kids, a distraction which does not surface in South Bend, Indiana or in Norman, Oklahoma.

Whatever the reason, it's futile at this point to complain. In college football, at least, there's no way out.

Graffiti Mars Campus Property

Statistics Indicate Sharp Increase in Vandalism

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

Further acts of campus vandalism occurred last week as statistics were released indicating a sharp rise in the extent and monetary cost of damage to University property.

On the morning of November 19, a sign directing an obscenity toward Iran was discovered painted on the blacktop surface between Sullivan and Sheehan Halls; it was covered over later in the day.

Later on the same day more graffiti was found on the second-floor outer wall of Sullivan Hall. The cost of removing the graffiti, which entails sandblasting, is estimated at $2000, according to Thomas N. Trucks, director of University maintenance.

Also, a second-floor bathroom in Fedigan Hall was vandalized on November 20, resulting in damage which will cost in the neighborhood of $1000 to repair.

Trucks stated that "graffiti is becoming a problem for the first time here." He said it poses a particularly difficult problem for his office since sandblasting, which must be done by an outside contractor, is seemingly the only effective method for removing the graffiti.

"The repair costs for the damages to Fedigan and Sullivan will be borne by those who are responsible for them," Trucks noted.

In the event the parties liable for damages to a dormitory do not come forward and assume the repair cost, it is University policy to require the residents living in the vicinity of the damages to share in the cost of repairs.

While vandalism continued last week, statistics released by the Maintenance Office showed a rise for September and October of this year as compared to the same month last year.

In September of 1978, 15 buildings on campus were vandalized, whereas 23 buildings suffered damage from vandalism this past September.

The figures for October revealed that 22 structures suffered damage from vandalism this year as opposed to 17 last year. For the two-month period last year, the repair costs came to $6,749.65; this year's figures for the September-October period amount to $8,620, an increase of 27.8 percent over 1978.

Of the repair costs for September and October of this year, Stanford Hall alone accounted for $3,582.49, better than 41% of the total. Other structures which required over $500 in repairs were Sullivan Hall, Kennedy Hall, and the football stadium.

Rally for Cambodia Held

By RICHARD DI STEFANO

In an effort to awaken the Villanova community to the plight of the starving people of Cambodia, Dr. James Bean of the psychology department aided in organizing a rally to appeal for student support.

The rally, which began at noon on November 15 and lasted over an hour, took place outside Kennedy Hall. The time and services of faculty members was auctioned off to raise money for organizations such as Oxfam, a group which seeks to teach underdeveloped countries to provide food for their people. The rally also featured a speech by Dr. John Logue.

Dr. Bean stressed the need for local recognition of the problem, asserting that while cities such as Boston have had television editorials on the hunger situation, Philadelphia has had little network coverage to date. Some of his students are currently at work on a short film that they hope will be broadcast and will call attention to the crisis.

The Campus Ministry Center is also at work on the Cambodian project. The idea, according to the Rev. Michael Glessner, OSA, is "to make people aware of the problem." Father Glessner believes that the rally did much to attract support, and that the donations resulting from the Fast from Lunch, also held on November 15, provided a needed financial stimulus.

The Rev. Donald Reilly, OSA, also of campus ministry, observed that there are organizations on the campus dedicated to the hunger situation, such as Bread for the World. During Hunger Awareness Week, November 12-16, there was a concert, a Run for Hunger, and the Improvisation Group from Vasey Theatre lent its support.

Theft, Faculty Blamed For Library Losses

By BILL ROCK

Many students are inconvenienced when doing research in the library by an inability to find books on the shelves that are listed in the card catalogue. Members of the library staff cite a number of reasons for this inconvenience.

Mrs. Kathryn O'Connor, circulation librarian, stated, "Theft of books is the major problem, as it is in most libraries. Some other libraries, however, have more sophisticated detection systems than we have. I believe that the system we use works as well as it can, but if students really want to sneak books out, they will."

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., chief librarian, emphasized another factor.

"I have never considered theft that serious an issue. It exists, of course, but is much worse elsewhere. What is a continuing problem is faculty members keeping books indefinitely.

"Some teachers take out large numbers of books and keep them for as long as two or three years. There is really little we can do about it. I would like to see a fine attached to their salaries, but I have gotten no support in this area from a succession of Academic Vice-Presidents. With students, you can withhold their transcripts, but little can be done with faculty. There is no equity."

Other problems cited included students returning books to improper places on the shelves and misplacement by the library staff themselves. Periodic shelf-reading by the staff generally corrects these errors.

Mrs. O'Connor pointed to students' failure to use the daily circulation print-out as a major contributor to the problem.

"Each day we get a computer print-out listing the books that have been checked out. This list is on the front desk. Students may refer to it to see if a book has actually been taken out. If a book is not on the shelves and is not listed in this print-out as being out, then we regard it as officially missing, and a search is begun.

"We will never know a book is missing until someone comes and tells us, or until we take inventory. Therefore, it is the responsibility of the student to make us aware of the missing book, so a search can be conducted."

Athletic Proposal Challenged

By MARIANNE LAVELLE

The report of the ad-hoc committee of the Board of Trustees on athletics which was presented to the University Senate on November 12 "did not get to the heart of the problem in Villanova athletics," according to Dr. G. Lee Christensen, associate professor of civil engineering.

Christensen, a 1960 graduate of Villanova, who has studied and worked at Johns Hopkins University, the University of Maryland, and the University of Minnesota, said he wanted to offer a perspective "for making use of Villanova's resources in the best way," in an interview with the Villanovan this week.

"The current problem I see is that resources are being expended for spectator sports like football and basketball, while free-play and intramural athletics are almost ignored," said Christensen.

"The first question you have to ask is 'Who is the athletic program for?' I believe the program should be primarily for the students, faculty and staff here now. Secondarily, the program is for alumni and others," he said.

> ... Resources are being expended for spectator sports like football and basketball, while free-play and intramural athletics are almost ignored.
> Dr. Lee Christensen

"The athletic program is paid for by the students. They pay for 90 percent of the program, no matter what type of program it is."

"There are two types of athletic programs the school can have," said Christensen. "You can have the spectator program, where you recruit 150 gifted athletes, and people can sit in the stadium and watch, or you can aim for athletic participation by the largest portion of the University possible."

"Athletics is for everyone, and should be worked into the student's daily living. The University should make it easy for students to participate in athletics. It is most important for an individual's development, and least available at Villanova," said Christensen.

"A concrete example would be a day-hop student who wants to go jogging. The resident students have the showers in their dorms, but the day-hop's should have equal access to showers, and should have a place to lock their belongings, so that if they have an hour break during the day, they should be able to play some tennis and get some exercise."

Christensen addressed himself to the report given by Thomas Labrecque, of the Board of Trustee's ad-hoc committee on athletics.

"I have no argument with what he says," said Christensen," but he doesn't get at the heart of the problem."

"Labrecque spoke about solutions to the athletics problem involving expenditure of capital funds. He recommended modifications to the stadium, intramural ballfields at the Morris Estates, and an $8 million indoor athletic facility.

"I don't have too much trouble with those proposals, but I would add one, and put it ahead of all three," said Christensen. "Not a penny should be spent until there is a men's and a women's locker room on campus, open 18 hours a day, for residents and commuters, for free-play athletics. That should be the number one capital expenditure," said Christensen.

"Although operational expenditure is not specifically being addressed now, it has to be addressed in the annual budget," Christensen said. "Labrecque pointed out that no capital expenditures have been made in recent years, but operational expenditures have been made, and primarily for spectator sports.

"The University should hire people on the athletic staff to work full time on free-play and intramural sports," he said.

Library Science Nun Wins Service Award

IRENE SMITH

Sister Mary Margaret Cribben, R.S.M. of Villanova University was recently conferred the Four Chaplains Legion of Honor Membership Award in recognition of service to all people regardless of race or faith.

Sister Margaret, an associate professor at Villanova, holds three master degrees in Library Science, Administration and Religious Studies.

The award came as a complete surprise to Sister. "I didn't know how anyone at Temple knew I existed."

The Four Chaplains Legion of Honor Membership is a award whose origin dates back to World War II when a ship, The Dorchester, sank. On board the vessel were four chaplains: a rabbi, two Protestant ministers, and a Roman Catholic priest who sacrificed their lives by staying on deck handing out rafts and other lifesaving equipment.

In memorial to their unselfish courage the Chapel of Four Chaplains was built at Temple University. Opened in the 1950's the completed chapel was the work of Dr. Dan Poling who was responsible for its construction. Within the chapel, there are three altars dedicated to the Protestant,

Sr. Mary Margaret Cribben, R.S.M.

Situation in Iran Examined

Dr. Hafeez Malik, an expert in Muslim world issues.

By SUZANNE TAVANI

"A lot of rhetoric is being escalated and volleying in a war of nerves being fired at Carter," stated Dr. Hafeez Malik, professor of Political Science, in response to Ayatollah Khomeini's continuous violent verbal attacks against the United States.

Malik reiterates his previous remarks (Villanovan, Nov. 16) that the American government and people simply don't understand the deep resentment and suspicions felt by Iranians against the United States.

But American furor heightened last week after being fired by the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Pakistan, the murder of two American Marines, and unfounded accusations that the U.S. backed the seizure of the Grand Mosque in Mecca. A native of Pakistan and a Muslim, Malik expressed "deep embarrassment and anguish" at the latest irrational and inexcusable attack in the Islamic world.

Regardless of threats against the hostages lives and the fact that Iranians have wired the entire embassy complex in Tehran with explosives, Malik believes that the hostages lives will be saved, "Khomeini didn't call for the embassy takeover, and he had no choice but to go along with it. He's already made one mistake, he will not make the same mistake twice." But Khomeini himself admitted, "I cannot control the embassy occupiers."

The United Nation's (UN) Security Council will meet Saturday night to discuss what Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim terms, "the greatest threat to world peace since the 1962 Cuban Missile Crises." Khomeini, who begins all his statements with the line "In the name of God the compassionate, the merciful," stated that Iran knows of the UN's predetermined decision dictated by the United States. "I hope the Security Council would be able to find a compromise solution enabling both parties to resolve this conflict," stated Malik, "But as long as the Shah is in the U.S. or any other country who will not extradite him to Iran, no inter-

Ugandan Ambassador Criticizes U.S. Inaction

By KIM RUSHTON

Last Monday evening Villanova hosted Kanyana Wapenyi, the Ugandan Ambassador to the United Nations, His lecture dealt with "Human Rights in the African Context."

That lecture also marked the change in the name of Villanova's 12-year-old World Order Research Institute to the Common Heritage Institute (CHI).

CHI Director John J. Logue began the evening by explaining that the purpose of his organization had grown to include not only the proper preservation of oceans but also the proper preservation of humanity, especially children.

University President Rev. John M. Driscoll deemed the change an important one, and encouraged the Institute to continue its outstanding achievements.

"Humanity is our most precious resource. It is this shared humanity that makes us one," stated Driscoll.

CHI Advisory Board Chairman Arthur Loll, former Indian Ambassador to the United Nations, praised the name change, saying it showed "remarkable insight into the needs of the world today."

Wapenyi opened his speech by explaining that he was speaking from personal experience about the situation in Africa. He hoped that sharing his experience could help others to better understand the significance of human rights in the world today.

Wapenyi had been forced into exile when Idi Amin took power. Among other hardships, he personally experienced the murder of his bishop.

Celebrating "COMMON HERITAGE INSTITUTE," the new name for Villanova's 12-year old World Order Research Institute were (l. to r.) University President Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.; Dr. Priscilla Hopkirk, Political Science Chairperson; Ambassador Kanyanya Wapenyi of Uganda, the speaker of the evening; and Dr. John J. Logue, who continues as Director of the institute.

He was somber as he told the story of how his bishop, brave enough to speak out against the violations of human rights in Uganda, was one day picked up and driven away by Amin's "police," never to be seen again.

Uganda cried out to the UN for eight years, only to be answered by silence, stated Wapenyi. He stated that Uganda was disappointed by the failure of the United States to help stop violations of human rights. He then said that while governments may come and go, people of the world remain.

Wapenyi refuted the argument that violations of human rights should be handled within domestic domains by asserting that since external aid often maintains despots, it is an international problem.

"The UN must become a more effective force," declared Wapenyi.

Concerning the situation in Iran, Wapenyi condemned the holding of the hostages. He said that the President of Uganda has declared Iran's actions a "breach of international law." This declaration was greeted by applause. He urged the UN Security Council to take action against Iran.

State Senator to Speak

Ed Howard, a Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, will speak on the Iran crisis Tuesday evening (Dec. 4th) at a debate meeting of the Villanova Political Union. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held at 7 p.m. in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall on the Villanova campus.

Howard, a Pennsylvania State Senator from Bucks County, will support the Union's debate resolution which reads: "Resolved, this house favors breaking diplomatic and economic relations with Iran unless all U.S. citizens in Iran are assured treatment consistent with international law." The debate will also permit Villanova students to state their views on the appropriate U.S. response to the Iranian government's holding U.S. diplomatic personnel as hostages in order to force the U.S. government to deliver the deposed Shah for trial in his home country.

Senator Howard has served in the State Senate since 1970. He is ranking minority member of the Senate Finance Committee and serves on several other committees. A former bank president and bank board chairman, he is President of the National Fiberstok Corporation. Howard has served as chairman of the Bucks County Community College Authority and as Bucks County representative on the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA).

On August 22, 1979, Fikile Bam, a 42-year old barrister, scheduled to defend Chief Dalindyebo Sabata, political leader and an opponent of the Transkei government, was arrested in Umtata, Transkei, on a flight from Johannesburg, South Africa. Mr. Bam is being held in secret and without trial. His mother and his lawyer have been denied access to him and there are fears for his health.

This is his second imprisonment; in South Africa he was a political prisoner on Robben Island from 1964 to 1974.

The above information comes via "Amnesty International," an independent organization which works on behalf of non-violent prisoners of conscience who have been detained without charges and without trial because of their beliefs and the stand they take because of them. In addition, Amnesty International opposes torture and the death penalty, "in all cases and without reservation."

Amnesty International's usual method of operation for justice is through letter-writing. If you would like to support Fikile Bam in this way, please contact Fr. Fittipaldi, Religious Studies Department, immediately.

Do You Wear GLASSES ?

Here's an effective new eye-exercise program that can produce astonishing results in a very short time . . .

The Bettervision Eye Clinic is now offering a program of eye-exercises that can safety correct most cases of poor eyesight—so that glasses or contact lenses are no longer needed. Originally developed by Dr. William H. Bates of the New York Eye Hospital, this method has been widely used by the Armed Forces, schools, clinics, and thousands of private individuals, for the treatment of:

- nearsightedness
- farsightedness
- astigmatism
- middle-age sight

For many years it was thought that poor eyesight was just bad luck, or something you inherit from your parents. Scientists now know that most eyesight problems are caused by accumulated stress and tension—which squeeze the eyeball out of shape, and affect the muscles that do the focusing. The result is the eye cannot form a clear image, and the world appears to be blurry. In people over 40, the natural aging process is also an important factor.

No matter what your eyesight problem the Bates Method can help you. This is a health care program, and will benefit everyone who follows it—children, adults, and seniors.

It is important to understand that glasses do not cure a visual problem. They are simply a compensating device—like crutches. In fact, glasses usually make the condition worse. Because they make the eyes weak and lazy, a minor problem often develops into a lifetime of wearing glasses.

The Bates Method corrects poor eyesight by strengthening the eye-muscles and relaxing the eyeball. You do simple easy exercises that increase your focusing power, eliminate eyestrain, and bring your eyesight back to normal.

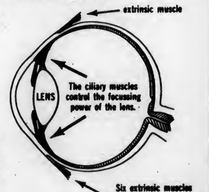
Because the Bates Method deals with the basic cause of your eyesight problem, you can expect to see a definite improvement in as little as 1 or 2 weeks. Even if you have worn glasses all your life—things will become clearer and clearer, and you will have flashes of good vision . . . as you go through the program, these flashes become longer and more frequent . . . gradually blending into permanent better sight—at which point the exercises are no longer necessary.

We usually find that people whose eyesight is not too bad can return to 20/20 vision in about a month. Even if your eyesight is really poor, within 2 to 3 months you should be able to put away your glasses, once and for all. Read these case histories:

Aldous Huxley—Nobel Author
"My vision was getting steadily worse, even with greatly strengthened glasses. To my dismay I realized I was going blind. On the advice of my Doctor I decided to try the Bates Method. There was an immediate improvement. After only 2 months I was able to read clearly without glasses. Better still, the cataract which had covered part of one eye for over 16 years was beginning to clear up."

Rev. Frederick A. Miles, M.S.
"By following the simple exercises given in this program, I have completely recovered my vision. Now I can read for long periods without my glasses."

Ron Moore—Technician
"I originally went to the Clinic to deliver some equipment—and ended up trying their eye-exercise program. I am near-sighted, and have worn glasses for 15 yrs. In just 3 weeks after starting the program, my eyesight has already improved to the point where I can now drive, do business, and watch T.V.—all without my glasses!"



This program has been specially designed for the individual to exercise at home. Written in simple non-technical language, it gives you all the guidance you need to regain natural healthy vision in just ½ hour a day: illustrated booklet, complete step-by-step instructions, plus special charts and displays to ensure you make rapid progress. The program is fully guaranteed and there's nothing more to buy.

By following this program, you will soon be able to see clearly without glasses. It's up to you. Ordering the Bates Method can be one of the best decisions you ever made. So do it now—before you get sidetracked and forget. Fill out the order coupon, attach your check for $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling, and mail it to us today!

If you have any questions regarding this program, please call us at (415) 763-8900. Our qualified operator will be glad to help you.

The Bates Method can mark a turning point in your life—better eyesight without glasses or contact lenses. The program is guaranteed. Try it for 30 days, and if you're not fully satisfied, return it for an immediate refund.

Iranian Conflict: Tension Grows

Tension characterizes the realm of international and national politics as the Iranian crisis approaches its 27th day. It is a tension which is felt across the world, within the nation, and in local communities, including the college campuses.

Heated sentiment across the world has caused the sacking of the U.S. Embassy in Pakistan, the death of two marines, and the ever larger anti-American demonstrations in front of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

In this country, too, the tension grows. It is checked, however, or somehow dampened by fear: fear for the lives of the 49 hostages still held captive in Iran, a fear of retaliation by the fanatical Khomeini.

From beneath this veil of fear, instances emerge which belie the underlying American anger.

Sales of Iranian flags in Philadelphia have increased, somewhat like what happened to the sale of Japanese flags after Pearl Harbor. Atleast one Iranian restaurant in New York has had to close because of an utter loss of business. Philadelphians were photographed last week on Chestnut Street, kicking an effigy of the Ayatollah.

There have not been demonstrations at Villanova, neither anti-Iranian, nor anti-American, as there were at other areas schools, notably the University of Pennsylvania.

Universities may traditionally have been sites of protest. During the Vietnam war, the center of the anti-war movement was the college campus. Villanova is quiet today, as college students, who were just adolescents at the end of the Vietnam war come closer and closer to having to face a military conflict.

Last week, Ayatollah Khomeini called for mass military training in his country, and President Carter sent a naval fleet to maneuver in the Persian Gulf. College students, who have lived their lives under the nuclear threat, hoped they would never come this close to war.

Villanova seems quiet today, and the anti-Iranian graffiti that was scrawled on the parking lot last week was hurriedly removed.

For the safety of the 49 hostages, and the preservation of national security, Americans are told to "restrain our actions and behave with a considered regard for our rule of law" as Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti urged.

At the same time, Iranians listen to broadcasts that state the duty of every Moslem is "to defend the Islamic movement of Iran against its satanic enemy, the United States, and to rise against American interests."

The growing tension and resentment across America and on college campuses at the loss of American respect abroad will not be easily allayed, while the impending threat of U.S. dishonor and war continues to play upon the nerves of a newly united American public.

Field House

Forty years ago, if one asked someone what he thought of the Villanova College Field House, that person probably would consider it a modern facility with all the latest innovations. In fact, the 1934 Villanova yearbook says: "The gigantic Field House has become the envy of many of the larger colleges in the East." However, times have changed and the college has been a university for over thirty years and the need for a new athletic center has arisen.

Need for a New Indoor Stadium

What caused the necessity for a new indoor stadium? The students who attended the college when the Field House opened numbered less than 150 per class compared to the 1800 in the current freshman class. The problem is that a university with a major Division One Basketball program such as Villanova's can't fairly compete with other basketball powers, utilizing the current facilities. Nearby schools such as Princeton, Rutgers and West Virginia Universities have recently built new indoor athletic arenas and have improved their overall athletic program as well as gaining in ticket revenue with their expanded facilities. With a stadium such as the Field House, Villanova could never play a Notre Dame at Villanova. This year home games against such league rivals as St. Bonaventure and Rutgers are not being played at the Field House but could be if the facilities were better. As it stands now, Villanova must play Notre Dame at the Penn Palestra every year that Villanova is scheduled to have a home contest versus the Irish. Having a new home court would enable more Villanova students to see this game as well as several others which have been fought at the Palestra, an even older but less deteriorated facility.

New Stadium could generate Revenue

A new larger center would also create the possibility for televised games with much-appreciated television revenue as well as increased spectator interest and enthusiasm. The television money could go towards maintaining the new facility and help out the financially troubled football program. Villanova's basketball league, the Eastern Athletic Association, now has a television contract. This is fine except for the fact that only one of the nine TV games is a Villanova game and none are to be televised from the Field House. Other schools, notably Rutgers and West Virginia, will have four league games televised.

Although periodic rennovation has taken place in the Field House, it is no longer adequate as the major indoor athletic facility at Villanova. The need is for a new, larger indoor athletic center and maybe some day soon it will be realized and one will be built. Just maybe.

Intramurals

To the Editor:

In a school as large as Villanova, one really wonders how we still put up with a department as poorly run as the Intramural Department. This attack is specifically designed at the incapacity of the Intramural Department to operate an effective flag football program. Not only is there a great deal of inconsistency that must be tolerated, but also an extreme amount of bias. The favoritism shown to some teams is not only uncalled for, but so blatent at times as to cause nausea.

Last Friday afternoon, a game originally scheduled between the "High and Mighty" and "Athlete's Foot" was cancelled to allow two play-off bound teams to participate in one more game. First of all, the "High and Mighty" has never forfeited any games and currently maintains a respectable 3-3 record. Give us a good reason why we should be afforded such disrespect. Not only was it unfair to us, it showed a lack of concern for all parties involved.

We can't be sure who is responsible for this occurence, but just who the hell do you think you are. Good luck to all play-off bound teams, however, your fate may not be completely in your hands.

St. Mary's - It's A Zoo!

By IRENE SMITH

For all of the people who are fed up with their drab dorm rooms, frustrated by lack of social life and driven to drink by a nerdish roommate, there could be a solution for adding something exciting and exotic to one's college experience: The answer . . . a pet, not just your common ordinary run of the mill pet but something on the wild side — literally.

Despite University regulations stating no dogs, cats, snakes, monkeys, etc. are allowed on campus, three students living in St. Mary's Hall have managed to adopt a boa constrictor, Oscars (fish that eat other fish) and a tarantula as roommates.

The owner of the boa who chose to be unidentified "thought it would be neat to have a pet in a single room, something exotic, a conversation piece." His choice of a pet was narrowed considerably by University regulations and also by the fact that hampsters and mice weren't affectionate, they smelled and were too messy.

After asking questions and hearing that boas make good pets, the student finally considered it. His only hesitation was handling a snake. "It would be useless to have a pet that you couldn't handle and play with." The decision was made after holding a snake for the first time and discovering the skin wasn't slimy, but dry and smooth.

Nate the Snake, "for want of a better name," is about three feet long and lives exclusively on rats and mice. Fed exclusively on the weekends "for entertainment reasons," the snake's quota for the past five weeks has been one rat and thirteen mice. A boa grows about an inch a month until it reaches its full length of ten feet. His owner doesn't think he'll keep him till he reaches that size, he most likely will only keep him for a year or so till he graduates.

The reactions to the snake have been many. "Most guys think it's really neat; they get into the violent aspect of his eating, but very few want to handle it. Girls vary from one extreme to the other." The student described one incident in which a friend thought he was kidding when he told her he had a snake and she nearly fainted when she saw it. His reaction to owning a snake is one of calm detachment. "It's the first time I've ever done anything odd in my whole life," he said. He pointed out that a lot of people don't understand snakes, so they fear them. The size of the boa at present is not dangerous to humans, although his owner pointed out that it is quite strong.

The boa stalks its prey by coiling up on a rock and waiting for its prey to come within striking distance. The snake will only attack if it can swallow the mouse or rat head first. Having watched the boa devour a rat and having observed other people's reactions to it, the whole experience can only be described as one of mixed anticipation, fear, and excitement.

The death is quick. The snake waits for the mouse to exhale and squeezes it, killing it by suffication. The snake is kept in a tank and cannot escape. Often times, his owner will take him out and allow it to crawl around on his lap and up his arm. He avoids wrapping the snake around his neck in fear that it would try something when it gets bigger.

The snake is not the only odd inhabitant of St. Mary's. One student has Oscars, "fish with phenomenal appetites." Their diet generally consists of worms and fish (especially moonies, a type of fish), whenever his owner can get them. The reason behind owning the Oscars is that he has had fish before and "was interested in the violent aspect of it." "Last year in Stanford, I saw a kid with a piranha." The fish's owner pointed out that the piranhas were very intelligent fish. "They'll eat out of your hands and if someone puts his hand in the tank, they'll swim up and rub against it."

The three Oscars are named Pig, Spot and Eric. Pig is named for his appetite, and Eric for a skit in Monty Python. The student got them when they were quite small. They're now three and one half inches and could grow up to 12 inches. Their owner described them "as probably eating themselves to death if they could." They often move things around in their tank and will rearrange the gravel.

The owner of the tarantula was not available for comment, but people on the floor described it as pretty tame and boring. Its diet consists of crickets, and its bite is not dangerous unless one is allergic to its venom.

St. Mary's residents seem to have some strange pets. While some people just spend their weekends studying, others prefer to see nature at work in violent ways.

Augustinian Exhibits Art

By KATHI IANNACONE

Brother William Bohmann O.S.A., better known as Brother Pat, will display a sample of his paintings in an exhibit at Falvey Memorial Library from Saturday, December 1 until Thursday, December 20. The display will be open to visitors from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. Any proceeds from the exhibit will benefit the Augustinian Foreign Missions in South America.

Brother Pat was born and raised in Cloppenburg, Germany and came to the United States in 1931. In 1935, he entered the Augustinian Order and came to Villanova in 1955. Brother Pat's interest in painting began in 1974 and by December of 1975 his first works were displayed.

Rev. Henry B. Syvinski O.S.A., a personal friend of Brother Pat's, offered to help and teach anyone who was interested in learning to paint. Brother Pat laughed at this idea, but he signed up to take the class hoping to have some fun. He never dreamed anything would ever come of his lessons, but soon realized that he had talent and he liked it. Brother Pat explained, "I enjoy it tremendously. Sometimes when I'm nervous, I begin to paint and before I realize it, the hours have passed by. It really calms me."

The subjects for his paintings are chosen from various campus settings and also from European cities which he has visited or admired. Some works to be displayed this weekend will include campus sites of the Rose Garden, which he tends, St. Rita's, the tennis courts, and also European castles and farms. The prices that Brother Pat has chosen for his paintings are "reasonable" because he wants the proceeds to go to the Augustinian missions. He feels that there is such a need in Peru and South America that anything he can send will help.

Brother Pat enjoys his hobbies of growing roses and painting. He stated, "It gives me so much pleasure that I hope others can enjoy them as much as I do."

Wiesel Speaks on Jewish Past

By WILLIAM TUCKER

"I am trying to say something that I know I will not say." These words, spoken by Elie Wiesel last Tuesday at Vasey Theatre, expressed his emotional involvement with Jewish history. Mr. Wiesel, a survivor of the Nazi concentration camp at Auschwitz, is now a renowned author and speaker. He talked of his personal pain and the pain of the Jewish people throughout history, relating everything to the Holocaust.

Mr. Wiesel was one of the originators of the term "Holocaust." He expressed regret at making it so popular, feeling that it is impossible to sum up in a word so much anguish and pain.

Mr. Wiesel traced the history of the Jews, a nation that constantly suffered. He raised the paradoxical point of the Jews being "God's chosen people," yet they have never held their Promised Land without struggle. More importantly, he spoke of Jewish history as a response to the suffering that they have endured. The Jewish contribution, he said, "has been to transform" an oppressive experience into one which brought the Jews closer to other people. Mr. Wiesel pointed out that the mission of the Jews is to "make the world more human." He stressed tolerance by all religions toward each other. Each person, he maintained, can obtain salvation through his or her own tradition.

Mr. Wiesel then went deeper into the meaning of Judaism. He spoke of the many contributions of the Hasidic sect, joking about his grandfather (a Hasidic rabbi), and what his reaction would be if he knew his grandson was speaking to a Christian community. Hasidism, he claimed, gave the Jewish their first sense of dignity.

Also, he claimed that in no other religion is friendship so emphasized as a "cardinal element of life."

Turning to the modern world, Mr. Wiesel spoke of the dispair of today's youth. The modern generation, he said, has been burdened with events that they never caused. Yet, he continued, youth will be held responsible to do something with the "ruins" their forefathers have left them. He cited such tragedies as the Holocaust, Cambodia, and the present Iranian situation as examples.

In concluding, Mr. Wiesel spoke of his own personal hope. "Indifference is the greatest sin," he claimed, saying that we all can give meaning to the world by what we do. He said everyone can be a Messiah by fighting for what we believe and being aware of our own significance.

Mr. Wiesel spoke for about forty-five minutes to a packed house. His intensity and power as a speaker awed the audience. Though he spoke simply, Wiesel left his listeners moved and with much food for thought.

Everyone can be a Messiah by fighting for what we believe and being aware of our own significance.

"It's Wednesday Night Live"

"Live from Villanova, it's Wednesday Night Live!" These words will echo through St. Mary's auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on December 5th, as Project Sunshine presents its version of the famed Saturday Night Live.

The show will benefit their second annual Sunshine Day which will be held on the last Saturday in April. This day is used to reach shut-ins, sick, elderly, and the physically and mentally incapacitated by providing entertainment, recreation, and individual attention given by volunteers.

"Wednesday Night Live" will feature such favorites as the Wild and Crazy Guys, the Nerds, and of course Jane Curtin, Dan Ackroyd, and Roseanne Roseannadanna in Week-end update. All of the skits will pertain to some aspect of life here at Villanova. To further enhance the show, special effects will be used to simulate an actual television taping. While striving for professionalism the cast does not intend to duplicate Saturday Night Live.

Interspersed between the skits, Connie Topper and Perry Hazeltine will sing and play guitars. Singer Beppy Wallace will also perform for the audience, and stand-up comic Wess Meyer of freshman orientation fame, is also involved in the production.

Director Santo D. Marabella and thirty-five students involved in Project Sunshine have been working on various committees to prepare the production. Tickets are available at the C.I.C. and in the Social Action Office (121 Tolentine) for a donation of $1.00.

PBT performing the Nutcracker.

A Night of Enchantment

by Annette Discenzi

One determining factor of a professional dance company is its ability to adapt while on tour. The well seasoned Pittsburgh Ballet Theatre did a fine job of this Tuesday and Wednesday evenings when they perfomed their version of Lev Ivanov's Nutcracker. With Ana Maria Castanon and Christian Zimmerman in the leading roles as Clara and The Nutcracker Prince, the PBT's version featured the traditional Tchaikovsky music under the artistic direction of Patrick Frantz.

Originally based on a fairy tale by E.T. Hoffman, the Nutcracker has grown into a spectacular holiday ballet enchanting both children and adults. PBT's skilled dancers more than adequately enhanced the magical story.

The ballet is the tale of a young girl, Clara, who receives a Christmas gift from a mysterious wizard, Herr Drossilmeyer, portrayed by Bruce Michaelson. The gift given to Clara is a nutcracker in the shape of a soldier. Clara is so attracted to the enchanted gift that she waits until very late on this holiday eve to retrieve the doll from under the Christmas tree. As she does so the Christmas tree, along with the other surroundings in the room grow very large. Clara is amazed to find that her nutcracker has been transformed into a handsome prince. Here the ballerina and danseur perform a beautiful pas de deux which would have been impressive on any stage.

Before the end of the first act the corps de ballet performed the dance of the snowflakes with a high degree of technical skill and professional ease. The lack of sufficient stage space and stage equipment ordinarily would have been most evident during a dance by the ensemble, but not so with PBT's corp. The corp performed extremely well together throughout the ballet.

The second act opens with the corps dancing among Clara and the Prince in the dance of the flowers. The enchantment continues as the two main dancers are presented with a variety of characters who perform in their honor. Among the most illustrious performers were the sensuous Arabian dancers, the merry Chinese, and the dynamic Russian.

The Arabians, Sharon Newton and John Paul Reaves, displayed some of PBT's most unique technical derivations of classical

MOVIES

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

Blake Edward's 10 is about George Webber, a 42-year-old songwriter undergoing male menopause who behaves erratically and childishly, and who develops a fixation on a beautiful young bride whom he chances to see at a stop light. After hunting for information about her, he suddenly flies to Mexico, where her parents vacation, and sees Jessica and her husband on their honeymoon. After he saves her husband's life (he falls asleep on a surfboard), she seduces him while her husband is in the hospital. When he asks her, "Why me?", she in effect says he is "a casual lay." She believes in open marriage, and he is just one of many to her. This greatly disappoints him, and he leaves her. Soon afterwards, he flys home and tries to renew his relationship with Samantha, a 38-year old woman whom he was dating before his trip to Mexico. At first, she is very cold to him, but soon they are reconciled and he is apparently overcoming his problems.

Actually, the plot is only half the story. It describes the underlying, serious subject of the film. However, the film captures your attention with slapstick comedy, sex and nudity, and scenes in which you attempt to understand George's bizarre behavior.

The film works on two levels — one of slapstick comedy; the other of a more sober nature. The humor is reminiscent of Blake Edward's Pink Panther films, and is executed very well. The long sequences which are primarily comedy are the best ones in the film. However, the film often shifts from serious scenes to comic ones with no apparent connection. The meaning of the noncomic scenes and their place in the whole is frequently unclear.

George Webber is the only character with a major, developed role. None of the others have a clearly defined place in the story, or a well defined personality. One sometimes wonders why they are there. Dudley Moore is excellent in the part of George. He makes a somewhat strange character seem believable. His acting and the comedy are the best points of the film. Its weakest point is the failure to fit the serious and comic moments together. For this reason, the film is choppy, and the ending is unbelievable. However, the comedy saves it.

Starting Over

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

Starting Over is a humorous, sympathetic portrayal of a recently divorced man, named Phil Potter (played by Burt Reynolds), his realtionship with a single nursery school teacher (Jill Clayburgh), and their attempts to build new lives after the breakup of longtime relationships. Marilyn had recently stopped seeing someone whom she had been dating for a long time, and Potter was having trouble breaking with his wife. On his first date since his marriage, the woman says, "welcome back, honey; we sure can use you." Meanwhile, an older couple who are friends of Marilyn's constantly bring men to their home for her to meet. In this way, she meets Potter. Both are hurt, frightened, and lonely. At first, they are unsure of each other, but soon after their meeting, they begin seeing each other. Things go well until Potter's relationship with his former wife interferes. After an anxiety attack in Bloomingdale's while shopping with Marilyn, she leaves him. He returns to his first wife and Marilyn begins dating a basketball player she meets through the older couple. Both are unhappy. Potter leaves his wife and resolves to find Marilyn. When he does, both break down and agree to marry.

The film shows us several facets of Potter's life; his relationship with his former wife, his re-entry into the dating scene, his membership in a discussion group for divorced men, and his teaching job at a junior college. All of these aspects contribute to the depiction of the difficulty of the transition from marriage to the single life.

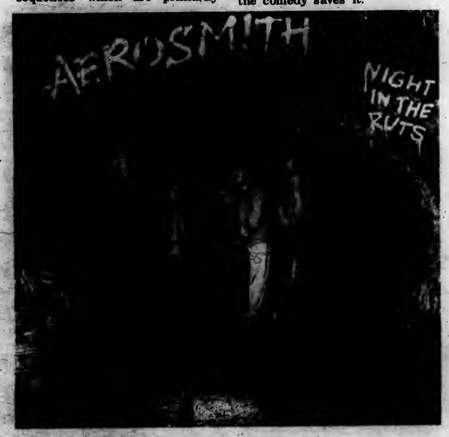
Starting Over is a warm, humorous, compassionate portrayal of a very human situation, and therefore has the potential to be very good. However, although it is rarely boring, the movie is not absorbing enough to affect you very much. Its central topic is not conveyed strongly or coherently enough to make a firm, clear impression on the audience.

New In Sound

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

Aerosmith has risen to the challenge of the new Led Zep album tremendously. The Zep is at the forefront of progressive Heavy Metal and gets into trouble when they place the emphasis on progressive rather than Heavy Metal rock. There are no such frills on Night in the Ruts. The sound is distinctly Aerosmith. Tight, bouncy and nasty. Churn and Burn stripped down to the steel underpinnings for the boys in the band who like their meat raw.

The new album has inspired performances from Brad Whitford on Rhythm Guitar and Joey Kramer on Drums. Whitford's playing brings to mind a funky Joe Strummer of the Clash: "Bone to Bone" churns and slides over itself with an intensity similar to that of the Blue Oyster Cult, and "Chiquita" opens with an erratic riff of chops and distortion. Aerosmith seems to have incorporated some of the Zeppelin's regalness by mining Kramer's drums to a peerless level — He kicks "No Surprises" to a frenzied climax and Tyler's harp solos on "Three Mile Smile" with a bass drum flurry that is criminally brutal.



"Remember (Walking in the Sand)" has the potential to be an FM hit. The backing vocals bring to mind Van Halen, but it is Tyler's powerful voice that makes them work. The hand-clapping chorus is catchy, and Steve even throws in an inspirational verse: "Whatever happened to "The night I gave it to you?" Who says he doesn't have a heart?

"Cheese Cake" has a guitar introduction similar to "In My Time of Dying" before it slithers into a snakey blues with Tyler's voice at its captivating best on the chorus. "Three Mile Smile" starts off in the feel of the Zep's "The Crunge", and in the break before the guitar solos the chords bounce all over the place. Perry's first solo sounds like Keith Richards in places and what the second solo loses in distinctness it gains in acceleration.

The best cut is "Reefer Headed Woman", which gets my vote as THE blues tune of 1979. Tyler's voice and mouth harp, the rhythm section of Tom Hamilton and Kramer, and the guitar attack of Whitford and Perry are all as dirtily coherent as possible. Bands like Supertramp had better watch out, 'cos the dinosaurs are hungry and ready to rumble.

Sound Waves

By MICHAEL BRODE

Well, breakin' up may be hard to do for some people but for Joe Perry, who recently bolted from Aerosmith, the decision was basically a simple one. "I'm a rock and roll musician and I always enjoyed playin' clubs the most," said Perry. "Aerosmith had become such a big, cumbersome project . . . it was just so stifling. It wasn't movin' into the Eighties. I got disillusioned playin' the big halls. I just don't like it — and I don't need it anymore." Perry, who provided the ideal combination of blistering guitar and "bad-boy" stage persona to complement the wild antics of vocalist Steven Tyler, will be difficult to replace in a band whose chemistry was largely characterized by this type of Jagger-Richard stage interaction . . . Worthwhile Tower Theater shows: Tonight — The latest version of the legendary Santana, featuring a new vocalist and a polished repertoire of new and old material. Tomorrow night — The Police, creative new band from England who are making waves in this country with their unique blend of rock and reggae . . . Fine new single from Toto's "Hydra" album is entitled "All Us Boys." The song is quite a bit more fresh than the band's last single, "Hold The Line" . . . For you Doors fans, a band calling themselves Crystal Ship are preparing a tour of the East Coast with an act intended to be a replica of Jim Morrison and friends in concert. For the sake of the promoters, we hope the performance will not be an exact reproduction. Then again, such a copy could prove to be very interesting . . . Speaking of interesting, Blondie's Debbie Harry sported only heels and a short nightgown at a recent concert in Central Park . . . "Highway To Hell," the latest from Australia's AC/DC, is obviously nothing fancy but the album's raw, primitive sound presents modern-day hard rock in an exciting, energetic fashion . . . Cheap Trick has been booked onto the bill of an upcoming mega-concert in Nuremberg. Also scheduled are Jeff Beck, Stanley Clarke and The Who. Not a bad show . . . And for those of you who feel like buying an album which you know you must have for your collection but you're not sure which it is: how about "Chronicle," a greatest hits double-album from the legendary Credence Clearwater Revival. The package includes the band's finest songs and they sound better now than ever.

In Concert

the Eagles

By AMY MacLACHLAN

The date is Monday, November 19. The place is the Spectrum, section T, row 1. The city is Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Appearing live, The Eagles and Blue Steel in Concert. We find our way to our seats, the lights dim, and bang, Blue Steel fires up the stage. Stressing a lot of audience participation, the band rips through numbers like the title track from their new album "No More Lonely Nights," and other real old time "rock-n-roll" tunes. Unfortunately, originality is extremely hard to come by these days and their "Twist 'em Up, and Burn 'em Down" bears a little too much similiarity to Little Feat's "Don't Bogart That Joint" . . . Poor Lowell . . . the band also seems to borrow some basics from Bob Seger (but why not borrow from the best?). Over all Blue Steel put on a good show, but who would ever want to play back-up to possibly one of the world's best live performing groups — The Eagles.

After about the longest, tensest, thirty minutes in a fan's life, the lights dim again, the crowd goes absolutely wild, and the band, without introduction begins to play. At first, it is hard to discern which song it is above the manic screams of over 20-thousand fans, but any real Eagles addict knows the song they always begin with — "Hotel California." This is the first taste, the factor that turns Eagles listeners into worshippers. This band cannot be admired to its full potential until it is heard in its best form-live. Joe Walsh and Don Felder play guitar solos with Don Henley on percussion and vocals. What a beginning!

Lights dim, the whole theater is black, slowly a flicker of thousands of lights from the audience participating in their own spectable, a single spotlight basks the narrow circle of black space on which Glen Frey sits with guitar, first a slow strumming, then another spotlight beams on Timothy B. Schmit, the groups newest member, bent over the microphone echoing lonely crys of harmonica into the barren blackness of the theater. The song is "Doolin-Dalton," followed directly by its reprise and then the lights dim again. The crowd goes wild in anticipation, the band waits for the ultimate moment. Another lazer of light on Glen . . . "The queen of diamonds let you down, she was just an empty fable . . . she stole your dreams and paid you with regret, Desperado."

Other highlights include the incredible Joe Walsh going wild in such showstopping, thundering, numbers like "Rocky Mountain Way," with political inferences such as, "Bases are loaded and Khomeini's at bat," "Turn To Stone," and "Life's Been Good," which was said to be Joe's Presidential campaign speech.

Timothy B. Schmit, an ex-Poco member, was featured in a slow, sweet, number called "I can't tell you why" from their new album. Special guest Joe Vitale, who co-wrote "Pretty Maids," with Joe Walsh, played piping hot flute accompaniment to "Turn to Stone."

After returning for their third encore the band, exhausted, link arms on center stage and bow. That's all. Joe Walsh seems to make desperate gestures towards the light crews, obviously too exhausted to do a fourth encore.

and then suddenly they are gone. The crowd goes crazy, hoping that maybe they might come on again, but knowing that it is impossible. Slowly the lights come on and it is time to leave. A final gaze across the departing crowd revealed dazed but still smiling faces. It is over but we can still hear the voice of Glen Frey saying, "We love you Philadelphia, and don't worry, we'll be back."

Starship Invades Tower

By SUE BREHM

The new JEFFERSON STARSHIP soared into Philadelphia last Saturday to rock the Tower Theater and to prove that they're far from a fading, has-been band.

The audience accepted them enthusiastically when they opened with "Ride the Tiger" an all-time favorite, featuring the harmonious vocals they're famous for. They offered a variety of songs such as their own version of the classic "Somebody to Love," but their concentration was geared towards their newer material selected from their latest and hottest album, Freedom at Point Zero. Included in the selections was the hit single "Jane," showing their ability to incorporate a rhythmically rocking sound while adding contrasting interplay between the vocals. They want to divert the general public away from their already established image of doing quieter songs, the ballads, the songs that get a lot of airplay. In reality the band's roots are in rock and roll and their live concerts gain them this recognition.

I was fortunate enough to speak with newly acquired powerhouse drummer/percussionist Anysley Dunbar who is thoroughly pleased with his decision to leave JOURNEY in favor of the STARSHIP. It allows him the freedom to execute his heavy uptempo style and to play songs that support the individual musicians. Another new member is lead vocalist Mickey Thomas, formerly fronting Elvin Bishop's band. His vocals are powerfully high-pitched and fluidly controlled while also possessing an ability to sing emotionally. He also demonstrates an energetically but classy stage presence.

Another selection they performed sensationally was a song appropriately titled "Awakening," written by bassist/key-boardist/vocalist Pete Sears, starting out melodically slow then building into an amazingly tight jam. The other members of the band include the original rhythm guitarist/vocalist Paul Kantner and David Freiberg who displays his talents on bass/keyboards/and vocals. The sixth member is lead guitarist/rhythm guitarist Craig Chaquico who adds carefully chosen, attention-grasping leads.

Dunbar shares the same enthusiasm with the rest of JEFFERSON STARSHIP to rock out more and with his reputable influence they certainly are destined for this change. He is confident that the STARSHIP'S future is headed in a very positive direction and feels the personnel now involved in the perfect chemistry — a natural development. He plans to write lyrically and musically on their next album which suggests to me that it will really be cookin'.

It was very impressed with the energy projected from the STARSHIP in concert and feel that the contributions of the new members enable them the opportunity to gain a new direction in their sound — a change for the better!

Faustus at Vasey

By L.W. IRWIN

Vasey Theater's lively and ambitious production of Christopher Marlowe's Doctor Faustus is a rare opportunity to see a play by perhaps the greatest Elizabethan playwright before Shakespeare. Directed by James J. Christy, Doctor Faustus is replete with devils and antics that recall the time, as one contemporary of Marlowe put it, "when the olde Theater crackt and frighted the audience."

Marlowe, "the Muses' darling" and the student who attended Cambridge on a divinity scholarship, was accused by other contemporaries of being an atheist, a blasphemer, a homosexual, and a secret agent. The latter, at least, is probably true. He died at the age of twenty-nine in a tavern brawl, after drinking for eight hours, and ended a notorious career.

Doctor Faustus (1592?), which was immensely popular in its time, is drawn from the legends of a man who sells his soul to the devil for knowledge. In Marlowe's treatment the play has evoked diverse interpretations, some critics seeing it as a more or less orthodox statement about the dangers of ambition and forbidden knowledge and others regarding it as an example of the disintegration of mediaeval faith caused by Renaissance learning. Despite the murkiness of the play, one thing is clear: Faustus, a graduate of the University of Wittenberg, which Dr. Martin Luther and Hamlet also attended, is unable to believe in the possibility of his own salvation yet cannot shake off remorse. After signing a pact with the devil and abandoning heaven, Faustus enters a life of insignificant events and sensual pleasures, designed to pass the time until his death and to show how little he gets in return for his soul. As one critic has said, ". . . Faustus is more impressive as an Atheist than as an Epicurean." The theme of a life wasted on parlor tricks and crude jokes (e.g., disrupting the pope's dinner, tricking a used-horse dealer) is parodied by other comic scenes, not all of them written by Marlowe, in the subplot.

By having Faustus on stage throughout the first half of the play, Dr. Christy has smoothed the relation between the parody scenes and the main plot. Faustus' impassive presence in these scenes also helps to suggest that the entire play is a kind of interior monologue in the hero's mind, a kind of Renaissance play-within-a-play. The starkness of the stage (a projected platform), the doubling of roles, and the fluidity of the action add to the impression of subjectivity, which is confirmed in the "vision" of Helen of Troy as supreme beauty. The second half of the production is a triumph of directing.

James Schlatter as Faustus brings his former experience at the Tyrone Guthrie Theater to the role and succeeds in the by no means easy task of making Marlowe's language intelligible to a modern audience. I cannot agree, however, that his Faustus is a more impressive Atheist than Epicurean. Mr. Schlatter's portrayal of Faustus as pleasure-seeker is convincing, but only the last, climactic scenes of the production convey the anguish of Faustus' despair. Mr. Schlatter's bitter laugh after the second lente in "O lente, lente, currite, noctis equi!" will be appreciated by all who understand the irony. Part of the problem in presenting Faustus as seeker of knowledge is caused by a modern costuming that suggests he is more an absent-minded, pedantic bore than a majestic figure.

Joseph Orazi portrays Mephistophilis with a combination of cynicism and wistfulness, promising to give Faustus more than he has "wit to ask." Daniel Baker, as Chorus and the servant Wagner, is a disheveled sorcerer's apprentice. The rest of the cast function truly as an ensemble and give yeoman's service in the demanding staging, but special mention must be made of Jeffrey Musmanno, who as pope carries away the scene. Costumes, by Susan Trimble, are especially delightful in the delicious dance of the Seven Deadly Sins and in the scenes of the pope's dinner, with the human altar-table, and the court of Anholt.

The production in the spirit of Renaissance drama, provides something for everyone — comedy for the groundlings and for the galleries the teasing suspicion that if Faustus' hell is subjective, a projection of his mind, so too may be his heaven. The play runs through 1 December.

Ensemble Tour

This Christmas break will find forty members of the Villanova wind and jazz ensembles together for their first winter tour. The thirty-nine students and their conductor Mr. John Dunphy, will be meeting the last week of Christmas vacation to begin their series of concerts on Wednesday, January 9.

Starting with a performance by the pep band at the V.U.-Massachusetts basketball game in the Fieldhouse on Wednesday, January 9 the wind and jazz ensembles will then prepare for a concert series at local area high schools on Thursday and Friday of that week. On Saturday, January 12 the band will travel to Morgantown, West Virginia to cheer on the basketball team for the V.U.-West Virginia Eastern 8 basketball game.

Sunday, January 13, will be a day of travel as they journey by bus to Chicago, Illinois, where they have a number of performances scheduled for the wind and jazz ensembles on Monday and Tuesday of that week.

Tuesday, January 15 marks the last day of the tour as the band travels to South Bend, Indiana for the V.U.-Notre Dame basketball game that evening at which the pep band will play as our team faces the Fighting Irish.

The members of the wind and jazz ensembles are anxiously awaiting their week-long concert tour and hoping that this winter tour will become an annual event. The fact that the band is able to make such a tour is indicative of the dedication and talent of the members and their conductor. The band practices Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings in St. Mary's Auditorium.

ballet. Michael Abbit, Jeanette Betzald, and Cathy Rumpler portrayed the Oriental trio, an amusing movement characterized by oriental costumes and quick-stepping choreography. Perhaps the most gala performer was Juan Guarteaux, who captured the audience as the high jumping Russian. Guarteaux's role required much technical skill and agility, which he executed excellently.

The ballet closes with Clara and the Prince dancing a pas de deux as the performers join them on stage.

The Nutcracker has been performed by many companies dancing their own variations. PBT chose the variations to comply with the stage and lighting available.

national tribunal can be established."

Although President Carter has authorized military equipment to move toward the Persian Gulf area, Malik assesses Iran's military as "tougher than most people think." "If the U.S. attacked Iran it will not be a picnic because the Iranian armed forces are strong and the Americans will meet a tough resistance."

Carter, attacked in the past for not showing strong leadership qualities, has handled the situation "remarkably well," commented Malik, "I admire him greatly." But Henry Kissinger, instrumental in forcing the administration to keep the Shah, "has done a great disservice to the country and he's behaving like a politician not like a statesman," stated Carter.

In analyzing the situation Malik stresses the need for looking at it with the mind of a political realist. "When people are emotionally charged they make irrational statements they really don't mean. International politics," stated Malik, "is like a chess game, the participants must watch the moves closely and cautiously. Using power with prudence is the key."

The United States, a major world power, has shown great caution in using its power during this situation of dealing with a country carried by religious fanaticism, mobe, anarchy, and a government of considerable question who wields power as arbitrarily as the Shah when he ruled.

Intramural Football Playoffs

DTD Overcomes Force

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Runningback Bob Laverti's touchdown run midway through the first half was the only score DTD needed Wednesday afternoon in defeating previously unbeaten The Force. The 6-0 semifinal round victory for DTD now advances them to the championship game versus rival fraternity Sig Ep.

Although Laverti's extra point run failed, his two interceptions and the overall stringent defense of the number one ranked frat team proved superior to The Force's offense. "The defense played great and the offense controlled the ball," said teammate Phil Regan, who threw a key block on the touchdown run.

DTD scored a second touchdown later in the first half but the play was called back due to a holding penalty. Other than that, there were no key penalties, noted referees Pete Daley and Scott Morgan.

The second half was similar to the first in that both teams moved the ball on considerably long drives but the defenses of both teams forced punting situations. DTD had another chance to score early in the last half after achieving three consecutive first downs, but after an incomplete pass from quarterback Ed Rohrbacker to Bill Craig in the endzone Rohrbacker threw an interception on the following play.

According to Intrmural Department Vice-President Dino Valente, the championship game will be held Tuesday at 3:45 on Austin Field. In a regular season clash earlier in the year, DTD defeated SPE 19-2.

Joint Effort's Rally Fails

By ROBERT L.P. WALSH

The opening game of the intramural football semi-finals pitted Sigma Phi Epsilon against Joint Effort on Tuesday at Austin Field. Sig Ep used a balanced offense and a tenacious defense to overcome a furious second half rally by Joint Effort and gain a berth in the championship. The tight contest was won by the score 14-13 and the outcome was not decided until the final seconds.

Sigma Phi Epsilon dominated the entire first half and used this period to score all of their points. Jim Cronin, Sig Ep's quarterback marched his team to scores on their first two possessions with his sharp passing attack. Running back Jack Jarret scored one touchdown as did Joe D'Orazio, who collected both extra points.

Joint Effort began the second half determined to come back and displayed vast improvement in their play. On their second possession Joe Leone grabbed a short pass from quarterback George Hugo and ran it in for a touchdown. Joint Effort missed the extra point and this proved to be critical. Pete Daley scored after Sig Ep gave up the ball and the extra point made it 14-13.

With 1:15 left to play, Daley picked off a Sig Ep pitchout giving Joint Effort a chance to win. In a whirlwind finish Joe D'Orazio intercepted a pass in the end zone enabling Sig Ep to run out the clock and secure the win.

Sig Ep has improved steadily through the playoffs and they hope to peak in the championship game. "If we play up to our potential, I think we should win," commented Coach Joe Spata.

Maintaining Greek Tradition

By BETH WHITE

Although the intramural league football teams are noted for their tradition and fighting spirit, "there is nothing to compare to the Greek tradition and the spirit and enthusiasm among the fraternity football teams," says Chris Connor, president of Delta Tau Delta. DTD's football team was the fraternity champs in 1979, improving from their last year's record of 5-3. The Delt's have a playoff tradition of their own, winning the title for seven years in a row, only to be beaten out last year by DPE. This year, however, they beat DPE during regular season play. Ray Tierney, a spokesman for the team, positively states: "Whoever we play, we beat!"

The Delts wanted to play another fraternity for the intramural championship to uphold the Greek tradition at Villanova. "Although there were only four fraternity teams entered in the intramural football league," continues Tierney, "two out of the top four are fraternities." Since then, however, the other frat team, Sigma Phi Epsilon, defeated their opponent Joint Effort 14-13, and now the battle for the intramural football champion is among two fraternity teams.

Marc Binder, a senior on SPE's team, stated that "I'd like to see an all fraternity team final. The frat teams have been underrated." Binder is one of four seniors on the SPE team who have played all four years in intramurals.

The team has been led to their position of prominence by other four-year vets Phil Brochu (president of SPE), John (Gabby) Garbarino and Dennis (Greek) Markopoulis. Other key figures on the gridiron for Sig Ep has been the nucleus of their offense: quarterback Jim Cronin and halfback Jack Jerrett. Cronin attributes his success to "the excellent protection I get from the offensive line." Jerrett, who also plays on the defensive squad, agrees that Cronin's "accurate passing gives us the edge, but we can set up our aerial attack with a good ground game." "This way," continues Jerrett, "we can execute well by mixing up the plays." Fullback Danny DiPoalo emphasizes the team unity. "We play well together because we all know each other so well," says the former varsity football athlete. He adds, "We win because we have a strong offense and defense, too."

Although Sig Ep has a good defensive line, their stronghold is in their defensive secondary. The combination of Jerrett at cornerback, DiPoalo at middle linebacker and Joe D'Orazio and Mickey Brennan as defensive backs diminishes the passing threat of SPE's opponents. D'Orazio, who caught three passes (two for extra point conversions and one interception) in Sig Ep's playoff against Joint Effort, feels that "there has been a 100% improvement in the team since the beginning of the season."

DTD credits their championship opponents, SPE, with enormous enthusiasm and fan support, but according to DTD President Connor, "We (DTD) are quicker, smarter, and more organized."

The Delts, who scored an average of twenty points-per-game and allowed only 12 points against them all season, hope to challenge Sig Ep's aerial offense with captain and middle linebacker Sam Aloi, who has snagged three interceptions so far. "The key to our defense is our line," explains Connor, "which is anchored by (Captain) Steve Kirk."

The Delts have a strong field of receivers for quarterback Ed Rohrbacker as well, especially tight end Bill Craig and ground-gainers Bob LeVerte and Phil Regan.

The battle for the intramural championship should prove to be a tough one. Austin Field will be the battleground and kickoff is at 2:00, Sunday, December 2.

Impressive Year For Goalie

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Although the Villanova soccer team didn't clinch a playoff spot this year, they did finish the season at 8-7-1, which was much improved from last year's unimpressive 5-11-1 record. Much credit for the turn around season goes to freshman goalie Pete Jirak of West Essex High School, New Jersey. Along with sophomore Bill Schamp, who posted a 4-3 record, the team drew very close to a playoff berth.

In 12 appearances, Jirak compiled a 4-4-1 record, allowed 13 goals, made 90 saves and boasted a 1.36 goals per game average. At one time in the season Jirak was ranked second among all goalies in the Philadelphia Soccer Seven. In all his years of playing soccer, this was only Jirak's second year in the nets. Last year at West Essex, his initial season as goalie, Jirak led the team to a 12-7-5 mark and allowed 22 goals while posting a .92 goals per game average. Jirak was then named to five all-star teams, including the first teams of All-Essex County and All-Area.

Commenting on the results of the past season, Jirak said, "The season started out slow and we didn't look too impressive in the first four games, but then we realized we had the potential to do something, and we did." The freshman standout was referring to the six-game unbeaten streak later put together by the booters. Jirak pointed out that he hopes next year the athletic department realizes that the soccer team is an asset to the school, and "provide us with better facilities." Looking toward the 1980 season, Jirak said defensive talent is needed, due to graduation losses, but the season "should be Villanova soccer's greatest ever."

Ex-Gridders Power The Force

By JERRY VENTRESCA

One of the four teams that has survived the 1979 intramural football regular season and is in the semifinal round of the playoffs is The Force. Their undefeated record in the regular season was supplemented by an overtime victory (13-12) over a surprisingly tough LKD squad and a second round (40-6) romp over Athlete's Foot.

According to defensive tackle/offensive guard Joe Passaro, "LKD was really up for the game and were the only team that gave us trouble. However we really did well, both offensively and defensively versus Athlete's Foot." Passaro, along with many other players on The Force, is an ex-varsity football player here at V.U. Co-captain Joe Groglio, another ex-gridder, summarized The Force as "a cross-section of the campus . . . exceptional athletes just out for fun."

Groglio, an offensive guard and linebacker, is just one of the majority of The Force that plays both ways. Tony Pasquale serves as a wide receiver and safety, while Tom Jones and John Dougherty play one way at the safety position. Both co-captains Joe Ruth and Chip Mastey are the halfbacks and Ruth doubles as a cornerback. Tom Sharkey, an ex-Wildcat quarterback, fulfills that position on The Force.

On the line, both Frank Coco and Bill Roccio play offensive tackle and middleguard. Phil Caruso and Dennis Grant serve as tackles both ways and Dave Tortarella does the snapping from center. Linebackers fulfilling their responsibilities are Jeff Smith, Jim Abbermitas and Terry Byrne. Abbermitas also doubles as a fullback and Byrne, another ex-Wildcat gridder, doubles as a tight end.

Statistically, The Force has allowed, on the average, less than one touchdown per game and scored, on the average, at least two touchdowns per game.

Sims-Favorite

Oklahoma running back Billy Sims is favored to win the 1979 Heisman Trophy, according to a poll of college students conducted by Sports Bulletin, the nation's only feature magazine devoted to intercollegiate sports and sponsored by the Miller Brewing Company.

Sims, the 1978 Heisman winner, was the choice of 35 percent of readers responding to the first Miller Student Sports Poll, while Southern California's Charles White got 28 percent.

Juniors Create Joint Effort

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Among the many impressive intramural football teams in this year's playoffs, one team — Joint Effort — should not be left unmentioned. Joint Effort, comprised of 14 juniors and one freshman, compiled a 6-2 regular season record in a highly-talented Division B. Effort extended their winning ways into the playoffs with a first round upset of the seventh ranked Gators 18-0 and a second round upset of first ranked Wally's Gators 7-0. Joint Effort entered the playoffs ranked tenth among 16 teams.

Joint Effort's offense is led by quarterback George Hugo and running backs 5'2" Captain Joe Leone and Joe Bunk, who doubles as a defensive outside linebacker. The offensive line consists of guards Rick Ventresca (also a defensive tackle) and Scott Kingston (who doubles as a defensive linebacker), center Frank Varallo (who is also the starting middle guard), tackle John Gerngross (the non-junior on the squad) and tight end Pete Daley. Daley, also a middle linebacker, has 10 interceptions, two of which he ranback for touchdowns.

Wide reciever Scott Morgan also teams up with Joe Salimeao and Dave Myers as the defensive backs. Morgan has six interceptions while Myers had two pickoffs in the victory over Wally's Gators. Both Mark Potle and Sean O'Donoghue are backups at this position. Meanwhile, Jon DeStefano completes the defensive line roster while Tom Villano serves as backup middle guard. In 10 games this season, Joint Effort has allowed only 34 points scored upon them.

Cats Fall Below Expectations

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

Now that the 1979 football season has drawn to a close for Wildcat fans and all that remains are those teams going to assorted bowl games from California to New Jersey, it would be a good chance to look at just what happened over the last few months.

Early in the football season, even before any games were played, critics made their predictions on the coming year. A new wrinkle in the choices came when Villanova gained high review from the experts. Optimism circulated in Wildcat Country because a mixture of veterans and talent seemed to be the combination for a good year. The one problem which may have been forgotten was that confidence doesn't win football games, it only helps.

With the addition of the transfer speedster, Willie Syndor, Coach Bedesem believed he had the one factor which could have set his offense on its feet, a deep threat. As was the case, Syndor, freshman Tim Robinson and the offense did perform well. Another pleasant surprise was fullback Don Ziesel, who complemented the passing game by gaining important yardage. With the balanced offense and a defense which has played together over the last couple of years, the next step was to put both to work.

The Cats opened the season at Maryland and looked to be on their way to proving the experts correct. But, a sin which went on to haunt the Cats during the season occurred, the inability to kill the clock late in the game. The result was a heartbreaking loss, but from it, the prospect of being able to beat the good teams in the east was realized. The Cats rebounded the following week with a solid win over the University of Massachusetts and seemed to be back on the winning track. But during the next four weeks, the team came up far from smelling like roses and could only boast a pathetic but hopeful 1-5 record.

Losing to fifteen point underdog Boston College and Cincinnati on the road, as well as fourth period defeats to Division II powers Youngstown State and Delaware sent the coaching staff back to the drawing board to try to determine what was going wrong. Except for the B.C. game, which was a total disaster, the team performed well both defensively and offensively. There seemed to be one intangible aspect which would put the Main Liners over the hump and back into the winning groove.

On a beautiful, spring-like afternoon at the end of October, the Cats took the field against Holy Cross for the Homecoming Game. A solid performance led to a Wildcat victory with outstanding plays from Bernie Hober on defense and Pat O'Brien on offense. The confidence that they were a good ballclub seemed to appear and carried over the next few weeks in the season. A four game losing streak was countered by a four game winning stint. Probably the sweetest victory came on the next to last game of the year. Playing neighboring rival Rutgers away, is always a difficult chore. The Cats, although heavy underdogs, performed the impossible and totally dominated play to take home a 32-17 win.

Consistency is often hard to achieve in anything you do. This year's football team was no exception. The Cats went from the pits at 1-5 to the heights of the season after defeating Rutgers and had a chance at finishing the season above .500. The Temple Owls came into Wildcat Stadium at 8-2 and were headed for the Garden State Bowl. The record, the bowl bid and everything else was put aside because this game meant so much to both teams.

The final log on the 1979 Wildcats will always be 5-6. With a few bounces in the right direction the team quite possibly could have been at least 8-3. But, you can always say maybe on statistics. In the case of the team's pride though, they never said maybe. That's the real sign of a winning team.

The Wildcats came out on top of a battle against Rutgers.

Owls Overpower Cats

By JERRY VENTRESCA

The Wildcats suffered their worst defeat of the season Saturday to a bowl-bound Temple University squad at Villanova Stadium, 42-10. A crowd of 11,585, including numerous Owl supporters, brought the average attendand for the 1979 season to 9,818 — second to the 1977 attendance average in the last six years. Sherman Myers' seventh touchdown of the season with 7:54 gone in the first quarter was the only score of that quarter and gave Temple a lead they never lost.

Villanova outscored Temple in the first 5:28 of the second quarter 10-7 but later fell victim to four consecutive Owl touchdown passes. With 1:32 gone in the second quarter, Chuck Bushbeck sent his tenth field goal of the year between the uprights and put the Cats on the board, 7-3. Less than two minutes later, Owl halfback Kevin Duckett scored his seventh touchdown of the year. Shawn Passman's six-yard run, followed by Bushbeck's point after, completed Villanova's scoring and drew the Cats within 14-10. Passman's touchdown was his third of the season and Bushbeck's PAT was his 23rd of 25 attempts.

Temple's placekicker Ron Fiorvanti broke a team scoring record following the Owls third touchdown, also in the second quarter. Fiorvanti's point after touchdown was his 45th of the season, surpassing Don Bitterlich's 1974 mark of 44.

Temple's last touchdown of the first half came with 2:40 left when Duckett took a pitchout from quarterback Brian Broomell in a third and five situation at Villanova's 24 yard line and then threw to Broomell, who had run around the left end. The Owls completed the afternoon's scoring with two Broomell to Gerald Lucear touchdown passes in the fourth quarter and finished their regular season at 9-2 in looking ahead to the Garden State Bowl versus California.

Harriers Seventh

By RAY ENGLER

Villanova's Cross Country team wound up its season Monday, November 19, with a solid seventh place finish in the NCAA National Championships, which were held at Lehigh University.

The individual champion was Henry Rono, from Washington Street, who won for the third time, and became only the third runner to do this in NCAA history, Rono beat the existing course record of 30:05.3 set the week before by Villanova's Sydney Maree Rono, finished with an extraordinary time of 28:19.5, nosing out Alberto Salazar of the University of Oregon by eight seconds. Up to the four mile mark, it was a two man race between Rono and Salazar, but about then Rono put on a tremendous burst of speed, shot by Salazar and ruined the Oregon runner's chance to win back-to-back titles, as he was the defending Champion. Salazar finished in a rather noteworthy time of 28:27.6 for the 10,000 meter Lehigh University course.

Villanova's first finisher was Maree. The junior from South Africa finished seventh with a personal best time of 29:16.1. This finish is exceptional considering the fact that Maree is usually a miler and that he put many of the country's great 10,000 meter men to shame. The second Wildcat finisher (and 28th overall) was the junior from Kenya, Amos Korir. Korir forced to drop out of the Regional race November 10 because of a bad back, showed that he was fully recovered by managing to set a personal best time on the course of 29:52.0. His previous best had come in the Paul Short Memorial run (alias the Lehigh Invitational) on October 6, when he ran at a 30:39.0 clip.

The third blue-and-white harrier to cross the line was senior Canadien Dean Childs, who gutted out a 93rd place finish in 30:54.2. Right behind Childs, in 94th place, was senior Don Paige who ran 30:55.7. Rounding out the Villanova scorers was sophomore John Hunter from Ireland, who finished 121st in 31:12.8.

In a related story, Kevin Dillon ran in the Philadelphia Marathon on Sunday, November 25 and finished second. "I wasn't even supposed to finish this race . . . I was just supposed to go out and run with a freind," said Dillon.

Cats End Season At 5-6

Coach Dick Bedesem summed up the game saying, "We were physically overmatched. We were embarrassed and that's all I have to say." Bedesem pointed out that although he doesn't want to blame the loss to anyone, he doesn't "know how come so many penalties were called against us." The Cats were penalized seven times for 100 yards. "That takes away your momentum," said Bedesem.

When asked about his future at Villanova, Bedesem remarked, "This is my last (fifth) year (of the contract) and I honestly don't know when it (renewal) will be discussed, but I expect to be back." As is his style, Bedesem credited his coaching staff with doing a good job "with what we have to work with," in relation to the 1979 season.

Powerlifters Victorious

By JERRY VENTRESCA

Coach Joseph Slabinski's powerlifting team captured first place in a tri-meet on November 17, versus Temple University and the United States Naval Academy.

Before a noisy and supportive audience at the Fieldhouse, the Cats extended their winning streak to 46 meets. Although the Cats lost earlier this season to Temple in a meet based on the weight classes, the string of 46 meets are co-efficient meets, which are based on the lifter's body weight multiplied by a standard mathematical number "which evens everyone out," said co-captain Nick Stagliano.

Villanova's top performance came from sophomore co-captain Vince Sferra, who also placed first among all the lifters from the three schools. Sferra squatted 475 pounds, bench pressed 290 and deadlifted 510. Freshman powerhouse Dan Capece placed second among the Cats and fourth overall. Capece's 325 pounds in the squat category was his personal highest. Junior Brian McKenna finished third among the V.U. powerlifters with a total of 1250 pounds. Villanova's fourth finisher, Joe Jocono, achieved exceptionally good lifts in the bench category (410) pounds and squat category

Athletic Proposal Debated by Senate

By BILL CLARK

On Friday, November 30, the University Senate convened for a meeting which was dominated by a discussion of the report on athletics given by Trustee Thomas Labrecque at their last meeting on November 12.

Commerce and Finance Senator Henry Amorosa made a motion that the Senate should approve Labrecque's recommendations about athletics. Almost immediately, Dr. Cleary, Vice-president for academic affairs, stated that he would not support the motion.

"Academic needs are more to the heart of the matter if Villanova is to remain a University," stated Cleary. After this, SGA President P.J. Winterhalter also said that he would not support the motion at this particular time.

Rather than disapprove of the recommendations, Dr. Cleary proposed two other motions which would, in effect, delay the Senate's decision on the matter.

The first motion recommended to Father Driscoll and the Board of Trustees "that the Senate be given an opportunity to present to the Board its reviewed institutional priorities and that the Board delay any decision on the recommendations contained in the Labrecque Report" until the Board received the Senate's report, which would be sent to the President before April 1 of next year.

The second motion directed the Senate's University Planning and Priorities Committee to review the existing institutional priorities.

Cleary explained that when voting on the Report, the Board of Trustees would be using the University priorities set by the Senate back in 1973. In these priorities, a Student Center was listed as the number one priority followed by that of an athletic facility. Dr. Cleary wanted the Senate to re-examine that position before voting on the report.

Senate Chairman Dr. Armenti expressed concern that this move would be interpreted as dodging the issue by not giving an opinion. He also said that the Board would be receiving the full report in two weeks and would probably vote upon it at that time, and if the Senate did not give an opinion now, it could be missing its chance to respond on the issue.

Fr. Burnell pointed out, however, that the Senate did not receive the actual Labrecque report, and could not be expected to vote on something which was incomplete. The Senate had no idea on how the project would be funded, which also worried Dr. Cleary. He said that when funding

Proposed Major Faces Trustees

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

The University Board of Trustees will meet next week to consider establishing a liberal arts communications major.

If the Board approves the communications proposal, the present 24-credit hour concentration in that field of study would be expanded to a 30-hour major requirement.

Warren O. Richardson, director of the communications-arts concentration, believes that in the event a communications major is adopted, it might be activated at an early date. "Should the proposal be accepted, I would hope it would go into effect immediately, in time for the spring semester," he said.

Setting up such a major in the upcoming semester would enable those seniors already in the present communications concentration to possibly graduate with a bachelor of arts degree in communications.

Richardson noted that in communications "our approach is within a liberal arts setting, not simply communications. The goal of communications is to train a person to be conversant in all media areas, while qualified to enter into other fields of employment."

Other topics expected to be on the Board's agenda are presentation of the University Senate's recently-approved report on campus athletics and an update on student life programs.

The Board will hold its meeting in closed session, as is established policy.

Union Debates Iranian Situation

Military Action Called Last Resort

By KIMBERLY RUSHTON

Last Tuesday evening the Villanova Political Union sponsored a debate on the situation in Iran. The resolution read: This House favors breaking all diplomatic and economic relations with Iran.

One point of view came from a small group that referred to themselves as "humanists." They contended that it is morally wrong for the United States to impose its will forcefully on Iran. In addition, they spoke words of sympathy for people who were oppressed by a regime aided by the United States. In essence, they objected to U.S. punishment of Iran when the U.S. is indirectly responsible for the present state of the people. Some debaters called this group "un-American."

Taking the opposite view were the people who advocated "nuking" Iran. It was mentioned that the U.S. should "make Iran eat buttered sand."

They spoke harshly of Khomeni, especially of the fact that he calls Americans "gutless, fat, and lazy." They cited that great public unity advocates military reprisal as was not seen in Korea or Vietnam. People from this group were referred to as "McCarthyists" and "War Hawks" by the humanists.

The majority supported continued negotiation and anti-nuclear military reprisal if the hostages are killed. These people cited the fact that many more Americans would die in military reprisal, and that it should only be used as a last resort.

To the subject of the direct point of the resolution, the vast majority said that, in essence, all diplomatic and economic relations have already been cut off with Iran.

Many speakers compared the present situation in Iran to other crises in American history. One comparison was made to the War of 1812. This costly war, fought over the impressment of American seamen, ended with the resumption of the status quo.

Concerning Iranian students, the majority advocated letting those students conducting themselves properly stay in the U.S. Almost all condemned the anti-U.S. demonstrations by Iranian students.

Many condemned criticism of President Carter for his "inaction." One person reminded the audience that Woodrow Wilson was criticised for this same "inaction" when he persisted in trying to pass his 14 points which could have prevented World War II.

Vandalism Problem Analyzed

By JERRY DOUGHERTY

The sharp increase in campus vandalism recently disclosed does not surprise one University administrator who has viewed the condition up close.

Fr. Rice, vice-president of administration, spoke out on vandalism.

Rev. Patrick J. Rice, O.S.A., vice-president for administration, has endeavored to put a halt to the numerous acts of material destruction which have plagued Villanova in recent times. Still, he concedes that vandalism is a growing evil.

At present, Rice does not perceive much of an impact resulting from his efforts to discuss the problem with residents and their advisors, nor in his opinion do other such informal methods of persuasion offer much hope of a solution.

Stronger measures aimed at countering vandalism have had some beneficial effects, Rice believes. "The new policy of taxing people when the guilty don't own up does generage concern," he said.

"When there is severe damage and no one owns up, and the students are told that they'll be held responsible, usually someone admits responsibility not long afterwards," Rice added.

Rice considers student apathy to be a major factor contributing to the ongoing vandalism difficulties. "It's a question of not being involved, not giving a damn until they're affected by it" he said.

Widespread vandalism is not a condition unique to Villanova, Rice pointed out. He recalled a visit he made to Penn State University a few years ago.

"When the University was planning to build Stanford Hall, I remember going to Penn State with some other administrators to inspect a dorm that was being constructed there. We went to take a look at some of the other dorms. In one of them, there was a lounge which was carpeted but otherwise bare; one of the maintenance men told us that all the furniture had in the course of one year been either vandalized or stolen."

Rice laments the waste of money that results from destruction of school property. "I could think of many more productive ways that we could spend that money," he said.

Although he has been involved in combating vandalism for some time, Rice can still not see any coherent, rational motive in such behavior.

"Vandalism represents an attack against the school itself, but these people are also in a way attacking themselves. The students usually pay for the repairs, not the school," Rice noted.

Rice does not believe that the increasing incidence of property destruction should be seen as a blanket indictment of the student body.

"The people responsible for these acts are a minority — but they are active and get away with what they do. What troubles me is that the other students react with silence to these deeds," he said in

Anti-arms Effort Underway Here

By MARK STIEBER

A campus effort is currently underway to stimulate concern over the build-up of arms. The Villanova Committee for Mutual Reduction of Military Expenditures was recently organized with the aim of making the voice of the Villanova community heard.

The committee was founded near the end of last semester as The Peace and Justice Organization but it was too late in the year for people to become fully involved and motivated.

The present committee is primarily composed of faculty members and is led by Dr. Bernard F. Reilly of the history department.

"Our aim is to petition the United States Government calling for a decrease in the millions of dollars spent each year on the military budget," Dr. Reilly stated.

A petition is currently being circulated throughout the University to the faculty and will be referred to students. If calls for a 1% annual reduction in military expenditures by the governments of both the United States and the Soviet Union. The petition cites that military spending has increased steadily over the past decades and shows no sign of lessening.

As of last week approximately 110 faculty members had signed the petition. After surveying the views of the faculty, the committee hopes to present the issue to the student body for further consideration.

In a letter to their colleagues, the committee set a tentative deadline of December to formulate the University's position at which time it will be made public. "We hope to relay the petition to President Carter and any other political figures interested as well as to others who may be in doubt as to the public mood concerning this matter," Dr. Reilly stated.

The anti-arms supporters hope to effect an end to the degradation of life brought about by an obsession with the weapons build-up. The spirit of the committee and its cause is aimed at securing "lasting peace among the peoples of the world."

Decrease Military Spending

The Villanova Committee for Mutual Reduction of Military Expenditures invites Villanova students to sign the following petition. This petition has been endorsed by 110 of the faculty to date and will eventually be forwarded to the president of the United States and other public figures.

The late Pope Paul VI addressing the United Nations in New York on October 4, 1965 made a plea for "No more war; war never again." Yet in subsequent years the military budgets of both the United States and the Soviet Union have continued to increase. This diversion of the goods of the earth has already diminished the lives of parents and children, lovers and poets, farmers and teachers, planners and workers all over the world. Its continuation menaces their hopes and the fruits of their common efforts. The time has come to make a beginning of its end.

Simply for this reason the undersigned anxiously petition the government of the United States and that of the Soviet Union to initiate, in 1980, a systematic reduction of one percent a year in the real value of their annual military expenditures. We ask that they devote this yearly, progressive reduction to the works of peace and love among their own peoples and those of the world. We ask, as well, that in 1990 they plan for a yet sharper rate of reduction to the terrible arsenal of weapons under the threat of which every human being suffers.

Math Conference Held

By BILL ROCK

The Villanova campus is presently the site of the 35th Annual Conference on Applied Statistics.

The conference, co-sponsored by the mathematics department, the American Society for Quality Control and the biopharmaceutical subsection of the American Statistical Association, brings together more than 400 mathematicians from all parts of the country.

The program, running throughout December 6 and 7 in St. Mary's Hall, consists of a series of workshops presented by both academicians and industry spokesmen. The conference is aimed at those who use statistics in their work, particularly pharmaceutical corporations.

Dr. Robert Beck, chairman of the mathematics department and arrangements coordinator of the program explained, "Many business people and those from industry are attending the conference. Merck Sharp & Dohme, Smith Kline, Wyeth laboratories, and Hoffman La Roche are just some of the companies that are represented."

Speakers from many American universities are presenting sessions. Those schools include Texas A&M, Rutgers University, Harvard University, Mississippi State University, and the universities of Texas, Maryland, Colorado, and Wisconsin.

Villanova is hosting the conference for the first time. It previously had been held at Princeton University. The numerous pharmaceutical companies in the Philadelphia area was cited by Beck as a major reason in selecting Villanova as this year's site.

He continued, "This is one of the largest conferences in the United States for applied statistics. We are very proud to be serving as its host."

New Process Set For Admissions

By MARGUERITE ESMONDE

Villanova's admissions office is restructuring acceptance procedures for the class of '85 in an effort to upgrade the quality of students.

Applications will be processed through one of three categories: regular decision, early decision, or commuter.

Regular decision students will receive acceptance notices after April 1, and deposits will be due by May 1. In the past, students were notified by February 15, and deposits were required by March 15. The delayed date allows students waiting to hear from other schools to receive all acceptances before deciding. Formerly, these students would miss the deposit deadline and then be unable to decide for Villanova after hearing from other schools.

Early decisions will operate under a rolling admissions policy. Notices will be sent out immediately after acceptances, beginning November 15. Candidates for early decision must have SAT scores of at least 600 in both math and verbal tests, and be in the top 10% of their high school class.

Applicants within a 25 mile radius of Villanova will be processed as commuters, receiving notification of acceptance after January 15. Deposits for both early decision students and commuters are also due May 1.

"The later deposit date will increase our standards," commented Fr. Burke, assistant director of admissions. "We must be more selective because of the shortage of on-campus housing. However, we can take as many commuters as possible."

"We're aiming for somewhere around 1500 freshman for the fall of 1980. We're trying to keep the number down and get better quality students," Burke said.

Rev. Harry Erdlen, O.S.A., Director of Admissions, who restructured acceptance procedures at Villanova.

for the Connelly Center was undertaken, all funds had to go towards it, and he feared that same thing happening in relation to an athletic complex. He gave examples of academic projects which also needed funding and could be left out in the cold for several more years.

The other major business at the meeting was a resolution from the Social Action Committee. This motion recommended to the Administration that the University should make an increased effort to recruit and retain minority students. The motion was accompanied by a report from the Committee which showed that the percentage of minority students has declined in the last several years even though Villanova was still in keeping with Federal and State standards as an "Equal Opportunity Institution."

The motion was passed by the Senate with the hope that the Administration would also use its influence on the Villanova community as well.

Communications Lecture Highlights Business

By BILL CLARK

On Thursday November 15, at 11:30 a.m., Dr. Diane Kaplan, a member of the Organizational Development Network and a Ph.D. graduate from Temple University, gave a lecture entitled "The Business of Communication and the Communication of Business."

The main thrust of the lecture, which was sponsored by the Speech Department, dealt with the relationship between communication and organizations. Dr. Kaplan stressed that information, being a resource which can be exchanged for time, money, and power, is valuable to business. Because of this, she is hired to analyze communication networks in business and to make suggestions on how to improve their flows of information.

Dr. Kaplan started her lecture by defining the terms "communications" and "organization." She said that communication was "the process by which individuals acquire, transfer, and use information to obtain results." She stated that an organization is an interdependent network of people that are tied together because they cannot accomplish their tasks alone.

After this, she went on to explain how the two ideas were related. Because communication is so vital to organizations, different methods of communication have been developed. First, Weber developed the hierarchy system where information can flow from the chief executive down to the employees below him. This system proved stable but no information could flow between people at equal levels, such as foremen on the job. This was a clumsy system, especially in areas of research and development, where the exchange of information is vital.

Therefore, the matrix system was developed. In this, lateral flows of information are allowed. But the problem with matrices is that an employee can actually be responsible to two superiors.

Therefore, Dr. Kaplan explained, there is no absolute solution to the problem of information flows. This is a problem to major companies of today. Besides the obvious problem of maximizing their efforts by better exchange of knowledge, corporations are also trying to become more socially responsible to society. To accomplish this, there is also a need for a better flow of information to the public.

Dr. Kaplan said that this is a relatively new field in business. Because of its newness, she was not able to classify herself as to her occupation. But, she said that there is a large job market for these type of services and she encouraged anyone to go into the field of "communication analysis."

World Hunger Discussed

By SR. M. THERESA JULIA SCHUER, C.P.S.

Those who were gathered in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall on November 28 to hear Dr. Suzanne C. Toton's lecture, "World Hunger: Educating for Justice," were informed that the half-billion persons world-wide who are malnourished or undernourished are victims of political and economic systems of nations which keep these people too poor to feed themselves.

Dr. Toton, assistant professor of religious studies at Villanova and author of the forthcoming book, World Hunger: A Primer for Christian Educators, maintains that hunger is a "symptom of an even deeper problem, that of proverty." World hunger is not, in her opinion, due solely to overpopulation or over-consumption, but also to the plundering of the third-world to meet the needs of the "mother country" during the period of colonial expansion, and, by means of "trade, aid and investment," by the first world today.

A contributor to the book Beyond Survival: Bread and Justice in a Christian Perspective, put out by the National Council of Churches, Dr. Toton revealed that, "the majority of development aid to the third-world is in the form of loans and not grants." The terms of these loans are such that the economy of the country is geared to the economic and political needs of the first-world countries more than to the development of the third world, she argued.

When farmers in a poor country cannot get a decent profit for their crops because a rich country has dumped food-aid it cannot use on its market, they lose the incentive to plant large harvests, Toton said. Slowly the people starve when the food the rich nation has sent them rots or is depleted, she theorized.

What can be done to stop this trend "of selfishness, of placing property above human rights?" Dr. Toton says that it must begin in the schools. She believes that "enabling students to critically examine and evaluate the international systems of trade, aid, and investment ought to be part of the educational process." In the 1930's a group of professional educators made a strong case for doing this in the schools. The ideas of these "Social Reconstructionists" should become the educational road back to a climate of justice and dignity for all nations, Toton believes.

A Decade of Quiet Change

The seventies have been conservative, and perhaps, quiet years: what some have called an era of apathy, boredom, and post-Watergate cynicism. Mike Doonesbury sent invitations to his "fin de decade" party on little bottles of Perrier, and asked guests to dress "disco/mellow."

Yet at Villanova, a great change has taken place in these ten seemingly uneventful years. The change in expressed attitude and in the working of the University itself has been one for the better.

Through the 24 pages of the December 10, 1969 issue of the Villanovan, there were scattered at least 20 editorials and editorial letters.

The writers of the editorials spoke out in favor, for example, of a proposal that "would make Villanova one of the most progressively operated educative institutions in the country." That proposal was the University Senate.

What a new concept it was to have administrators, faculty members, and students with a voice in a University governing body.

Although today, some describe the Senate as "a large debating society," it is important to remember that most of its proposals are approved by the Board of Trustees.

Ten years ago, one Villanovan editorial spoke of a "communication gap" between students and administrators. This year, the protest on campus was one in which students and administrators walked side by side for the cause of campus safety, united by tragedy.

More than anything, the last Villanovan of the sixties was filed with the anger and pessimism caused by the Vietnam War.

Exactly ten years ago, on Dec. 7th, 1969, ten students and faculty members were standing in back of Villanova's chapel during the Sunday masses, quietly reading names of Americans dead as an anti-war protest.

Where today is printed the On-Campus feature, in 1969, were printed interviews with three juniors and a sophomore who had just been drafted: "The President's All-American Team."

The outspoken emotion of the sixties is absent from The Villanovan's of 1979. The closest we've come to reaching that level of anger has been perhaps the current crisis in Iran, which also may be the closest we have come to international conflict since Vietnam.

Because students express less anger today, does not mean that they care less, or that the university has stagnated. Just as the policy in dealing with the Iranian situation has been diplomacy; the energy for change at Villanova in recent years has been directed into discussion forums such as the University Senate. If something as unobtrusive as a bridge over the communications gap has been quietly built during the sevenities, something worthwhile has been accomplished this decade.

Communications Major Considered

A proposal to institute Communication Arts as a major will be considered at the upcoming Board of Trustees meeting to be held on Tuesday, December 11.

The Villanovan supports the passing and implementation of the proposal.

In May, 1978 the initial plan for a Communication major met with administrative approval and was described by Dr. James Cleary, vice-president for academic affairs, as workable.

Since that time the Liberal Arts Curriculum Committee has passed the proposal unanimously. The Villanovan concurs with the committee's decision and with Father John O'Malley, dean of Arts and Sciences and Dr. J. P. McGowan, chairman of the English department who are both on record as supporting a Communication major.

The media is a vital force in today's society. Technological advances in the past decade alone have provided for the dissemination of mass information. The expansion and sophistication achieved by the media requires parallel advances in the individual's knowledge of the system. Training potential media communicators for the developing trends in society is not only practical but essential.

Other schools have recognized the need for such training.

The University of Pennsylvania and Temple University have offered and continue to offer expanding programs in the field.

Villanova's plan to establish a major which will not compete with the likes of two of the largest communication schools in the area is practical. Instead the proposal would combine theoretical with practical in a basically liberal arts approach: "We are in the business of training communicators," stated Warren Richardson, head of communications. "Students will be able to pursue careers in public relations, advertising and other related fields with a strongly based liberal arts background."

The Communication proposal would suit both the present and future need of the Villanova student. Interest in the major at present is visible as 110 students are following a communications concentration program which will form the basis of the proposal for the intended major. Such interest would logically extend if the proposal passed.

In a time of projected declines in college enrollments and student turns towards business and the sciences, offering a practical yet liberal arts based major, a flexible program with adherence to the valuable, traditional liberal arts course of study, will attract future students who are much concerned with job prospects.

The core of the communication arts proposal borrows from existing staff, courses, and material. The major would thus be an economical move and would not necessarily result in increased tuition for the offering of more diversity and choice to the student.

Library Response

To the Editor:

In response to the front page article entitled, "Theft, Faculty Blamed for Library Losses," the administration of Falvey Library wishes to clarify several misconceptions.

First of all, the title of the article is misleading. The library granted the interview to discuss why patrons had difficulty locating materials that were listed in the card catalog. Our intention was not to blame faculty for the loss of the library books. The tone of the article is accusatory and the inference is that when a faculty member has a book overdue, a loss is constituted. Library administration did not say this and one can not link together faculty and theft of library materials. Library personnel will always assist any patron in an attempt to retrieve items checked out to faculty members. Discussion of fining faculty members has been limited to library administration and to Senate Library Committee, comprised of faculty and students. No such discussion as reported had taken place with Academic Vice-Presidents. One can only doubt the accuracy and thoroughness of the reporter who could not even get the names of his sources correct.

Secondly, the reporter did not adequately emphasize the problem the library is having with students reshelving books. This constitutes a greater problem than the few errors committed by library staff members who are well trained and work continuously with the Library of Congress Classification Scheme.

The article is also confusing with respect to the process of a book search. The daily circulation print-out is 24-48 hours behind. If the book is not on the print-out nor in the stacks, it is advisable to check for the item again, preferably after two or three days. If the book can not be located, library personnel should be notified and an internal search procedure will be initiated upon the submittance of a reserve request form.

Library administration is disappointed by the irresponsible manner in which the article was written.

Ms. Kathleen E. O'Connor
Circulation Librarian

Faculty Response

To the Editor:

I find it most disturbing to have faculty use of library books associated with theft, as your headline suggests. It also puzzles me that a book in use is considered lost. Are library books purchased to be read or to sit on shelves?

Faculty members as well as students face the problem of books already checked out to others. But I have always found the circulation staff very helpful in informing the borrower his overdue book is needed.

I readily confess to having overdue books in my possession — for such outrageous purposes as preparing for class, advising students on research problems, for doing my own research. The character of many scholarly books is such that they are valuable for reference, not for reading once and returning.

Like most of my colleagues, however, I realize my responsibility to return a book immediately if needed by another borrower. One should note, too, the readiness of most faculty members to lend their own books to students.

In sum, stolen or misplaced books are lost. Borrowed books are being used.

Connelly Complaint

letter to the Editor:

Once upon a time, Villanova misspent its money.

"Our" new Connelly Center has developed into a farse. Whatever happened to the original plans for the center? How many students will be able to utilize a travel agency for vacation excursions or a catering service for intimate parties? Do we really need a shopping mall on campus?

I'm not sure how many students realize the crisis with which we are being faced. As a university, we are in dire need of classroom space, study space, expanded theatre facilities, and even parking area. Money should be rechannelled to areas for improving the educational opportunities for students, and increasing faculty wages.

And what about the coordinators of the center — too many chiefs and not enough indians? Let me assure you that only the usual elite few will benefit from this ugly architectural monstrosity.

In the beginning, the idea of a center for the use of all students was a commendable idea. Too bad a small insignificant group of businesspersons and a selected group of students, not the whole student body, made what will prove to be very poor planning.

May I suggest you keep the writer away from the work "media," a plural even more fraught with singularity.

The Ho Ho's of Santa Bring—

The Woe Woe's of Finals

By BRIAN BUINEWICZ

The best way to get through finals is not to have to take them in the first place. If you have done well throughout the year, there's a chance that you might be exempted. Try explaining to the professor that it would be a waste of his and your time if you took the final. Hit him with: "We both know I can do the work, so you can save us the time of me taking and you grading my exam by letting me skip it." The worst that can happen is that he asks who you are again, he tells you you're out of what little mind you have, or he decides to give you a harder exam since you think you're so smart.

If that doesn't work, you're stuck. What do you do now? First, forget all the conventional rules you've practiced through the years — this is college. Panic, especially if you are a person who freezes on tests. It's best to get it out of the way and finish telling yourself that you have the IQ of an arrow before you take the thing. That way you'll be totally relaxed when you realize you don't know what you're doing.

Get as many old tests and finals for the course that you can. Professors usually don't change the format and questions greatly, but you know how they are so don't even trust what I'm saying. They'll probably read this and decide to create a completely new exam. For those who don't know, some teachers keep old exams in the reserve room of the library. Pester the teacher to find out as much about the exam so you know what to expect. Don't waste your time on non-essential things, like writing newspaper articles. If the text wasn't included on tests during the year, then it probably won't be on the final. And if you don't have good notes, make sure you get some any way possible (girls usually take the best notes). Now that that's out of the way, it's time to study.

Yes, study, unless you're so sure of yourself that you don't have to. Then go to the library. It's a great way to relax — meet some old friends and have some laughs (usually loud ones). Tolentine is good to study in if you know the hidden dangers. People with weak kidneys should locate the bathrooms first before they need them. Neck injuries are prominent this time of year with people falling asleep while studying in those desks. Make sure you wear something cool because it's always summer in Tolentine. Some say cramming doesn't work — that's nonsense. It's better to have a faint sense of what's going on than none at all. Don't study in groups. The only people who want to study in groups are the ones who don't know which end is up and figure you will straighten them out.

It's time. Don't take your books to the exam (unless it's open book)

Forget all the conventional rules you've practiced through the years — this is college. Panic —

WORI Gets a New Name

By WILLIAM TUCKER

The World Order Research Institute, which has been at Villanova for twelve years has officially changed its name. It is now the Common Heritage Institute. Dr. John Logue, a member of Villanova's Political Science department, has been director since it was founded in 1967 and will continue to direct the new Common Heritage Institute.

The official ceremony of name changing occured last week at St. Mary's Hall, where its office is located. Guest speakers included Ambassador Kanyanya Wapenyi of Uganda, Villanova President Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., Arthur Lall, former Indian Ambassador to the U.N. and Dr. Logue.

The purpose of the new name is to give a better description of the broadness of the Institute's work. As Dr. Logue says, "We're not just interested in world order. We're equally interested in peace and justice and in handing on a better world to future generations."

The Institute is most famous for its work involving the laws of the sea. The term "Common Heritage" was popularized by Dr. Aruid Pardo, Malta's Ambassador to the U.N., in reference to the ocean. Addressing the U.N. General Assembly, Pardo asked that the resources of the ocean "beyond present national jurisdiction" be regarded as "the common heritage of mankind."

No one has been able to exactly define the term, but according to Logue, "It's a point of view. It implies that each generation has an obligation to use its physical resources wisely and justly and to take future generations into its calculations."

Specifically, the Institute has been active in many different ways in its attempt to help solve world problems. It has published books, reports, a newspaper and monographs. It also has sponsored lectures and lunches for U.N. diplomats.

The Institute has achieved international recognition as an Nairobi, Iceland, Galway and Mexico. He makes a point to stress that "the Institute is not a one man show." He gives praise to his assistant Colleen Sullivan, a graduate of Lemoyne College. Logue also has a graduate student, Dick Lacey, and an undergraduate student, Tom Cometa, as assistants. He describes them as "indispensable."

The Institute has expanded its horizons beyond the sea. It intends to give attention to such problems as U.N. reform, world hunger and the energy crisis. In the fall, a conference on "Islam in an Interdependent World" will be held. The timing of this conference with the Iranian affair is quite ironic.

Poet Gives Honor Seminar

By LARRY WOEHRLE

What's that? A poetry class with sangria and potato chips? And it's interesting, too? How come no one told me about it? This just might be the reaction most students have when they hear of David Sager and his weekly seminar on contemporary poetry.

In recent semesters, Villanova has had the good fortune to have the services of the refreshing Sager, a successful businessman as well as poet. Espousing the belief that "college should be fun," Sager incorporates this enthusiasm into a class which covers works from Sylvia Plath and Anne Sexton to the more familiar Wallace Stevens and T.S. Eliot.

An undergraduate at Franklin and Marshall, Sager attained his master degree in English from the University of Pittsburgh and began writing poetry at the age of 26. "I've been doing it now for 40 years," he says, citing personal satisfaction as his motivation. Sager has taught at Cabrini College, the University of Baltimore and Coucher College in Towson, Md. He has had two collections of his work published, Anxiety Spoken Here and Inner Angel/Inner Demon.

A man with very definite ideas on the current state of poetry, Sager perceives the art as having a far greater contemporary following than it once had. "Poetry has always had a limited audience," he says, "but poetry does have a larger appeal in 1979 than in 1939." Sager attributes this to the greater number of poetry courses now offered that were unavailable when he was a student. This, he asserts, has made more people conscious of poetry. He also cites an abundance of knowledgeable people steadily employed on the college lecture circuit as a contributing factor.

Does Sager perceive contemporary rock artists as poets? "Absolutely," he says. "Rock musicians are poets, of course Bob Dylan, for example, writes good poetry. These are people with feelings, with sensitivity." Poets, Sager maintains, are not on a summit but are real people with real feelings.

One of the reasons for Sager's decision to come to Villanova was his acquaintance with several University faculty members. Dr. Sterling Delano, Dr. Thomas Busch, Dr. John Doody and Dr. Stanley Hart are all friends of his. Unfortunately for those students who are just beginning to hear of David Sager, this will be his last semester here — at least for now. When asked about his future plans he joked, "I'm going to get rich, retire and play tennis." He wished seriously, however, to return to his graphic arts business in Baltimore but stated that he could come back. Whether engaged as a businessman or professor, though, poetry for Sager will always be his "soul satisfaction."

Internship Proves Challenging and Rewarding

By DEIRDRE FLANAGAN

"I find my internship an opportunity to supplement my classroom learning with hands-on experience," states Jane Coyle, a Villanova senior in the School of Liberal Arts, who is presently doing an internship with the Sun Company in downtown Philadelphia.

This is the first time the Sun Co. has offered an internship, and through the guidance of June Lytel, assistant Professor of English, Coyle was able to obtain a journalism internship in the corporation.

Coyle's internship requires eight to ten hours of work per week, and is worth three college credits. Though she is not paid in cash, Coyle feels, "The experience is worth it." She finds it a great way to prepare oneself for a profession after college.

Coyle has always been interested in writing, being an occasional contributor to the Villanovan, and when her English teacher mentioned an internship opportunity, Coyle volunteered. Though a little apprehensive at first because of the "bad things she had heard about internships, Coyle has found her internship successful and, " a challenging and rewarding experience."

Coyle was surprised to find that big companies such as Sun have prospective positions in journalism. "It's an outlet, through which large companies stay in contact with each other." Coyle's job entails many things she has never done before. She writes news stories, composes picture arrangements, rewrites stories, and constructs headlines.

On occasion, she is sent on assignments. Coyle recalls one incident where her mission was to uncover the events of the "Big Oil Day" affair. After calling the various oil chains around the U.S., she discovered, "nothing happened, but the investigation was interesting."

"I want to be the best in what I do", remarked Coyle. Through her internship, she feels she is making one of the best moves to prepare herself for a professional career.

Merry Christmas

Letters To Santa

Dear Santa,

I've been a good boy all year long. Thank you for the country you gave me, even though it was a little late last Christmas. I'm having the best time of my life with it. (Do you think I could have the world soon?) I'll keep my list short. I know you're busy and everyone wants to play with my country, so I have to keep an eye on them.

I lost my book on "Kangaroo Courts — You Can Be A Judge And Executioner, Too"; could I have another one? Please renew my subscription to "Rolling Stone." They promised me my picture would be on the cover. If they have video game cartridges of "Cepture the Embassy," could I have one to play on my set? I want to be the first on my block to have one. I want a trim job by Barry Leonard; I just can't seem to do a thing with my hair, and this turban is murder. Here's my last and most important request. Please don't fail me now Santa. I want the live, double record of "Iranians in Action — A Mob Out of Control." Thanks, Santa. I know you'll come through, or I'll have the Shiite Elves take over your house and hold Mrs. Claus hostage.

Ayatollah Khomeini

Dear Santa,

It's almost that time of year again. We haven't cried, we pouted only a little, we haven't been naughty and we've been nice. We've been quiet. We've done our job. And now, for Christmas, we'd like you to give us something real to do.

We'd like someone to come to our meetings. We'd like Senators to come to our meetings. We wish everyone wouldn't laugh at us. If you're nice to us, we'll pass a recommendation calling on the Board of Trustees to make you an honorary member. We're sorry, but we don't have the power to do it ourselves.

Sincerely,
THE UNIVERSITY SENATE

Dear Captain Claus,

We regret to inform you that your intramural football team, the Reindeer (what a stupid name!), has been disqualified for use of illegal headgear. However, while we have your attention, we'd like to ask your help. As you may know, during the fall football season this office was the center of considerable controversy. We were accused of poor scheduling, poor refereeing and poor hygiene. Now look, we're only kids, too. What do they expect? Please help us during the intramural football season next year. Why do these kids take their football so seriously when our varsity coaching staff doesn't?

Yours,
THE INTRAMURAL DEPARTMENT

Christmas on Campus

By MARY ANNE BILZ

Don't be an Ebeneezer Scrooge at Villanova during Christmas time! With all the events happening around campus, you shouldn't just sit in your room. Become part of it. In fact, just strolling down a hall in one of the dorms radiates the Yuletide spirit. Festive doors and windows adorn some rooms and someone is always brave enough to play a Bing Crosby Christmas album rather than Springsteen.

So now you think you caught the spirit. What next? Well to fulfill that yearning spirit within you, you can attend the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony, one of the events on campus. The ceremony, sponsored by the Delta Kappa Nu sorority, will transform Kennedy Mall into a Christmas setting. It is taking place on December 11 at 5:00 p.m. This event will feature carols, sung by the Villanova University Singers and Glee Club. The concert band will also be present to rekindle memories of those old fashion Christmas tunes.

The Arts and Crafts Fair, held on December 4-6 in the North Lounge, was a great way to get some early Christmas shopping done. How about sending your guy or gal a stuffed animal? These will be on sale December 3-7.

The Main Chapel featured a medley of Christmas carols on December 4. The group "He Shall Be Peace," will perform there on Dec. 15, children will be the guests of Christmas parties in Dougherty on Dec. 8, 15, and 19.

The S.G.A. will be hosting a semi-formal this evening at Inn of the Four Falls. Delta Kappa Nu is also sponsoring a semi-formal December 8. Grab that person you've had a crush on for so long and party away. It's certainly an enjoyable way of "getting psyched" for the holidays.

Still another contribution towards spreading good will is "Kris Kringle," a popular tradition in the girls dorms. Each girl hangs her "stocking" on her door, (most often a gym sock) and "lo and behold" her secret Kris leaves a piece of candy or small gift in her stocking. On the last day, "Kris" reveals herself and gives the last gift.

The spirit is riding high here on campus. But don't be like stubborn Ebeneezer, who almost found out too late, what Christmas was all about. Grab what V.U. has to offer among its programs and create a little Christmas for yourself.

The spiritual aspect of the program is a scripture reading and homily given by Reverend Glessner. Following will be greetings from Dr. Jeff Hahn, Dr. Angelo Armenti, Jr., P.J. Winterhalter and Reverend John E. Deegan. Don Kraft of the R.S.A. will announce the winners of the Best Christmas Decoration Contest. To close the ceremony will be a reception held in the North Lounge in Dougherty, at 6 p.m.

May the joy of the season bless your New Year with health, prosperity, and happiness.

Let's give the New Year a royal welcome. May it start off a decade full of happiness, good health, peace.

A Good Time To Pause and Reflect

We have now reached the midpoint of the year. It has been said to be all downhill from here. As far as that is concerned, we will just have to wait and see. Now would be a good time to pause and reflect on what has just happened in the last semester.

To the person who says that the S.G.A. is a lackadaisical, do-nothing, get-nothing-accomplished-organization, this article is directed at you. We started the semester with a boom. Our organizational meeting drew over one hundred interested Villanovans who were willing to try to help solve the problems this University faces. This enthusiasm spurred development.

We reported to you then that ever-present problems, such as visitation on weekdays and social activities on campus no longer existed. This year's organization does not take credit for this but it does cite the countless hours of our predecessors who gave of themselves for each of you here today.

The S.G.A. was then faced with an immediate cause. The problems of pedestrian traffic safety and drainage problems in the train tunnel was brought to our attention again. This time the accident went too far. Led by the S.G.A., a rally was staged to protest the inaction and lack of concern of all who never took notice of the problems.

If you at any time would like to bring a problem or situation to our attention or help us to solve problems already in existence, please get in touch. We are not "second floor groupies." We are here working for you. You complain that things are wrong. You then go and complain that they cannot be changed. Problems are solved easily when people work together to solve them. Help us help you. We care about the Villanova student, and want you to care also.

Committee Update

The CATCH-19 Committee which worked last year on lowering the drinking age to 19 is rolling down a different alley these days. Presently, they are working on a Student Bill of Rights. We have sent letters to various other schools with similar curriculums and activities for any information they can submit to help us in our task. We have had replies from such schools as LaSalle, Duquesne, and Beaver College, which are all in the state of Pennsylvania. Incorporated in this survey is requests for alcohol policy information which may revise and work in conjunction with state policies. The task that the Catch-19 is undergoing is a difficult one which requires much time and much school support. We urge all those interested in the challenge of writing a Villanova Student Bill of Rights to please contact the S.G.A. office. It would be greatly appreciated.

Lobby and Opinion Poll

Lobbying and Opinion Poll Committee is currently circulating two surveys. The first of these is an effort to determine which products students, faculty, and staff would be interested in purchasing from the Connelly Center. The second survey will attempt to establish the problems, concerns, and/or needs of the entire University. This survey is at the request of the Student Governing Organizations who will use the information in a direction manner.

Activities and Services

Activities and Services Committee has accepted the Holiday Spirit. The members have worked diligently to plan this evening's Seasonal Celebration. Ticket Price has been set at fifteen dollars to cover expenses. All members of the student body are more than welcome to attend this festive occasion. A jolly good time will be had by all elves in attendance.

Christmas Spirit

Christmas is upon us, perhaps the most beautiful time of year. It is hard to conceive that the first semester of this year is over. A problem always arises at this time of year. Pressures of getting good grades on finals requires students to completely forget about the Christmas spirit. This is really a shame. It would really be nice, even with the pressures of finals, one would remember it is the Christmas season. A time for sharing, a time for giving of yourself to others. Remember Villanova celebrates Christmas too. MERRY CHRISTMAS FROM ALL OF US IN THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION.

College Bowl Tournament

During the week of January 28 through February 1, the Recreation Committee of the Villanova Union will be sponsoring a College Bowl Tournament. The tournament will be held from 11:30 to 1:30 everyday. All students are invited to compete. To qualify for the tournament, students must form a five person team, four players and one alternate. Sign-ups for the tournament will take place outside the Union Office immediately following Christmas vacation. The winners of the tournament will participate in the ACUI regionals on February 22 and 23. If there are any further questions, please contact Cathy Lombardozzi or Debbie Melfe at 527-2100, ext. 297, 298 or in the Union Office.

Moderators and judges are also needed the entire week. Moderators will be responsible for enforcing all the rules of the game in a fair and judicious manner. Judges must assist the moderators in ruling on any game procedures. They will also be responsible for ruling on the acceptability of an answer. If you are interested in being a moderator or judge any day during the week, please get in contact with the people listed above as to your availability.

Infirmary Hours

There are many services on campus which provide services for the student body. Unfortunately, many commuters and off-campus residents do not take of these services. The Infirmary is one of these facilities.

In order to be of help to the commuting members of the Villanova community, the Infirmary has extended the hours in which a Doctor will be on duty. These hours are:

Monday through Friday — beginning at 8:00 a.m.
Tuesday and Thursday — 4:00/6:00 p.m.

Also available through the Infirmary are gynecological services. Dr. Joseph Krotec, staff gynecologist will have office hours by appointment or on "walk-in" basis on:

Tuesday Evenings — 7:00-9:00 p.m.

The Infirmary is providing these additional hours to be of service to Villanova Commuters. It is hoped that Commuters will use this service provided for them.

Legal Clinic

What can off-campus residents or commuters that rent their own apartments do when they have landlord trouble? Dr. Rainone, of the Business Law Department, in conjunction with a group of law school students have come up with an answer. They are sponsoring a free legal clinic. It will be located in the S.G.A. office on the second floor of Dougherty. Bring your lease and any other papers that you may need to explain your problem. It is a free service that you should take advantage of. This service will begin in January of next semester.

A.C.S. Notes

—Don't forget that we are still accepting carpool letters. Return applications to 213 Dougherty.
—Don't forget the emergency car kit is still available in the student activities office on the second floor of Dougherty.
—Coffee and donuts will be available for commuters in the west lounge of Dougherty during finals from 10-2.
—The A.C.S. wishes you all happy holidays. See you next semester.

A.C.S. Slogan Winner

Congratulations to Tim Ermi, winner of the A.C.S. Slogan Contest. The winning slogan was: Villanova commuters: We don't take the back seat. Thanks to all who participated and congrats Tim. T-Shirts will be made available in the Spring.

RSA

End of Semester Reflections

We've reached that time of the year when classes and school work dominate everything as finals draw closer and closer. It's the time of the year when campus becomes unusually quiet as everyone makes one last attempt to salvage the semester. This is also the time of year for evaluations of the past and predictions for the future, and so in keeping with the spirit of the season, it is time for us to take a look at what the RSA has done this past semester and what it is looking forward to next semester.

The year began amid high hopes and aspirations for Villanova residents and the RSA. Good news was all around: visitation had been extended to week nights and the word was out that liquor was back. The RSA began rolling earlier than ever before as elections were held in the second week of school. Dorm councils immediately began programming and problem solving. Among the many successful RSA sponsored activities were the Halloween costume contest, Mr. Villanova, Freshmen Welcomes, wine and cheeses, dorm parties, movies, various tournaments and bus trips to New York. The RSA was also a part of the safety protest, secured additional parking for St. Mary's residents and is currently working with food services and security to improve these areas of student concern.

Unfortunately, some of the initial enthusiasm of September has worn off as of late, and it is becoming more and more difficult to program or coordinate any activity due to lack of student support. The quality and hope of the RSA for the second semester lies in you, the residents of Villanova. We need your help and support in order to get the RSA into top form in January. We have several large scale activities scheduled but we are in need of people willing to help us pull off these events: people with ideas and energy; people with complaints and problems; Villanova people.

I'd like to ask you to seriously think about the RSA in the next several weeks. If you think that you would be able to help us in any way, let us know. We can't do anything without you! Even if you aren't able to work, feel free to give us your ideas just to let us know we are not operating in a vacuum. Please remember, without your support, the RSA will die and with it the one organization created to serve your problems and needs.

LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING YOU

A Very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all!

Happy New Year

Dear Santa,

In about three months, we'll be opening the Connelly Center. All those people who have been wondering about what is inside the building will find out, and we think they'll be happy.

There is one minor problem, however. We're kinda' worried that the kids will be a little upset when they find out that the Rathskellar won't be another Kelly's. How are we going to tell them that we won't be serving liquor all the time? How are we going to tell them that we won't be serving liquor at all? How are we going to keep them from throwing empty Miller bottles through those nice, big windows? We were hoping that maybe, for Christmas, you could get us a liquor license. Or, maybe you could get these kids to stop liking beer so much. Then again, probably not.

Thank you,
THE STAFF OF THE CONNELLY CENTER

Santa,

Look, we were doing really well there for a while. Kelly's was closed, the LCB had shut down everything on campus, and those college kids up the road still wanted to suck 'em down. What more could we want? A lot.

Now we're back to serving the locals again, and we occasionally get girls from Bryn Mawr, although all they ever want to drink is Chivas. We'd like to get some of that Villanova business back. Those kids were great customers. They never tipped, but they used to get so drunk they'd drop money all over the floor. Please give us some business again. How can they fit so many people in Kelly's anyway?

Please Help,
THE CRIPPLE CREEK

Dear Santa,

Okay, we thought that college was going to be a lot different than this. The boys from high school keep writing to tell us how much fun they're having at Rutgers, like the time the girls that live next door to them drank Peppermint Schnapps until they threw up in the water fountain. Now that's college! Girls, what are girls? We remember last year, when we came here for the Blue Knee tour or whatever, they showed us Corr and told us how much fun it would be to live there, how we'd make really close friends. How can you help but make close friends when the rooms are as small as a stall in the bathroom?

Please give us some space. Please let us move to another dorm. Or let us stay here, but give us some girls. Or at least let them show Deep Throat instead of Walt Disney reruns.

Sincerely,
CORR HALL

Billy Nova

The Rose Blooms

By MICHAEL MERRICK

Twentieth Century Fox has introduced to the screen yet another in of an actress representing ir long line of movie classics ing back to the origins of tion picture itself. Surprisingly ough the film I am referring to, The Rose", is the first attempt ade by Twentieth Century Fox portraying the life of a rock 'n ll star. Bette Midler is the imary reason for the critical acim and commercial success of s new release. The stage crew e experience and her band mem- have jammed with the likes of ff Beck, Steve Miller, and the utlaws, but neither they nor the mpetent production are respon- ble for this electrifying per- nification of rock 'n roll. The credit belongs solely to Midler's ability to transcend everyday experiences into dramatic confrontations with all she knew.

The film is based in the late 1960's, at a time when our teenage predecessors were living at emotional extremes; were living against the background of an unpopular war and radically changing social and personal values. The Rose is more or less a composite portrait of many popular singers of the sixties who searched for their identity in a troubled world with the help of their music.

From the moment she appears on stage it becomes evident that Midler is a versatile actress capable of personifying several essential characteristics of the rock 'n roll performer image, ranging from the reserved, lethargic displays of mysteriousness to the unpredictable bursts of emotion present in her singing. Her producers grant her great freedom in her first motion picture, particularly in the scenes that offer her the opportunity to incorporate the rock heroine image with her own unique blend of audacity, resulting in a hilarious yet intensely emotional personality. She illustrates a quality of the sixties that many can relate to: treating the crucial decision-making

Justin Douglas and Ben Sweetwood in The Odd Couple

Enjoy the Odd Couple

By EILEEN MCCAFFREY

Are you trapped by finals, papers, and tests? Do you need some novelty in your life? A visit to the Repertory Company's production of Neil Simon's The Odd Couple would be a good place to start.

It is the comedy story of Felix Ungar's (Justin Douglas) and Oscar Madison's (Ben Sweetwood) attempt to live together after both are divorced. Oscar is sloppy and unreliable, and Felix is meticulously neat and loves to cook.

One night, Oscar invites two women from upstairs, Cecily and Gwendolyn Pigeon (Nicole Eschelbacker and Chris Essler, respectively) to dinner at their apartment so that he and Felix can forget about their wives and start a new life. When left alone with the guests, Felix pours out the story of his divorce, and all three are weeping when Oscar returns. This is one of the funniest scenes in the play.

This is the last straw for Oscar and the next day, he throws Felix out. This ranks as one of the better scenes. By this time, the two are behaving just like a married couple. For the same reasons that they could not live with their wives, they cannot live with each other. In the end, when Felix returns for his clothes, they are reconciled as friends.

The most striking aspect of the play is its sense of reality. One does not consciously perceive it as comedy or as theater, but as real events happening in front of you. The small size of the theater definitely contributed to this impression. Four rows set on an angle in a semicircle directly in front of the stage comprise the theater. The stage itself was part of a room. The windows and doors to the kitchen were real, and the furniture blended in well to create a strong sense of reality in the play. In general, one is struck by the difference between seeing a play in a large, prestigious theater or a small, unknown one. Because it is so small, Repertory Company was a unique experience in itself.

According to reviews of the original Broadway production, the first scene was one of the funniest scenes they had ever witnessed. In this production, the first scene is rather slow. Even while watching it, one feels that it could have been better. The play in general is slower than it should be. However, it is not so slow as to prevent one from enjoying it. Its' warm and human portrayal of two close friends who want to stay together but cannot, still comes across. The best actor in the play is Justin Douglas as Felix Ungar. At first, he did not look like I would picture Felix. However, that was soon forgotten, as he played his role very well. On the whole, the acting is weak. Partly because of this, the play is not as fast moving, clean and hilarious as it could be. However, it is still quite enjoyable. It is worth a visit for the experience of seeing the Repertory Company as well as the play.

Hedda- Flawed Production

By VINCENT HAUSMANN

The People's Light and Theatre Company has put on many fine productions this season, notably Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? Many talented actors and actresses are involved with the Malvern-based company, and the selection of works and level of production is consistently good.

The choice of Ibsen's classic drama, Hedda Gabler is also a good one and ideally it should provide a showcase for the talented people working with the company. While the drama has been done quite often it should be a challenge to any theatre group to sharpen or add dimension to one of Ibsen's greatest works.

The People's Light and Theatre production of Hedda Gabler is above average in many respects; however, there are some major flaws in acting and direction which prevent the staging of Ibsen's powerful drama from being labeled excellent.

The success of any production of Hedda Gabler does, to a large extent, depend on the lead role. Hedda is a difficult role for any actress to play and has been portrayed by many great actresses in recent time. Glenda Jackson's performance in the movie Hedda and Maggie Smith's performance in Ingmar Bergman's 1970 production stand out as classic portrayals of the neurotic Hedda. Alda Cortes, a veteran of many People's Light and Theatre performances, in many respects has as much ability and potential to portray the complex character as Jackson or Smith (she looks a bit like Katherine Hepburn). However, Cortesa has not realized that potential.

The [illegible] to his own Kierkegaardian direction. He has chosen to inject humor into the play where Ibsen did not intend it. Cortesa delivers much of Hedda's dialogue as if it were composed of comic one liners. Indeed many of the scenes (particularly those with Judge Brack) are meant to be funny and provide comic relief from the dark nature of the drama; however, Hedda's humor is largely grim and cynical.

Marini's direction mistakenly sets an inappropriately light tone to the drama. Cortesa follows this pre-determined tone and many of her scenes come across as if we are watching a soap opera bitch goddess. But even bitch goddesses are more passionate than this portrayal of Hedda.

Cortesa lacks the passion and intensity Hedda should have when she commands Eilert Lovborg (with whom she is in love) "to do it beautifully" and shoot himself through the temple. If Eilert were to do it beautifully Hedda's sense of emptiness, resentment, and boredom with life may be alleviated. She would also have power over a man's destiny.

When Judge Brack brings news that Lovborg, has, in fact, been shot in the bowels. Hedda's romantic illusions are shattered. Cortesa reacts to Brack's news with an almost indifferent air. Are we to believe that Hedda's inability to control a man's destiny does not affect her deeply?

Hedda has attempted to use Lovborg as a vicarious agent to satisfy her destructive impulses. What Hedda does not realize is that she should have followed her instincts and feelings. She does have the potential of being constructive. She should have responded to Lovborg's advances years ago. Lovborg makes these advances again but history repeats itself as Hedda refuses to do the unrespectable, the scandalous. Hedda is a dreadful coward, as she admits. All her actions become mere retreats, withdrawals from the "banquet of life" which, though not perfect in Ibsen's view, is at least attendable.

Lovborg was trying to work from within society before the destructive Hedda undermined the stable relationship he had with Thea. It was the latter's efforts that made his reentry into society possible. Hedda's efforts drive Lovborg to his old wanton ways insuring he will not be successful.

Hedda's touch, as she bemoans, turns all things she touches to grotesque farce but she herself has touched life with a destructive hand. She is responsible for her predicament.

While Cortesa's performance is flawed other principle players give strong performances. Thomas Teti is superb as Hedda's husband, the ineffectual Tessman. Louis Lippa turns in a brilliant performance as Judge Brack. Mark Conti's portrayal of Lovborg is, however, disappointing. He is miscast and much of his early delivery is inaudible. He, like the rest of the production, lacks an energy which could make this staging an excellent one.

Eric Shaeffer's set is superb. His drawing room is appropriate and he utilizes space well. The stairwell landing that Hedda enters on gives the audience the sense that she is the center of the drama and deserves our attention.

Shaeffer appropriately places Hedda's deceased father's picture — the General Gabler — center stage visiting him to an almost living character as indeed, he is in

Time After Time

By EILEEN McCAFFREY

Time After Time attempts to entertain everyone with a potpourri of elements including suspense, comedy, love, and philosophy, and it is surprisingly successful. However, it pays for this diversity with a weak structure that impairs its ability to communicate powerfully.

The opening scenes in H.G. Wells' home create the thrill of the future with the idea of the time machine. Suspense, mystery, and fear enter the picture when Wells decides to hunt down Jack the Ripper through time to San Francisco, 1979. In Wells' time (1893), Jack was a friend of Wells. His real name was John Leslie Stevenson. When the police came too close, he escaped in Wells' time machine. Wells' search for him becomes the central conflict. The scenes in which Jack stalks his victims involve you in chilling life and death situations. However, they form a sharp contrast to the comedy in Wells' adjustment to the twentieth century. This sequence is intended to be one laugh after another, but its incongruity with the preceding scenes and the weakness of the comedy make it a low point in the film.

Wells' relationship with Amy, an employee of a bank who tries to pick him up, initially is portrayed poorly and seems to nave little relation to the central theme. However, it becomes relevant when the Ripper threatens to kill Amy unless Wells surrenders the key to the time machine. Still, although it has a purpose, her character is too frivolous to respect. She wants to be a liberated woman with her own individual dignity. However, she lowers herself to such things as gossiping with a friend about the success of her relationship with Wells. In the climax, she fawns on Wells and throws herself on him for protection.

Originally, Wells wanted to enter the future because he believed in the inevitability of the development of a utopia on earth within a few generations, and felt he would be more comfortable in such a world. Stevenson (the Ripper) maintained that history repeats itself and men will always be equally violent and barbaric. When Wells first finds the Ripper in the twentieth century, Jack shows Wells (by flicking TV channels) that the world has become far more violent, and states, "I belong here." In London he was a freak; in 1979 "I'm a amateur." Certainly, something is wrong if Jack the Ripper type murders are not unusual in our society.

Rock and Roll Retrospective

As the decade of the 1970's draws to a close the Entertainment staff has taken upon itself the task of looking back on ten years of rock music and plucking a few gems from the rubble. The following ten albums represent our choice of the best rock and roll discs released since Jan. 1st, 1970

Each one is re-viewed and our choice defended. All of the following would make a fine addition to any collection and a no-miss Xmas gift.

Elizabeth Redmond was the winner of ten albums by coming closest to this list with her nominations

Pink Floyd

Dark Side of the Moon

By JERRY ARTH

An album which contains all excellent songs is indeed a rarity. In fact, a record that great is so rare that only one comes readily to mind — Pink Floyd's "Dark Side of the Moon."

A whole generation of music listeners has cut its teeth on the drug-rock sound of "Dark Side of the Moon," for since its release in 1973, the album has been on the charts continuously for over 288 weeks! That's over five and a half years.

Starting with its mystic light-refracting prism on the cover, and continuing inside with deceptively low-key synthesizer/special effects, the album is a slow and oddly mellow fantasy trip through a hazy, undefinable environment. David Gilmour, Pink Floyd's lead vocalist and guitar player, is especially effective when leading us through the world of the bizarre, like in "Brain Damage," where "the lunatic is on the grass," and the semantical "Us and Them." The cacaphony of various clocks ringing, chiming, and pealing on "Time," a song of impending death ("The sun is the same in a relative way, but you're older/shorter of breath and one day closer to death") rates as one of the finest special effects ever recorded. The big single from the album, "Money," is a superb attack on nouveau-riche capitalists, but not the best song. The appellation is reserved for "The Great Gig in the Sky," an instrumental number where the voice of the back-up singer, Clare Torry, is used an an instrument in a classic ode to the female orgasm.

"Dark Side of the Moon" is truly the innovative album of the 1970's. I don't feel that anything will ever surpass it as rock's greatest record, but as it is said in "Eclipse," "everything under the sun is in tune/but the sun is eclipsed by the moon."

Jethro Tull

Aqualung

By MAURICE KELLY

Prior to Aqualung, many critics seemed quite content to lump Jehtro Tull into the same genre as Captain Beefheart. Aqualung, though, was finally the album that made everybody sit up and take notice.

It is hard for one to listen to this album and just be aware of the music. The lyrics demand equal, if not more, attention. This is especially true of the title track (the words of which are the work of Ian Anderson's wife at the time). In songs such as "My God", "Locomotive Breath", and "Wondering Aloud", good as the melodies are, they only serve as frames for the lyrics. Ian Anderson's musical poetry here is at its roughest and yet most soothing. Two interesting extremes.

This is also the first Tull album to use orchestration under the direction of David Palmer. He is now a full member of Jethro Tull.

Aqualung was the watershed mark for Jethro Tull primarily in giving the band a lasting popular foothold. And they've more than pleased this listener ever since.

David Bowie

Ziggy Stardust

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

Of all the faces worn by David Bowie, the timing of Ziggy's was the most impeccable. In 1972 glitter and plastic were the rage, and Bowie's Ziggy Stardust was the epitome of glitter and plastic rock. He can deny it all he wants now but I cannot help but feel that he believed in Ziggy almost as much as his fans did.

It boggles the mind, even today, to listen to this spaceage nightmare. The fact that it is already almost eight years old is icing on the cake. The sound throughout is as crisp and clean as ice. Bowie's voice flirts with desired omnisexuality — it lilts and teases, screams and sighs. His acoustic guitar provides a rhythmic hypnotism that offsets Mick Ronson's feverish electric. Mick Woodmansey's driving drums call attention to the fact that, in places such as 'Moonage Daydream," Trevor Bolder's bass becomes another lead instrument.

The hits abound; "Suffragette City" is an all-time rock classic; Ray Davies' "It Ain't Easy" gets energetic treatment; "Ziggy Stardust" where the medium and the message become one and the same.

The glitter-children needed someone to follow in 1972 and Ziggy became their man. The sheer emotion in "Rock'n Roll Suicide," which is fittingly the last cut on the album, when Ziggy screams "You're not alone . . . gimme your hands," is a fitting tribute to what everyone who followed Ziggy loved: Rock and Roll.

Grateful Dead

American Beauty

By STEVEN COMBS

The contribution of the Grateful Dead to American music has been consistently under-rated. The laid back rhythm, gently blending vocals, and down home quality of the Dead's songs captures the soul of the blues in a prism of Americana.

American Beauty is a stand out album with hits like "Sugar Magnolia", "Friend of the Devil", and "Truckin' ".

The lifestyle and hopeless devotion of many Deadheads has somehow turned off a lot of people who dismiss the Dead as a drug induced remnant of the sixties. Yet even a casual listen dispels such preconceptions. If music can be called philosophical then American Beauty is the FM response to Plato. There emanates from every chord a sense of the joy, struggle, and perseverence in the day to day life of man.

I do not mean to argue that the Grateful Dead have any unmatched musical talent or mystic lyric poetry or even tremendous popularity. What makes this album special is texture and spirit.

A well textured song unfolds like cloth, notes woven around one another to form a total harmony of voice, rhythm, and guitar.

Spirit is what makes Bruce Springsteen an artist. Spirit turns a song into a hymn. The Grateful Dead have tapped the spirit of the common man and given it voice.

To deny the significance of the Grateful Dead is to deny the purpose of music as it was meant to be; an expression of living, soaring on wings of poetry, imagery, and harmony.

Bruce Springsteen

Born to Run

"The highway's jammed with broken heroes on last chance power drives/everybody's out on the road tonight, but there's no place left to hide"

— "Born to Run"

With these words, Bruce Springsteen sums up the underlying philosophy of the runaway smash album of 1975, "Born to Run." The contemporary "Beat" poet from Asbury Park, the only natural resource that New Jersey has to offer, expressed the yearnings of American youth succinctly with his album.

Springsteen, backed-up more than capably by the saxophone of Clarence Clemons and the "E" Street Band, captures the feeling of frustration and restraint of American youth in a stagnating, static society. With his punctured lung-like vocals and driving rhythms, Springsteen releases the pent-up emotions of these youths in songs full of fast cars and rage and sex in the back-seat. Yet he also manages to evoke a tenderness and sensuality that at first would seem impossible for him to possess.

"Thunder Road" and "10th Avenue Freeze-Out" are songs which grab the listener roughly with lines like this one from the latter, "Everybody better move over, that's all/'cause I'm running on the bad side, got my back to the wall." And the two other premiere songs on the album, "She's the One" and "Born to Run," display Springsteen's range of feeling on the subject of young love, swinging from a crooning soft voice to the band belting out the music in a controlled fury.

When "Born to Run" first appeared in 1975, Bruce Springsteen was featured on the covers of national magazines and spoken of as being the next Dylan. With the album "Born to Run," Springsteen clearly became worthy of the poet/musician throne.

Led Zepplin

9U

By STEVEN COMBS

What can I say? Led Zeppelin has become more than a band. They are a legend. The driving guitar energy, searing vocals, and unceasing percussion on Led Zeppelin IV is difficult to match even years later. The lyrics are strange, beautiful poems howled to a cold and distant moon. This is rock music finally emerging from the womb.

"Stairway to Heaven" still holds a position of honor unchallenged. No other song has ever been the blueprint for many imitations. As the melody wanders, a subtle power trembles beneath the surface. Waves of anticipation build and fall away until finally the explosion cannot be held back.

The true measure of a great album is whether there are songs that simply fill up time and space or whether each cut is savored then set aside awaiting the next. Led Zeppelin IV measures up. With songs like "Going to California" and "The Battle of Evermore," at no time do you feel that you're just sitting through a song waiting for something else. This is Led Zeppelin at their best and the result is captivating.

Yes

Fragile

By STEVEN COMBS

Fragile is a unique combination of individual musical expression and popular rock. Each member of the band explores his particular instrument in five solo efforts.

Rick Wakeman plays electric piano, grand piano, organ, electric harpsichord, and synthesizer on "Cans and Brahms."

Jon Anderson gets to overdub himself on "We have heaven" where he signs all vocals.

Bill Bruford conjures up a quick cut from the percussion called "Five percent for nothing."

Chris Squire uses the bass guitar to produce everything necessary on "the fish."

Steve Howe's guitar solo "Mood for a day" gives him a chance to show his stuff.

These cuts are interwoven with classic Yes tunes like "Roundabout" and "Long Distance runaround." The band's freedom to move effortlessly from hard nosed rock and roll to classical to jazz is stunning. This freedom comes from a mastery of both instrument and composition. Fragile is a pleasure to hear because the music is not limited in direction. Anything can happen.

Rolling Stones

Exile on Main St.

By CHRIS SLAWECKI

It is arguable that the Stones are not the greatest rock and roll band. It is also arguable that Billy Carter is a Morman Monk.

Exile is perhaps the most cohesive and consistently rocking set of discos they have ever done. Everything the Stones are is in this one. It's an album for the time capsules so that people in 2112 can hear what rock is like when it's done right.

The blues are undeniably present, even in the more upbeat numbers. The Stones have always been tongue-in-cheek about their packaging — Mick's sense of humor is as integral to the band as his unmistakable voice and harmonica. Keith, ever the Black Prince of Cool, sounds appropriately wired on backing vocals and guitar while Mick Taylor effectively performs his duties in the role of "the other guitarist." Billy Wyman edges toward the background, at least in the mix, but it doesn't mater because Chollie's always been one of the world's three best drummers.

A valid complaint about the Stones is that they leaned toward overdone funk. But there is no looseness anywhere on Exile on Main St. The overall quality is tremendous.

I guess the only way to avoid getting tangled in superlatives is to just come out and say it: The Stones can rock like few others and I know it's only rock and roll, but I like it.

The Who

Who's Next

By MICHAEL BRODE

What makes an album great? Well, in the case of this one, it must be the artists' ability to identify with its audience through remarkable music. The Who have always concerned themselves with life from a youth's perspective and "Who's Next" is the epitome of this identity. Coupled with a musical energy which is rarely found on recordings, this album represents a milestone in modern music.

"Baba O'Riley" (a.k.a. "Teenage Wasteland") is an established teen anthem for the 1970's. Side two itself is simply one of the finest sides of contemporary rock music ever pressed on vinyl. "Getting In Tune," featuring a gentle, melodic piano intro which gives way to an urgent finale, is soothing yet exciting. "Going Mobile," highlighted by Keith Moon's battering percussion rhythm, is an improvisational gem within a structured framework. "Behind Blue Eyes" is melancholy frenzy, with its sad acoustic-ballad intro building to a slashing, angry climax. And finally" "Won't Get Fooled Again," 8 minutes and 31 seconds of sheer power and passion which stands as a musical monument of teenage rebellion and expression in the 1970's.

Daltrey. Townshend. Moon. Entwistle. Extraordinary musicians. Devastating performers. "Who's Next," along with the autobiographical "Quadrophenia," showcases The Who in proper fashion: unquestionably, one of the finest, most versatile and creative rock 'n roll bands ever.

The Doors

L.A. Woman

By MICHAEL BRODE

Arguably, the Doors were the best American rock band in the history of contemporary music. This album established them as the premier band in the land in the early part of the 70's. Following up their other classic LP, "Morrison Hotel," "L.A. Woman" contains music which lives on long after the Doors' demise.

Jim Morrison, an artist whose visionary lyrics of love and death closely resembled intriguing poetry, was clearly one of rock 'n roll's most unique and distinctive personalities. His raw vocal delivery, compelling songwriting and uninhibited stage demeanor created an aura of fascination and excitement which became the Doors' trademark. "L.A. Woman" was the album that fortfied the Doors' commercial position along side their critical acceptance, as well as establishing Morrison as a virtuoso artist/composer.

The album's title track, "L.A. Woman," is a pulsating, driving number featuring Robbie Kreiger's haunting leads, which depicts the life-style of the famous City of Night. "Love Her Madly," with Ray Manzarek's infectious keyboards, is a fresh and lively classic. "Been Down So Long" and "Changeling" are both sensual and emotional with a funky-blues touch behind Morrison's scowling vocals. And "Riders On The Storm;" with its hypnotic keyboards, smooth vocals and windy overtones, represents a masterpiece of musical imagery.

Rose

moments of her life with joking indifference while freaking out emotionally over the little things in life, thus undermining her already unstable condition. This complex characterization is exemplified appropriately by Midler; she wastes no time in establishing her prowess as a central figure in the film.

Unfortunately the film suffers from a poor choice of the man playing opposite Midler as her boyfriend and confidante, Houston Dyer. Frederic Forrest is by no means a second rate actor; however, Midler's emotional intensity is not realistically absorbed into Dyer's role as a stabilizing force in Midler's life. It is true that their relationship was not designed as a completely harmonious one, but at times in scenes from their relationship there was an ingredient missing in his style that detracted from the scene's importance of the general meaning of the movie. Midler's unique approach to playing her part demands a cast that revolves around her style of acting. Had Dyer and the other characters been more than adequately portrayed, the movie could have blossomed into the first classic Midler film. Instead it must settle for a genuine attempt at conveying the short circuited attempts of many young people in America to find meaning without responsibility.

Bette Midler combines several distinct character personifications along with her own "come from behind" style of singing on such tunes as "When a Man Loves a Woman" and "Stay with Me" to create a gem of a debut motion picture performance.

Hedda

Hedda's subconscious. It also reminds us of the tremendous influence heredity has in her life.

Lighting designer Richard Keeler dims the lights in the all important scene when Hedda burns Eilert Lovborg's manuscript (his and Thea's child). The effect is harrowing as the flames in the fire reflect on Hedda's face and set her aglow. His lighting saves the scene as Director Marini has Hedda seated beside the furnace and simply acting as if she were disturbed at things. Hedda should be kneeling and reveling in orgasmic ecstacy over her contemplation of the act.

Hedda Gabler runs Wednesdays through Saturdays until December 15.

Time

Because of the diversity of its elements, the film lacks the depth and intensity that a clearer focus, better transitions, and better organization would have provided. It is not clear how the comedy and the initial scenes with Amy and Wells contribute to the central plot. Transitions in general are poor, which also contributes to the film's lack of cohesion. Wells' character is not strong or clear enough, while the Ripper's is strong and clear but one-dimensional. Still, the central plot is clear enough to follow, and the film as a whole is entertaining. Technically, it is not a well made film. However, for an evening of entertainment it is fine.

MUSICAL HIT "DANCIN'" COMING TO FORREST DEC. 18

Lois Englund, Valarie Pettiford, Valerie-Jean Miller and Cecily Douglas in a scene from Bob Fosse's "Dancin'," the smash hit musical coming to the Forrest Theatre for a limited five week engagement beginning with previews Dec. 18.

Foot Stompin Coffeehouse

Two V.U. students, Mark Piro and Maurice Kelly, will present a coffeehouse on Friday, Dec. 7th at 8:30 in west lounge Dougherty. The quality and spirit of the music will surprise anyone unfamiliar with Mark and Maurice's work.

There is something magical about the moment when a performer goes beyond simply playing a song. Mark Piro was never instructed in guitar, mandolin, and fiddle. He doesn't read music. Everything he plays, both original and popular, he learns by watching and listening or just plain creating. He has the innate ability to immerse himself so completely in his playing that both the artist and the instrument are pushed to the limits of musical expression. It is no longer a song but a happening.

Maurice Kelly delivers his vocals and guitar work with a unique and endearing style that complements Piro's jovial intensity quite well.

Often students overlook coffeehouses assuming they will be better entertained elsewhere. This will not be the case tonight.

Christmas Opera

By STEVEN COMBS

It is a tragedy of modern music that opera has been given so little chance to grow and change with musical tastes. Jesus Christ Superstar, Godspell, and Tommy had varying degrees of success but none seemed able to rid us of the motion that opera is some big-bosomed Italian

Gian-Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors is an English language operetta that combines beautiful choral harmonies with solo singing and dancing in the romantic setting of the ancient middle east. language operetta that combines beautiful choral harmonies with solo singing and dancing in the romantic setting of the ancient middle east.

The story concerns the meeting between a poor widow and her son and the kings on the road to Bethlehem. The boy, Amahl, is crippled and spends his days playing his flute and dreaming up wild stories to tell his mother. The three kings stop for the night at Amahl's home. While they are asleep Amahl's mother tries to steal some of the gifts for the Christ in order to buy food and lamp oil. She is caught but Amahl's own generosity brings about a miracle and an ending that won't leave a dry eye in the house.

Admission will be free Sunday, Dec. 16 at 8 p.m. at the First Baptist Church, 17th and Sansom Sts., Philadelphia. This will be an all professional production.

Having had the opportunity to direct a small parish version of this show a few years ago I can guarantee a night of beautiful music and colorful dancing that even a dyed-in-the-wool Aerosmith fan like myself can enjoy.

Ex-Captain Coaches Divers

By BETH WHITE

Ted Klinges dove for the Villanova Diving Team during his four years as an undergraduate. The sandy-haired coach believes that he has an advantage because he "knows what's going on here" and is young enough to relate to the problems that his divers might have because he's "been through it. I know what it's like."

Klinges derives his highest satisfaction from "seeing how well they can do. All I ask is that they work up to their potential," a surprisingly mature philosophy from such a relatively young coach.

For Klinges, coaching at Villanova is "a continuation of my education here." Although this is his first year as a coach, Klinges makes up for his lack in experience with his sincerity and eagerness. However, diving is not new to him. "It (diving) was my first love," reports Klinges. "I still enjoy it," His 13 year diving career was highlighted by his performances while at Malvern Prep. He was named as an All-State Diver for four years and All-American for two. Klinges also won the National Catholic Diving competition (which is held annually in the Villanova Field House Pool) in 1975, his senior year in high school.

Although he dove for four of the divers currently on the squad, Klinges has yet to discover a discipline problem. "They respect me as their coach." Though he is a perfectionist and accepts only the best from his divers, Klinges' friendly and honest manner have endeared the entire diving squad to him.

Mary Jarett, a junior majoring in administrative science and one of only two women divers on the team, commented that "He (Ted) is obviously interested in the team as a whole. He is definitely as good a coach as he was a diver."

Ann Levenite, the only senior on the team, adds that, "even though I dove with him for three years, it hasn't gotten in the way." He gives us good work outs and really knows what he's doing."

Junior Mark Feldner, the oldest diver on the men's team, noted that "there has been a definite improvement in everyone's diving because of Ted's coaching. He's the best coach I've ever had here."

Sophomore diver Steve Tue exonerates his coach as "one of the finest coaches I've ever met. He gets the team mentally and physically prepared for the meets and is capable of leading the team to a winning season."

The two freshmen on the team, Carl Sparano and Steve Leonard, likewise have high praise for their coach. Sparano, an engineering major, remarked that "I've had a lot of coaches, and Ted has summed up everything that the rest of my coaches have told me. He's helping me to put it all together."

Leonard, a recruit from Bishop Ireton in Alexandria, Virginia, commented that "Ted has helped me to get used to college level diving." "He feels personally responsible for how I do," adds Leonard, "and makes us keep trying till we get it right."

The combination of the coaching talents of Ted Klines and the athletic skill of his divers should prove to be a winning match for the Watercat diving squad this year.

Ice Cats Sweep Victories

By JIM FEMIA

Tom Curran, a sophomore right winger, put on an awesome display this past weekend as the Villanova Ice-Cats won a pair of league games. Over a two game span, Curran scored nine goals and had four assists for thirteen total points. When asked about his brilliant performance, Tom stated, "When you are hot, you are hot."

The Cats took control of the Drexel game right from the opening face-off and went on to beat the Dragons, 9-5. Chip Kenny had a hat-trick but linemate Curran led all scorers with two goals and three assists. Other scorers in the Drexel game were Chris Mancuso, Paul LaFond, John Lammers and Mike Kane. Villanova fans wondered what Curran would do for an encore on Saturday and what an encore they got.

After losing to Delaware at the start of the season, the Ice-Cats were ready for a revenge match. The Cats broke on top four seconds into the game on a goal by Curran, but trailed going into the locker room at the end of the first period, 2-1. Curran then stole the show in the second period scoring four goals and assisting on another as the Cats took a 6-4 lead at the end of two periods. Tom did not stop there however, as he went on to score two more goals in powering the Cats to a slim 8-7 victory over the Blue Hens.

Just for the record, Curran now has his name all over the M.A.C.H.C. record book. He holds records for most goals in a game (7), most goals in one period (4) and most points in one game (8).

Curran is not the only one of honorable mention in the Delaware game though. Goalie Tom Margiotti single-handedly stopped threat after threat from Delaware attackers. By the end of the game, Margiotti had turned away fifty shots in one of the most sensational goalie exhibitions one could witness.

The Cats are now in sole possession of first place in the M.A.C.H.C. with a 3-1 record. The Cats are 5-2 overall.

Upcoming Ice-Cats games include an important match against Penn State on Saturday in Mechanicsburg. The Cats are then off until the conclusion of the Christmas break when they take on the same Penn State team at the Radnor Rink.

Miele Cheers On

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

After seeing numerous sporting events, a person may sit back and wonder why anyone would want to go out in front of thousands of people and cheer for a team? In other words, why would anyone want to be a cheerleader?

After eliminating the high school cheerleaders, who in most cases were the ten prettiest girls in school and the so-called professional cheerleaders, those bouncing babes on national television, it came down to the conclusion that they like to cheer. Villanova is blessed with probably the best cheerleading squad in the East and Patty Miele, the team captain, is one such person who wouldn't have survived her college career without being on the sidelines.

Every May, the tryouts for the following year's team are held and by September the squad is already chosen. This one such tradition caused havoc for Miele because her freshman year she couldn't cheer. "I went to every game and was noisy in the stands but after I saw the girls on the sidelines, I knew I had to be there. It just wasn't the same for me," she explained. Well, May rolled around that year and since then, not only has Miele been happy, but all the Wildcat cheerleaders have benefitted from her presence.

What the fans see game after game doesn't just happen. The squad is a dedicated group who work as hard at what they do as the teams in which they cheer for. Everyone knows there are football camps and basketball camps, but cheerleading camps? "We come in a week before school starts and actually work nine hours a day," noted Miele. "Then during the year, we practice twice a week for football and once a week for basketball as well as an hour or so before the games."

"Proud of my Squad"

But, with all the work and time it curtails, Patty thinks it is worth it. According to her, the most important things which she has gotten from her years as a cheerleader are the friends she's made with the faculty, students and alumni. "I've learned leadership and cheerleading is alot of fun, but my friends are most important to me," the sociology major added.

Reading about Miele doesn't give you the full feeling of exactly how sincere she is. For her, cheerleading isn't a personal thing, it is a group with similar interests and talents. "When we're doing a super pyramid in front of alot of people, I'm not there for myself. We think as a squad and are proud of our accomplishments as a squad."

For this year's cheerleading group, Miele just bubbles with pride. "We are the best in the East; no one can compare to us. Of course we have a lot of guys and girls but we are good. Cheerleading is a little of everything: cheers, stunts, pyramids, dancing. As far as we're concerned, a crowd can't get bored with us, we have variety. How many groups still do the traditional cheers like 'DEFENSE' or 'LET'S GO CATS' like we do?"

Caring has alot to do with being successful. Because of her caring and dedication to the team, she was chosen captain of the squad midway through last year. As was the case, ability had nothing to do with the choice. Everyone on the team was good, Miele was just something special. "It was such an honor for me. I love Villanova and being captain made me so proud. This year, going out and doing all our cheers makes me feel so good and proud of my squad," she beamed.

Looking back four years from a senior's point of view, how much did you know about Villanova other than academics? In most cases it took a while to get your feet wet and get involved and by the time that happens, valuable college time is wasted. Miele found this problem the key to a better student involvement. "We don't have student apathy, we have bad communication," she said. "Freshmen should be told what we have to offer before they get here; then they can get involved, not just being a cheerleader but anything."

School spirit isn't a course offered in college, it usually comes with the new yearly student body. Without someone to go out and be a leader, there wouldn't be any real motivation to cheer. The school spirit in Wildcat Country is good. With more people like Patty Miele leading the way, it can only become great.

Bedesem Contract Renewed

By BETH WHITE

Dr. Ted Aceto, Director of Athletics here at Villanova, has announced the extension of Football Coach Dick Bedesem's contract for another year. "He'll be back" comments Aceto, "he's the football coach."

The extension, which was officially announced last week at the conclusion of the Wildcats' 5-6 season, was the product of a meeting between Aceto and Bedesem. The conference is held annually "to discuss the future of football at Villanova," stated Aceto. Bedesem concurs that, "When Ted (Aceto) and I talked, and he asked if I wanted to stay, I said sure. There's no question that this is what I want to do."

The five year coach also broached the topic of the varsity football program being dropped from Division I A to Division I-AA. Bedesem's explains, "What I want above everything else is for us to be competitive." He continues, "If we're a IA program, then obviously we have to do some things to improve. If we're IAA, that would involve other things."

Bedesem, a graduate of Villanova football himself (Class of 1953), explains that "I wouldn't want to be IA just for the sake of being there." In the same frame of mind as when he played on the gridiron for the Wildcats, Bedesem declares, "I want to play the best possible ball under the given circumstances."

However, the circumstances concerning football at Villanova would change drastically with a drop in divisions. The most notable differences would occur in scheduling, recruiting and alumni relations. "The schedule for the next five years is the best we've ever had," declares Aceto, "and that could all change. Also, the calibre of recruits and the number of alumni supporting athletics, especially football, at Villanova would be affected." "Villanova has traditionally had a name," adds Aceto, "both academically and athletically."

Hoopsters Hand Bonnies Defeat

By RALPH MANOPPELLO

A year of expectation was given its first real test of the season when the Bonnies of St. Bonaventure took the court against the Cats at the Palestra Wednesday night. Coming off an easy win versus Merrimack last Friday, the Main Liners went into the game confident but with just a little apprehension of how good they really are.

A talked-about change in the starting lineup became reality when Coach Massimino started freshman John Pinone at center. His first start of his young career matched him against the Bonnies freshman center Eric Stover. Having his first start didn't add any extra pressure for Big John, "I enter every game the same way, I was ready." The rest of the Cats' lineup was the same as their opener with Sparrow and Sienkiewicz as guards and Bradley and Howard as forwards.

The Cats opened the scoring with Alex Bradley hitting two free throws and Pinone canning a jumper,but the Bonnies came back with six straight to lead 6-4. That was the only lead St. Bonaventure would hold for the rest of the game.

From there on in the first half, the Cats played an aggressive type of offense, pushing the ball up court and running their patterns with relative ease. On defense, the Wildcats hit the boards and played a swarming man to man, along with an air-tight zone. Freshman forward Mike Muiquin, who had a good game off the bench, found that St. Bonaventure began to force their game once they got behind. The half ended with the Cats only holding a six point lead but they by far played the better game. Nova shot an excellent 59% from the floor and had a 17-14 advantage on the boards while Bonaventure shot a poor 33%.

The second half had the Cats show their power when they outscored the Bonnies 18-10 in the first seven minutes. Playing a patient but more physical game, the Cats worked the ball well. Again shooting well, Nova began to pull away with pinpoint outside shooting from Tom Sienkiewicz and Rory Sparrow and an inside power game from Alex Bradley and Pinone. A 16 point splurge during the final 5:51 of the game ensured the final margin, a 26 point victory.

Again the bench strength showed its importance, with Coach Massimino freely substituting and obtaining excellent results. Marty Caron did a good job off the bench and eventually finished the game at center after Pinone fouled out with over five minutes to go in the game.

For the game, the Cats shot an unbelieveable 60% from the floor. They were led by a balanced scoring attack with Bradley scoring a team high of 17, followed by Sparrow with 14, Howard and Sienkiewicz chipping in 13. Bradley also led the Cats rebounders with 13. Earl Belcher, St. Bonaventure's 6'6" All-American candidate was the game's high scorer with 22.

Wildcats Defeat Warriors In Home Opener

By BETH WHITE

The freshmen wonders of the Villanova basketball team stole the show against Merrimack College as the Wildcats handily defeated the Warriors, 117-69. Forward Mike Mulquin, a 6'7" recruit from Georgetown Prep in Rockville, Maryland, scored an amazing 20 points and led the team with 11 rebounds. Another freshman, 6'7-1/2" John Pinone, amassed 14 points and six rebounds and was the second leading scorer and third in team rebounds. Villanova's strength at the guard position was fortified by freshman Stewart Granger, who racked up ten points.

Junior tri-captain Alex Bradley and sophomore forward Aaron Howard each tallied twelve points, with Howard completing 5-5 of his field goals. Bradley pulled down six rebounds, Howard five. Senior tri-captain Rory Sparrow sank only three baskets, but did much to raise team morale.

Marty Caron, a tri-captain and the only other senior on the team, added 11 points and his usual talents inside the key, nabbing seven rebounds.

The enthusiasm of the Field House fans in the Wildcat's home season opener continues the tradition of packing the home court for what should prove to be a climb into nationally ranked status for the hoopsters.

The leading scorers for Merrimack included Mark Hartle, scoring twelve and seven rebounds; sophomore guard Bob Bouchard, also with twelve points and three rebounds; and sophomore forward Peter Boyle with six rebounds and seven points.

Commentary — Guidelines for Fans

By PATRICK FLYNN

Another basketball season begins and one more chapter in the story of the furious Villanova Field House will commence to write itself.

That old, ugly barn on the corner of Lancaster and Ithan has seen its share of beautiful moments; of upsets; of demolitions; of disgruntled opponents walking away and shaking their heads, nothing but bad memories and alibis to take home with them.

The support of fans that are spirited to the brink of insanity has been one of the key ingredients in the magic of the Field House throughout its existence, season through season, generation through hoarse generation. Watching a game from its ancient grandstand is an art in itself. So, for those of you who are new to Villanova basketball, or who feel that your expertise as a fan is wanting, here are some basic guidelines to follow tonight or any other time you find yourself lured inside the Wildcats' den:

Get your tickets as early as possible and think before you buy. Only a daredevil should attempt to sit in the first two rows downstairs. Many an innocent spectator has been dazed or mutilated by a Bob Lanier-, Reggie Robinson-, Sam Clancy-type.

Only the deaf should occupy seats in the Northwest corner near the band.

Only an idiot should sit behind Marty's Army in the lower North stands. Enthusiastic guys, sure. But that banner!

On those sold-out nights when you're the proud owner of a ticket, rave about the Field House. Call it "the most exciting building in America." Say that nothing compares to it, not Pauley Pavilion, not the ACC, not even Kelly's. Hug the bench for emphasis.

When you've been shut out of ticket-buying, become a militant. Threaten to bomb the place in order to get in. Plan to call the NCAA to report the court being too small. When all else fails, cash a check and try to buy an extra off a friend.

Regardless of the weather, if you are sitting at the North or South end of the building, bring a jacket. It'll be for waving, not for wearing.

Remember that the Ticket Office is not very generous at allocating space for you to sit. If you and your friends arrive any later than fifteen minutes before game time, bring a shoehorn to help squeeze your party into place.

Scout the visiting team. Learn pertinent facts which can be used as ammunition against them. For example, Brian Magid's Grade Point Average or Coach Tom Young's wife's first name may be just the distraction that gives the Cats that extra edge.

Compare Villanova's team this year to those of years past. Insist that they're even better than the 1971 squad that almost caught UCLA in the NCAA finals. Say that Alex Bradley is every bit as good as Howard Porter. Pray that Alex never signs early.

When Villanova is behind by eight points with just three minutes to play, blame Coach Massimino. Call him all the names that are usually reserved for the Ayatollah or the Dean of Men. Say that your grandmother could coach a team better than he can and organize a lynch mob.

When the Cats make their standard miracle comeback and win by six in overtime, turn blue in the face in praise of the coach. Refer to him as "Daddy Mass", or just plain "Rollie" as if you've known him all your life. Suddenly, he's your idol. Nominate him for the Nobel Prize.

Finally, the most important and basic rule of all is get yourself out of neutral and make sure you're part of the fun every time. Some of the best basketball in the USA will be going on just a stone's throw from where you are now. You won't want to miss it.

No excuses will be accepted. First semester finals and second semester mid-terms are not enough to prevent you from taking a couple of hours to relax. You can blow off the books for a little while. Besides, the best miracles on campus don't begin in the library . . .

SPE's Cinderella Hopes Destroyed

DTD Clinches Title

By ROBERT P. WALSH

Sigma Phi Epsilon, the "Cinderella team of '79," had their championship carriage turned into a pumpkin and then smashed by awesome Delta Tau Delta in an all-fraternity final on Tuesday at Austin Field. Powered by a big-play offense and a punishing defense, the Delts shocked Sig Ep by scoring on their first four possessions and allowing only one touchdown for a final tally of 25-6.

The two offensive stars for DTD were running back Bob Leverte and quarterback Ed Rohrbacker, who accounted for two touchdowns, but they both pointed out that the win was a team effort. The Delts' offensive line (anchored by Chris Meehan, Steve Kirk, Jack Lannon and Sam Aloi) was instrumental in the victory. "They did a great job, gave me all day to pass, and opened up the holes," stated Rohrbacker. Phil Regan also threw several key blocks to spring his running mates.

On defense, DTD shut down the Sig Ep attack for most of the game, giving up only one score on a bomb from Jim Cronin to Joe D'Orazio. Steve Kirk contributed many crucial sacks for the Delts and both Leverte and Rohrbacker had interceptions. Other DTD standouts were Bob Sprotte, Kevin Laffey and Bob Hureski.

DTD entered the championship game well prepared by Coach Ken Plasion who stressed hard work throughout the year. They wrapped up the season with an 8-1 record and a defense which has surrendered a meager 12 points. The Delts lose only one senior to graduation, Sam Aloi, and must be consdiered one of next year's preseason favorites.

Sig Ep, a talented team which was unable to get on track against DTD, deserves credit for a fine season. Coach Joe Spata explained, "We played with a lack of unity, while the Delts played well and were very organized." Sig Ep should bounce back and challenge for the title again next year.

High Hopes For Women Swimmers

By BERNICE M. PARISI

Along with the opening of the 1979-80 women's varsity swimming season last Tuesday night came expressions of high hopes from coach Jane Ackerman. Although describing their schedule as "hectic," Ackerman hopes to improve on, or at least equal, last year's season record of 11-2.

Adding greatly improved depth to experience seems to be the key to this year's season. "Depth," according to Ackerman, describes the team's strongest attribute. This, along with top-quality swimmers is expected to bring in more place finishers than previous seasons.

Headed by co-captains junior Heidi O'Neill and senior diver Ann Levanite, the team hopes to qualify a greater number of swimmers and divers to the Eastern and National Championships, held in early March. "We hope to score higher as a team," says coach Ackerman, adding the expectation of bringing home more All-Americans, hopefully doubling last year's total of four.

With respect to last year's record and the present anticipation of yet another winning season, Coach Ackerman's "high hopes" for this year's team is matched only by the enthusiasm of the team members themselves.

Women Sparkle In Division I

By SARA KELLY

On Friday night the Villanova women's basketball team overwhelmingly defeated Harvard University, 70-35. Sophomore Lisa Ortlip played an outstanding defensive game with 19 rebounds, while Lu-Ann Krothe and Kathie Beisel scored 12 points each. Mary Beth Gibson and Stephanie Vanderslice scored 10 points each to produce good play offensively.

On Sunday afternoon, the Wildcats faced Loyola University and beat them 76-50. Leading the team to victory was Lisa Ortlip, totaling 21 points, while Stephanie Vanderslice and Karen Hiznay each had 8 points.

After last year's 17-8 record, the best ever posted, the team moved up to Division I and is doing surprisingly well. Returning players from last year include Karen Hiznay, who averaged 13.7 points per game last season and Lisa Ortlip (6'4"), who averaged 13.6 points per game last year. Ortlip got off to a slow start last year but went on to explode, scoring 40 points in a single game against Bloomsburg State near the end of the season, breaking the previous record. The team's captain is senior Lisa Souder.

The team will be hosting Glassboro State Tuesday night at 7:00 in the Field House.

Swimmers Set New Marks

By KATHLEEN STICKEL

Three pool records were broken by the Villanova men's swim team when they traveled to Kings College in Wilkes-Barre this past Saturday. The Watercats defeated the Lions in nine out of the 11 events, with a score of 69-32.

The 400 medley relay team of Dan Ahern, Clayton Ertlmeier, Steve Quindlen and Bob Ackerman broke the record in the first event with a time of 3:47.6.

Bob Baltera broke the next record in the 200 yard freestyle in 146.7. In the 1000 free, Rob Cornoco finished with a time of 10:12.04 for the third broken record.

In other events, Tom Popdan won the 50 yard freestyle. Bob Santoli and Ahern placed first and second respectively in the 200 individual medley. Captain Steve Quindlen won the 200 yard butterfly and Balter won the 100 freestyle. John Horan and Bob's brother, Bruce, won the 200 backstroke and the 500 freestyle respectively.

Coach Ed Geisz has set four main goals for himself and the team. First and most important, they would like to establish a winning record. Secondly, Geisz, who has accumulated 196 wins in his 27 years of coaching here at Villanova, would like to win four more meets and enter into the 200 win category. This is something that very few coaches have accomplished. As a third target, the Wildcats would like to qualify someone for the NCAAs at Harvard in March. Their fourth ambition is to finish better than ninth out of eighteen teams at the Easterns at West Virginia University as they did last year.

The Wildcat swimmers will meet George Washington University tomorrow at 2:00 p.m. in the Field House.

Luck of the Irish Stuns Cats

Miracle Bucket Spoils Comeback

By BETH WHITE

"It was a desperation shot, "explained Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "All I could think of when I saw Tracy Jackson take the shot was . . . 'Hail Mary, Full of grace. . .' "

It takes more than a prayer to beat Villanova, but it was the "luck of the Irish" that prevailed last Tuesday, thanks to Jackson's "desperation shot" and in spite of an incredible 18-point comeback effort by the Wildcats.

The Cats, down 51-33 with 12 minutes left in the game, took advantage of ND's inability to connect on several important free throws and the loss of Irish forward Bill Hanzlik. Co-captain Hanzlik (who fouled out with 11 minutes remaining) was the force behind the Notre Dame defense and without him, the usually strong Irish defensive unit could not contain Villanova.

The Cats' aggressive second-half scoring attack was led by ten-point rallies from guards Rory Sparrow and Tom Sienkiewicz. Sienkiewicz led Villanova's scoring with 21 points, nailing eight of 13 buckets from the floor and five of six from the free throw stripe.

Other contributors to the Wildcat attack were forward Aaron Howard and centers John Pinone and Marty Caron with 12, 10 and 6, respectively. Junior Alex Bradley pulled in eight rebounds and tossed in eight points also. Pinone led the rebounders with 11, followed by Howard with 6.

But it was senior guard Rory Sparrow who stole the show, canning four field goals and two free throws in the final five minutes to twice bring the Wildcats within one of the 9 1/2-point favored Irish.

Sparrow flashed his smooth but powerful style in a pull-up jumper and then a hard-driving lay-up, pounding his way inside the left corner baseline and into the key to put Villanova on top of Notre Dame, 69-68, with just three seconds on the clock. The Irish defense was jolted, expecting instead an outside jumper, thus leaving the lane clear for the fast-dribbling Sparrow.

After a sideline strategy session, Notre Dame inbounded the pass under the Wildcat basket. Coach Digger Phelps hoped to get the ball to senior co-captain Rich Branning off a double screen, which Villanova's Coach Rollie Massimino anticipated with extra coverage on Branning inside.

Then the Irish pulled a miracle, a once-in-a-lifetime shot in a once-in-a-lifetime game.

Junior forward Tracy Jackson received the ball and, according to Jackson, "(I) had one eye on the ball and other was on the basket."
